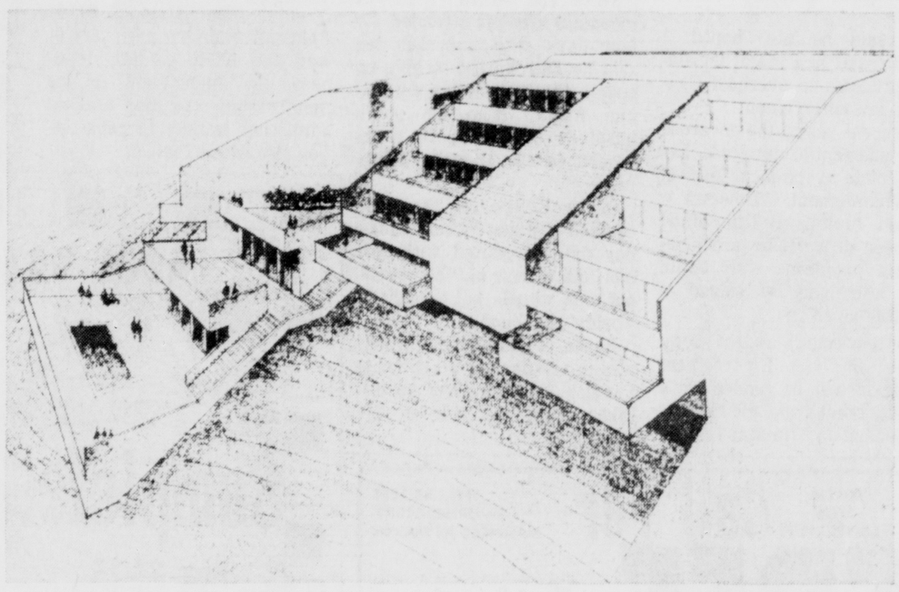
THE FAIR IS FEATURED IN TODAY'S I-J

With the 1972 Marin County Fair scheduled to open for five days beginning Thursday, today's issue of the Independent-Journal's Marin Magazine offers a special salute to that colorful community event.

Feature articles in the magazine deal with people and programs involved in the fair, from floriculture and crafts to a Dixieland jazz band that will be one of the entertainment highlights.



DEVELOPERS' PLANS — Townhouses, condominiums and apartments like these may soon rise on Marin City's long-vacant redevelopment lands in the heart of the community. Five development companies submitted proposals for the area yesterday. Mid-City Development of Washington, D.C., would build 444 apartments and condominiums (top), while plans submitted by Barry Slatt Mortgage Co. of San Francisco and Kaiser-Etna call for 180 apartments (center). Subsidized Housing Inc. of Beverly Hills proposed 462 apartments and townhouses (bottom.)

Wind Dies In Huge Fire Area

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Howling winds which earlier toyed with efforts to harness California's largest brush fire of the year subsided today, allowing a weary 2,100-man force to gain ground on the flames.

The winds, which whipped up to 40 miles an hour last night, let up so much that they presented no problem in battling the 16,500-acre fire near Ojai, northwest of Los Angeles, said Hal Sebring, U.S. Forest Service information officer.

Meanwhile, fire fighters worked to control a 3,440-acre fire near Banning in the San Bernardino National Forest and mop up at the scene of a 1,760-acre fire in Healdsburg in Northern California. A fire in the Sequoia National Forest remained out of control.

The Ojai fire-caused by illegal fireworks-had burned 350 acres of the Los Padres National Forest on the western edge of the 53,000-acre Sespe Creek sanctuary, home of the nearly-extinct California condor.

A spokesman said the fire was still miles away from the birds' nesting place and most of the birds were in Kern County about 50 miles to the northeast. Only 60 of the vulture-like birds are known to exist.

Fire fighters had managed by this morning to carve a fire line around 14 miles of the blaze's 24-mile perimeter, the spokesman said.

Cost of fighting the fire was estimated at $1.5 million, he added.

The Healdsburg blaze destroyed eight homes, 18 other structures and 10 vehicles before it was controlled Thursday night. Damage to property was estimated at $113,000.

A force of 925 men using 10 air tankers contained the San Bernardino National Forest fire Friday but it was not known when it would be controlled. The fire, which had a 15-mile perimeter, had caused no structural damage.

Yanks Blast Bridges Near China Border

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Air Force "Bridge Buster" team flew deep into North Vietnam Friday and destroyed three bridges on the Hanoi-China rail line, the U.S. command said.

The F4 Phantom jet fighter-bombers of the 8th Tactical Fighter Wing based in Thailand, dropped laser-guided "smart" bombs on the main and bypass bridges over the Hoa River 37 miles from the Chinese frontier and on the Lang Dang bypass bridge 30 miles from the border.

One Phantom flying cover for the bombing strike was hit by antiaircraft fire but the crew was rescued after ejecting safely over the Gulf of Tonkin, an Air Force spokesman said.

Air Force B52 bombers dropped a million-and-a-quarter pounds of explosives Friday and today on suspected Communist positions near the recaptured town of Que Son in an attempt to check what the U.S. command said was a major potential threat to Da Nang, 30 miles to the north.

Heavy fighting continued today around the nearby artillery base Ross which is still in Communist hands.

Col. Tran Van Nhut arrived at artillery base Baldy this morning to take command of the South Vietnamese 2nd Infantry Division and the drive on Ross. Nhut was named Friday to replace Brig. Gen. Pham Hoa Hiep, who was relieved of his command for abandoning Que Son and Ross. Nhut was one of the heroes in the siege of An Loc.

Government forces Friday recaptured the vital Que Son district town, and were pushing toward Ross three miles southeast. They reported that they had killed 100 Communists. UPI reporter Ed Bassett said the Saigon troops also had captured five Soviet-made wireguided missiles for the first time in the area.

It was the fifth time the main Cao Nung railroad bridge on the Hoa River has been destroyed and the second time U.S. planes have blown up the Lang Dang span.

"The Cao Nung is a difficult bridge to keep down," a spokesman said. "We would bomb it and they would build up the bypass. Then we would hit the bypass and they would repair the big bridge. This time we went there and hit them both at the same time. This will set Charlie (the North Vietnamese) back a while."

Other Air Force pilots have nicknamed fliers of the 8th Tactical Fighter Wing the "Bridge Busters" because of their speciality of attacking spans in Communist territory.

Radio Hanoi said two more U.S. F4 Phantom jets were shot down over North Vietnam Friday.

GOP Campaign Law Violation Is Hinted

Report Referred To Justice Department

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a report inspired by alleged bugging of Democratic national headquarters, the General Accounting Office today referred to the Justice Department "apparent and possible violations" of the new federal campaign law by President Nixon's reelection organization.

The GAO said in its report that the Committee for the Reelection of the President appeared to have violated the 1971 act in the following ways:

—The committee failed to keep detailed and exact accounting of the $25,000 contribution received by Kenneth H. Dahlberg, midwestern finance chairman for the re-election committee on April 9. The report said this constituted an apparent violation, as did the committee's failure to disclose the details of the $25,000 contribution in its June 10 report.

—The committee's failure to keep a "detailed and exact account" of how the $25,000 check and four Mexican bank checks totalling $89,000 were spent, along with the committee's failure to disclose the details of the expenditures in a June 10 report. The four checks were drawn on the Banco Internacional of Mexico City to the order of Sr. Manuel Ogarrio, a Mexico City attorney, and deposited in the same account on the same day as the Dahlberg check.

—The GAO cited the "committee's failure to keep and maintain adequate books and records on a current basis with respect to the $25,000 check and its proceeds, the proceeds of the four checks totalling $89,000 and the balance of the $350,000 in currency (which) constituted an apparent violation" of the comptroller general's rules and regulations under the law.

The report was issued after weeks of probing bank records in an effort to trace $114,000 that was allegedly channeled through the Nixon campaign fund to the Florida bank account of Bernard L. Barker, one of five men charged with breaking into Democratic National Committee headquarters on June 17.

The men, including James W. McCord Jr., then chief of security for the Nixon reelection

Nixon Prepares 'Final' Viet Troop Withdrawal

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—President Nixon today was preparing his next U.S. troop withdrawal announcement, probably his last until the Vietnam war ends.

The announcement will be made next week, possibly Monday, and is expected to fix a residue force of perhaps 25,000 men or less to remain in Vietnam until Hanoi releases U.S. prisoners of war.

Nixon previously cut the force level to 39,000 by Sept. 1.

The chief executive, exhausted but exhilarated after a triumphal Republican National Convention and a one-day cross country campaign kick-off, was making plans and pacing himself.

Settled into the relaxing surroundings of the Western White House overlooking the Pacific Ocean, he also was conferring with his chief foreign policy adviser Henry A. Kissinger on his two-day summit meeting late next week with Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka in Honolulu.

The Aug. 31-Sept. 1 talks are expected to be tough. Nixon and Tanaka will have to come to grips with Japan's friendly new relationship with China which is expected to lead to establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries in the near future.

The long simmering rift over U.S.-Japan trade relations also will be a prime topic between the two heads of state when they meet for the first time since Tanaka took the leadership reins.

The President's promised "political press conference" may be held next week before he goes to Hawaii. White House aides hinted a possible postponement until after the trip. It was expected to be held at Nixon's villa on live television.

The White House was walking a fine line on what is "political" and what is "presidential" in Nixon's activities these days.

McGovern To Base Race On Nixon's Personality

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. George S. McGovern, apparently convinced that a majority of Americans really do not like President Nixon very much, plans to make Nixon's record, personality and style his major campaign issue.

McGovern planned no public appearances this weekend in his quest for the presidency. His staff said the Democratic candidate would rest at his Washington home.

He spent a low-key day of campaigning on Capitol Hill Friday, speaking before labor leaders and officials of Rural Electric Cooperatives. He also named five women to campaign staff posts and reinterated his pledge to appoint a woman to the Supreme Court.

In McGovern's recent speeches, Nixon's name has appeared more than any other. There has been an occasional mention of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew as well.

"We are going to make Nixon the issue," McGovern said Friday. "I haven't been in power for the last 3-1-2 years when 2 million people were added to the unemployment rolls and 4 million people were added to the welfare rolls."

McGovern drew his loudest cheer from a group of supporters in organized labor when he said:

"I don't think the country can stand four more years of Richard Nixon and I know we can't stand four more years of Richard Nixon followed by what they are planning—eight years of Spiro Agnew."

Nixon, freshly renominated by the Republican party and on the way to his seventh summit meeting with a foreign head of government in less than a year, appears to be at the pinacle of his popularity.

But the McGovern camp clearly thinks the support for Nixon is superficial and can be eroded away.

In almost every speech, McGovern says Nixon has favored the rich and powerful over the common people. A favorite target is the $10 million in campaign funds which McGovern says Nixon received before the current campaign finance disclosure law went into effect.

Redevelopment Offers Pour Into Marin City

By PAT ANGLE

The prospect of Marin City redevelopment — stalled for nearly 15 years — appeared brighter yesterday as five firms submitted proposals to build apartments, townhouses and condominiums on remaining vacant residential land in the community.

"It's just like Christmas," Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of the Marin County Redevelopment Agency, exclaimed happily as the development plans poured into his office. Shepherd said yesterday's submittals were the "culmination of a year and a half of hard work."

Most of the long redevelopment delay has been caused by the California Development Co.'s failure to complete development of the community and by the agency's inability to regain control of the redevelopment land.

Cal Development, which served as the agency's only developer for more than seven years, finally released title to the unused property in January in exchange for title to the 167-acre ridgeland above Marin City. The New York development company had purchased the ridge for $441,000 in 1962, but had not received title to it until early this year.

Three companies — Inland Steel Corp. of Chicago, Mid-City Development of Washington, D.C., and Subsidized Housing Inc. of Beverly Hills presented plans to develop the entire 36 acres of residentially zoned property left in the redevelopment area.

The Barry Slatt Mortgage Co. of San Francisco, with Kaiser-Aetna, submitted proposals for nine acres, while the Larwin Corp. of Los Angeles presented two sets of plans, one for nine acres and another for four acres.

The smaller Larwin development would be done in conjunction with the Marin Urban Development Association, a community group which would own 1 per cent of the completed project under the plan.

All units propoed are market rate — rather than low cost — housing. (Despite protests from some residents that housing construction should be within the financial reach of persons now living in 300 units of public housing in Marin City, the agency has set itself against additional lgw-income dwellings in the community.)

The proposals, which would cost from $3.7 million to $10.7 million, are:

1. Inland Steel, 276 two, three and four-bedroom sale townhouses, $35,000 to $40,000 per unit, total project cost, $10.2 million.

2. Mid-City Development — 284 studio, one and two-bedroom apartments which will rent from $180 to $275 a month and 160 sale condominiums, $32,000 to $35,000 per unit, total project cost, $10.7 million.

3. Subsidized Housing — 462 units, including 237 apartments and 225 sale townhouses; size rental and sale costs of units unavailable.

4. Slatt-Kaiser Etna — 180 studio, one and two-bedroom apartments, from $225 to $320 a month, project cost $3.7 million.

5. Larwin — (nine acres), 200 one and two-bedroom apartments, $210 to $275 a month,

A Liberation Celebration

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Women marked the third annual Women's Liberation Day Friday and today's 52nd anniversary of women's suffrage with parades, fairs and awards designed to demonstrate their demand for equal rights. (Related Story, page 7.)

Three female motorcyclists and a woman drummer led a parade of about 2,000 womens' rights activists down Fifth Avenue to a rally in New York Friday. Groups parading ranged from the National Organization for Women (NOW) to the Lesbian Liberation Committee.

In California, state Sen. James R. Mills of San Diego arrived in Fresno for a visit and was unpleasantly surprised with an award he wouldn't accept.

The Democratic senator was met at the airport by a group of NOW members demonstrating against his opposition to the state legislature ratifying the equal rights amendment passed by Congress. The women tried to present him with a "Barefoot and Pregnant" award for "noncontribution to the women's rights cause."

But in Washington, Lucy Wilson Benson, national president of the League of Women Voters, said 20 of the 38 state legislatures required to ratify the amendment have approved it. "If this pattern continues," she said, "we should be celebrating enactment of the 27th Amendment in May of next year."

In Philadelphia the Women's Political Caucus passed out feminist literature at a booth in center city and also urged women to register to vote.

Chicago NOW members conducted a feminist fair at the Church of Our Savio. Other members attended a hearing of the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission which heard charges of pay discrimination by the city of Chicago.

Some of the more militant marchers in New York jeered and hooted as they proceeded down Fifth Avenue. At one point, several hundred knocked down police barricades that were set up to keep the marchers on one side of the avenue and leave the other side open to traffic.

The women carried signs calling for repeal of all abortion laws, equal pay for equal work and "less love and more respect."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Oil Accord 'Near'

BEIRUT (UPI) — Western oil companies and Persian Gulf states are closer today than ever before to an agreement on the degree of participation host countries will receive in the running of foreign oil firms, oil sources said today.

The talks between representatives of companies operating in the gulf and five producing nations began last Saturday.

The countries, Saudi Arabia, Abu Dhabi, Qatar, Kuwait and Iraq, have demanded a minimum 20 per cent share of the companies' assets.

After the latest round of talks last night, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Oil Minister and chief spokesman for the governments, told newsmen, "Several obstacles have been overcome."

Angela Aid Offer

ATLANTA (UPI) — Angela Davis has offered her support to a committee formed to aid an Atlanta black woman charged with murdering her white supervisor at an Internal Revenue Service regional center.

Miss Davis, heavily guarded, spoke at a black Atlanta church yesterday on behalf of Emily Butler.

Miss Butler is accused of shooting Betty Davis last June after the woman allegedly harrassed her. The victim died a month later.

"Emily Butler has been made a scapegoat in the truest sense of the word," said Angela Davis. "She has been charged with being a murderer. . . she is a victim."

Lightning Strikes

DONGES, France (UPI) — Lightning ignited a cargo of oil on a Greek tanker in the Donges harbor today, setting off an explosion that tore the ship in half, maritime authorities said.

They said the fire and explosion aboard the 33,403-ton tanker Princess Irene injured 28 persons and 20 others were listed as missing. The ship was reported sinking.

Workmen were unloading the ship when the lightning struck. Donges, on the Loire River just off the Brittany coast, is the site of an important French oil refinery.

As the fire continued to rage, several more explosions rocked the Princess Irene, authorities said.

Russia Criticized

CAIRO (UPI) — An influential columnist said today the Soviet Union was free to withhold offensive weapons from Egypt, but has no right to dictate policy to the government of President Anwar Sadat regarding its right to liberate Israeli-occupied lands.

Ihsan Abdel Koddous, editor of the newspaper Akhbar el Yom, also criticized Russian leaders for failing to "rise to the situation" following Egypt's expulsion of Soviet military advisers.

It was the third article in as many weeks in which Koddous, known for his close connections with Sadat, criticized Russia's Middle East policy.

Deadline Ignored

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Juan D. Peron, who ruled Argentina as a dictator from 1946 to 1955, ignored a deadline yesterday to return from exile in Spain, thus voiding his candidacy for the March presidential election.

Peron's spokesmen here said the aging former president will return by October "at the latest" and will run in the 1973 elections, despite failure to meet the deadline.

Under pre-election conditions set by President Alejandro Lanusse, commander-in-chief of the Argentine army, it was clear that Lanusse would not be a candidate.

By failing to comply with the deadline to return, Peron was automatically ineligible, although his Justicialista party nominated him as its candidate last May.

Vatican Edict

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican has again ordered priests, monks and nuns not to abandon or modify their religious garments, Vatican sources said today.

A letter from the Department for Religious Orders was sent to papal diplomats around the world asking them to ensure that the dress rules are kept, the sources said.

Priests who trade their cassocks for business suits are told to wear nothing more jazzy than dark grey, along with the stiff white Roman collar. Nuns who are allowed to wear civilian clothes must choose dress which is consistent with "poverty, simplicity and modesty," the letter said.

Satellite Failure

TOKYO (UPI)—Japan's second scientific satellite, launched last weekend, has stopped its data transmission to the ground because of a power system failure, Japanese space scientists said today.

Chess Title Probe Yields Dead Flies

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) —A two-day investigation by chemistry professors, lighting engineers and x-ray photographers produced a piece of wood and two dead flies at the hall where the world championship chess match is held.

But there were no traces of the "electronic devices and chemical substances" that the Russian camp had charged the Americans were using to upset world champion Boris Spassky's game.

After Friday's adjorned 18th game in the 24-match championship between Spassky and U.S. challenger Bobby Fischer ended in a draw, Icelandic Chess Federation President Gudmundur Thorarinsson led a parade of experts on stage to complete the investigation he called Thursday.

"Gentlemen, the search is over," said Thorarinsson after technicians had dismanteled Spassky's $470 black leather swivel chair. "There was no trace of electronic or chemical devices. I hope we can get on with the match."

X-rays had earlier revealed a "large black shadow, like the shape of a knife" in the seat of Spassky's chair, Thorarinsson said.

But when the chair was scattered in pieces on the brightly-lighted stage, the "knife" turned out to be a wooden filler board. Earlier, engineers had come up with two dead flies discovered in the playing hall's lighting system.

The 19th game in the $250,000 match gets underway at 10 a.m. PDT Sunday.

China's First U.N. Vote Blocks Bangladesh Entry

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—China used its first U.N. Security Council veto Friday to buck the other four big powers and block admission of Bangladesh to the world organization.

Chinese Ambassador Huang Hua, defeating the resolution supported by 11 other members of the 15-nation council, said Bangladesh had gained its independence as a result of aggression by India and the Soviet Union against Pakistan and it should not receive membership until complying with U.N. resolutions calling for repatriation of prisoners captured in the war.

Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union voted for the resolution. Only China voted against. The three African states in the council abstained. China, as one of the Big Five in the United Nations, has veto power.

Soviet Ambassador Viktor Issraelyan, said the veto showed the "total bankruptcy of the Chinese position." He said China, excluded from the world body for more than 20 years, now "has used the veto to block the admission of a new state in the same violation of the principle of universality."

Bangladesh, a country the size of Wisconsin, was known as East Pakistan, a province of Pakistan, prior to the two-week Indo-Pakistani war in December, 1971. India with Soviet backing, defeated Pakistan, which had been supported by China and favored by the United States.

India then supported East Pakistan's declaration of independence as the new nation of Bangladesh. With 75 million people it is the eighth most populous country in the world.

The resolution was sponsored by India, the Soviet Union, Britain and Yugoslavia.

It was presented following the defeat of a Chinese resolution providing that Bangladesh be considered for membership only after repatriation of 80,000 Pakistani military prisoners of war and 10,000 civilian detainees. An amendment to the membership resolution making admission subject to repatriation also was defeated.

6-Month Law Enforcement Study Ordered By Reagan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan has named a five-man "select" committee to conduct a comprehensive study of law enforcement problems in California.

Reagan said Friday the research was designed primarily to "identify those law enforcement problems that can be most effectively solved by state action."

He said he also hoped it would result in a major legislative program to overhaul California law enforcement.

In recent years, the governor said, substantial progress has been made at the local level of law enforcement. "However," he said, "relatively little effort has been directed toward identifying problems that could most effectively be solved at the state level."

The governor's Select Committee on Law Enforcement Problems will be funded by a $102,451 grant from the California Council on Criminal Justice. The study will begin Sept. 1 and conclude by Feb. 28, 1973.

Edwin Osborne, Ventura County counsel, will serve as the committee chairman.

Injured Climber Is Brought Down

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)—A mountain climber stranded for four days with a broken leg said he had started to give up hope before helicopters plucked him Friday from his perch hundreds of feet above rocky ground in the Cascade Mountains.

Craig Keyes, 31, said he couldn't swallow chocolate for a day until it poured with rain and told of how he "blew hell" out of a whistle but thought he wouldn't be found.

Keyes of Bellingham, Wash., was in satisfactory condition at Swedish Hospital after he was taken from the side of Mt. Index.

Schmitz Targets Media, Nixon

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Rep. John G. Schmitz, American Independent Party presidential nominee, criticized the news media Friday for failing to give him as much coverage as the Republican and Democratic nominees.

"My complaint is that we keep getting calls from our own people...saying, 'We keep reading in the paper that President Nixon is rolling over in bed and George McGovern sneezes and it's front page,'" Schmitz said.

Speaking at a news conference, the lame-duck Republican congressman from Orange County, said socialism "has never moved faster in this country as it has under the four years of Richard Nixon."

Schmitz also said the Nixon administration was endangering U.S. troops in Vietnam by making trade technology deals with the Soviet Union, which supplies North Vietnam.

He said one example was the President's agreement during the recent Moscow summit to trade computer technology with the Soviets.

The Japanese try to pay all debts and end family feuds for the New Year.

Booby Trap Bomb Kills Two In Ireland

BELFAST (UPI)—A booby-trapped automobile exploded today near a border village, killing two part-time Ulster Defense Regiment (UDR) soldiers, the army said.

Minutes later an army truck carrying 13 troopers hit a landmine as it rushed to the scene, smashing the vehicle and hurling its occupants into a ditch. Most escaped with minor injuries, an army spokesman said.

"It was a well planned ambush," said one officer "they really must have thought this one out."

At least three more deaths were discovered today, bring the death toll in the province in three years to 536.

Police found the body of a bound and gagged man in the mixed Catholic-Protestant Old Park area of Belfast. He had been shot to death.

At least two other persons were killed in a pre-dawn bomb explosion at Downatrick County Down racetrack, authorities said.

Authorities declined to speculate whether one of the racetrack victims might have been the bomber killed by his own bomb going off prematurely. They said so far only parts of a body had been found.

The army said a four-man UDR patrol spotted four men running from a car on a lonely country lane just north of Enniskillen, 72 miles southwest of Belfast, shortly after midnight.

The patrol parked 75 yards from the car and two soldiers gave cover while the other two approached it. As soon as they touched the vehicle, it exploded, killing them instantly, the spokesman said.

Almost immediately, a regular army four-ton truck traveling nearby hit a landmine in the road as it rushed to the scene.

In the past week, landmines in border towns and on border roads have killed four British soldiers. Other mines have been uncovered and defused.

The increase in attacks by gunmen and bombers near the border had been expected by army intelligence agents following capture of secret Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) documents, an army source said.

The documents, seized after the army's move last month into Londonderry's barricaded "no-go" areas, showed the IRA hoped to draw troops from heavily fortified towns and cities to open areas near the border where they would be easier targets.

Police said the victim found in Belfast's Old Park area today had been bound and gagged. Discovery of the body came shortly after troops arrested three Protestant youths Friday.

Tax Rate Goes Up, Not Down

The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported yesterday that the Mill Valley City Council had set a tax rate four cents lower than last year's rate.

At a meeting Thursday night, the council set a rate of $2.84 per $100 assessed valuation which is actually eight cents higher than last year.

The tentative 1972-1973 budget, as originally proposed by City Mgr. William H. Cunningham, carried a proposed tax rate of $2.88 per 100 assessed valuation.

Argentina's main exports are meat and grain.

Final Mill Valley Budget Approved: Up $439,000

The Mill Valley City Council has adopted a final budget of $2,577,502 for 1972-1973, up $439,371 over last fiscal year.

At its final budget session Thursday night, the council also set a tax rate of $2.84 per $100 assessed valuation, an increase of eight cents.

Increased budget expenditures included $12,000 for an additional fireman; $3,200 for fire resistant clothing for the department; $12,000 for an additional police patrolman, and $7,500 to pay the five city councilmen's salaries of $150 per month.

The biggest budget increase went to the planning department, with about $24,000 added to its account. The council budgeted $15,000 in partial pay for a private planning consultant to prepare a master plan of the entire city and $9,000 to hire an assistant planner. The assistant planner will relieve Planning Director Tom W. Newton of some day-to-day responsibilities.

The council also budgeted $8,500 for a standby generator for city hall in case of a power shortage and $15,000 for the parks and recreation department to finance new fee-collecting recreation programs.

Also budgeted was $44,500 to pay interest and principal on $450,000 worth of sewer bonds sold in 1971 and $8,250 to pay interest and principal on $275,000 worth of fire house bonds to be sold next year.

DUMP TRUCK TIPS, SNARLS TRAFFIC

A dump truck lies on its side on the southbound right shoulder of Highway 101 north of Greenbrae while workmen try to right it. The accident, which slowed traffic for two hours, occurred about 1 p.m. yesterday as the truck was being filled with a load of rock, according to the California Highway Patrol. The incident in which apparently no one was hurt, was one of a series of misaps — including a four-car accident at 1:20 p.m. on the Waldo Grade northbound — that snarled already heavy Friday afternoon highway traffic.

No Quorum For Meeting On Hub Tax

A special meeting of the San Anselmo School District board, called last night to consider a 17-cent hike in the district's tax rate, failed to draw a quorum, Supt. Frank R. Elliott reported today.

Elliott had called the meeting after new figures from the Marin County Schools Office showed the district's tax rate for 1972-73 to be $3.62 per $100 of assessed valuation — a 27-cent hike over the tax rate he had projected last month.

Elliott said that the district's current levy of $3.45 per $100 of assessed valuation will have to be raised to finance an adopted budget of $2,278,046 for 1972-73, up about $200,000 from last fiscal year. The new superintendent said that earlier predictiaon of a 10-cent cut in the tax rate resulted from misinformation between incoming and outgoing administrations.

He said the board again will consider the tax rate at 8 p.m. Sept. 14 in Red Hill School. Trustees Franklin C. Latcham and John Hulpke were absent last night.

Elliott said that about 50 people attended last night's meeting, but that "there wasn't much dispute" regarding the new tax rate figures.

The superintendent also told concerned parents from Sleepy Hollow that he would explore the possibility of providing bus service for third and fourth graders. The service had been cut from the 1972-73 budget, he said.

Petaluma Youth Killed By Car

project cost $5 million; (four acres), 100 one and two-bedroom apartments, $210 to $275 a month, $2.8 million cost.

Douglas C. Myers, a San Jose consultant retained by the agency to handle its real estate matters, said selection of one or more of the development firms will be based on architectural excellence and the developers ability to provide training, jobs and investment opportunities for community residents.

The companies all have submitted plans for community involvement in the various projects proposed.

All have indicated they will meet federal standards for recruiting minority subcontractors and employees and provide job training for minority workers.

In addition, Larwin has promised to give the locally-based urban development association a 1 per cent interest in the project and provide MUDA with a role in management and operation of the completed development.

Mid-City Development would refinance the 56-unit Oak Knoll Apartments in Marin City and turn it over to a community group, which is yet to be formed, which would then own, operate and run it, at no cost to the group.

Oak Knoll is currently in default on mortgage payments and has been taken over by the Federal Housing Administration.

Mid-City also would develop — on an interim basis — the Tamalpais High School District's now vacant 30-acre property in the redevelopment project into a recreational area until the district decides what it wants to do with the land which it purchased from the agency for $60,000.

Between now and Sept. 7, when the redevelopment agency board meets to consider the development proposals, the plans will be reviewed by the agency staff and project area committee, a group of Marin City residents chosen to advise in redevelopment matters. The proposals also will be presented to the Marin County Planning Department for comments and recommendations.

Reports from the staff, area committee and planning department will be presented to the agency board Sept. 7.

Once the agency board selects the developer or developers it wants, the chosen proposals will have to be approved by the county planning commission. The next step would be contracts between the agency and the developers. Construction of the first units then would begin next spring and be completed by September 1973.

Development of remaining commercial areas in the redevelopment project will come later, after the housing has been completed and new residents of Marin City provide a large enough market to stimulate commercial growth.

Sonoma Jail Prisoners End Strike

A week-long hunger strike by 50 inmates at the Sonoma County Jail ended yesterday afternoon after the prisoners met with county jail officials.

A dinner of salmon patties, potato salad and fruit cocktail ended the strike which had started Monday.

The inmates had refused food to protest the lack of religious services, inadequate telephone privileges and the lack of access to the public defender.

Jail officials reported the strike ended at 1 p.m., but would not reveal the details of the negotiations.

Additional meetings between inmates and officials are scheduled Friday.

Marin Firm Bids Low For Roadwork

committee, carried electronic eavesdropping equipment and cameras.

Under the federal election reform law, disclosure must be made of major contributions and expenditures after April 7, the day the law took effect.

The GAO is empowered to refer its finding to the Justice Department for prosecution. The criminal penalty for each violation is a fine of up to $1,000 or one year in jail for any campaign committee officially involved.

Spokesmen for the Committee to Re-Elect the President have said the $114,000 in question was part of $10.2 million collected before April 7 and listed as "cash on hand" even though it reached the committee after the law's effective date.

Dwayne Andreas, a Minneapolis businessman and one of the biggest financial backers of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's unsuccessful bid for the Democratic presidential nomination, was identified as the source of the $25,000 check that wound up in Barker's account.

Dahlberg has said Andreas made the contribution on April 5 —two days before the law went into effect. He said he picked it up from a Florida hotel depository April 9, converted it into a cashier's check and gave it to Maurice H. Stans, Nixon's chief political fund-raiser, on April 11 in Washington.

The GAO acted shortly after Stans issued a statement denying that he had sought to block the report, although he acknowledged that he had met with GAO officials in Miami Beach last Tuesday, the day the report was originally scheduled to be issued.

The report was referred to the Justice Department by Acting Comptroller General Robert F. Keller and signed by Phillip S. Hughes, director of the Office of Federal Elections.

She was married in 1913 to John W. Cavanagh Sr. and assisted him in operating the former Cavanagh Lumber Co. She lived at 20 Raymond Heights, Petaluma.

She also is survived by four sisters, Zita Ludeman of Petaluma, Hadyn Sartori of Merced, Loretta Cox and Letitia Sartori of San Francisco; two grandchildren and a great-granddaughter.

Agnew Rips McGovern On Amnesty

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) —Vice President Spiro T. Agnew told the national Veterans of Foreign Wars convention Friday that Sen. George S. McGovern's proposal of general amnesty for draft dogers would "tear the country apart."

The vice president told cheering VFW delegates President Nixon opposes any general, unconditional amnesty without penalty for those who evaded the draft during the Vietnam War.

Agnew was loudly applauded 16 times during his appearance. McGovern, who addressed the same convention Thursday, was appluaded at the start and end of his speech but there was silence in between.

A general amnesty, Agnew said, could undermine the nation's draft laws, which may be vital in the future defense of the United States.

He said he disagreed with McGovern's view "that the issuance of a general amnesty would bring the country together."

"It seems to me that this kind of amnesty would tear the courty apart," he said. "It would anger, and I believe rightly so, the millions of Americans who have served honorably in our armed forces and the tens of millions whose sons and husbands and other relatives have been or now are in uniform."

Shriver Visits The GOP Headquarters

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Startled workers in President Nixon's re-election campaign headquarters didn't think they could win over Friday evening's unexpected visitor, but they tried.

They offered him some campaign literature, but he wouldn't accept it. But he picked up a balloon with Nixon's picture on it and bounced it like a volleyball.

The surprise guest—Democratic vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver—told the GOP workers the balloon was "mighty official looking."

"Good luck in the election," Shriver told the Republicans. "Because you're going to need it."

Several minutes after Shriver left the GOP headquarters, his aides discovered he had left notes from a speech in the office and returned for them.

Republicans at first refused to surrender them, but when a policeman was summoned, the notes were handed over.

Two Ohio union leaders claimed they were snubbed by Shriver. Frank King, head of the Ohio AFL-CIO and who gained a sort of fame at the Democratic convention by repeatedly passing votes, and James Isfelice, president of District 54 of the International Association of Machinists, waited two hours in a downtown hotel for a meeting they said had been scheduled with Shriver. No meeting took place.

Isfelice said McGovern and Shriver "had a chance for a wedding and they blew it," apparently referring to possible union support of the ticket.

Shriver's social call on the Republicans came while campaigning Friday in Cleveland and nearby Painesville and Euclid.

Between stops, Shriver said he and presidential candidate George McGovern faced an uphill battle against President Nixon in November.

"If the election was tomorrow, we would lose," Shriver said. "But because this is the start of the campaign, we have a good chance, a fighting chance, and I think we will win in November."

At the Lake County Fair, Shriver said, "If George and I get into the White House, we won't be vetoing a bill that would aid education and create jobs," in reference to Nixon's recent veto of an education bill the President called inflationary.

San Rafael Man Critical After Bridge Collision

A San Rafael man was reported in critical condition today in Marin Genral Hospital following a two-car collision on the Golden Gate Bridge at 7:45 p.m. yesterday.

Edgar J. Thibodeau, 46, of 136 Peacock Drive, was admitted to the intensive care unit with possible head, chest and internal injuries.

Also injured in the accident were passengers in the second car, Doris Engle, 40, of 348 Via Hidalgo, Greenbrae, reported in fair condition with hip, leg and ankle injuries, and Anna Liesener, 60, of the same address, reported in satisfactory condition with multiple abrasions and contusions.

According to the California Highway Patrol, a car driven by Thibodeau traveling northbound on the Golden Gate Bridge swerved into southbound traffic and was struck by a car driven bq Adolf Richard Alfred Engel of 284 Via Hidalgo, Greenbrae.

Mindszenty At Reunion In Brussels

BRUSSELS (UPI)—Cardinal Jozsef Mindszenty, 10 months out of exile, held a tearful and jubilant reunion with hundreds of Hungarian refugees today at the start of a weekend celebration for the 1,000th anniversary of St. Stephen.

Mindzenty, who ended 15 years of exile in the U.S. Embassy in Budapest at Pope Pauls VI's personal request 10 months ago, met briefly in the airport chapel with Hungarians now living in Western Europe. He joined in singing the Hungarian anthem.

"I would like to take the opportunity to express my gratitude and appreciation for all the help and support to the Hungarian people following two world wars," the cardinal said. A crowd of about 300, including some girls dressed in Hungarian costume, burst into applause when Mindszenty stepped off the plane on a flight from Vienna. It is only the third time Mindszenty has left the Pazmaneum in Vienna since he went there last October.

Drug Rings May Be Resumed

GARDEN CITY, N.Y.(UPI)— A federal source says that New York's organized crime families are thinking about resuming operations in international drug trafficking partly as a "service to the country," Newsday reported today in a copyrighted article.

The article by reporter Tom Renner quoted the unidentified source as saying the proposal came up at a meeting of "New York Cosa Nostra leaders" on Staten Island Aug. 12.

Mob leaders have been pressured by young Turks in their organizations to re-enter the drug market they dropped out of during the 1960s due to strict enforcement of federal narcotics laws that resulted in the jailing of reputed organized crime leader Vito Genovese, the article said.

The Elderly And Creative Leisure

Should Begin Preparation In 3rd Grade

By MELVIN MADDOCKS
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

In industrial society, sociologist Max Kaplan once observed, the masses toiled so the elite could play. In postindustrial society, he predicted, the elite will toil so the masses can play. The day will come, he foresees, when a man will go to the bank and brrow $10,000 — and 5,000 hours. The uses he makes of those future hours may be defined by the goals evolved for "creative" retirement today.

Obviously, creative retirement must constitute more than the frenetic riding of hobby-horses or the compulsive extension of work habits no longer required. Before leisure can be "creative," the values of leisure must be introduced into a society that has previously operated under a work ethic. And the values of maturity must somehow be introduced into a society that virtually worships youth. Until a leisure ethic is developed, the dignity of the "nonactive" American will perilously depend on insincere Golden Years rhetoric.

"From the time they're infants, we prepare people for working," Fritz Crumb, director of the Boston Center for Older Americans, comments. "We don't prepare people for not working." Yet the proportions have almost been reversed. In 1900 one had the 60-hour work week. In the 1970s one has the 60-hour leisure week.

Even Winston Churchill admitted: "It's hard to find new interests at the end of one's life." Creative retirement depends upon creative preparation for retirement, which should begin, Crumb says seriously, around the third grade. But is anybody qualified to teach it?

THERE ARE books, periodicals, television programs for children and young people. The special interests of those we call "senior citizens" are largely ignored. Why do books have so little to say about old people? Andre Gide once wrote, "I believe it is because the old can no longer write them and because when one is young one does not bother with the old. An elderly man — he no longer interests anyone at all."

In the study, "The Coming of Age," Simone de Beauvoir goes so far as to suggest that the prevailing attitude toward the "nonactive" is: "They have neither the same needs nor the same feelings as other men."

Amid all these prejudices, these false beliefs, how can retirement be made creative?

It becomes an individual, an almost aristocratic, act to insist upon the values of leisure as well as activity, the values of tradition as well as novelty. And it is at this point that people like Florida Scott-Maxwell speak with the voice of the pioneer.

"We have reached," she writes for all the "nonactive," "the place beyond resignation." Then she declares the birthright of maturity: To engage in the "rich and searing process of gathering a center."

Mrs. Scott-Maxwell was born in Florida and educated, for the most part, privately. At 16 she went on the stage. At 20 she left the theater to become a short-story writer and playwright. She married a Scotsman and raised a family in her husband's country while continuing to write and to work for woman's suffrage.

At 50 she began another career, studying under Jung to become an analytical psychologist and practicing well into her 70s.

At 82 she sat down to examine out loud "creative" retirement. "A notebook," she decided, "might be the very thing for all of the old who wave away crossword puzzles, painting, petit point, and knitting." The result in her case is a remarkable journal: "The Measure of My Days."

Mrs. Scott-Maxwell has brilliantly distinguished the opportunity from the predicament of retirement. "Age," she writes, "is more than a disability. It is an intense and varied experience, almost beyond our capacity at times, but something to be carried high."

RETIRED, waiting for her bus on a street corner, this elderly woman seems to be pondering her future. Creative retirement depends on creative preparation for retirement from the person's earliest years, one authority believes.

SHE SEES retirement as a kind of ultimate confrontation with one's life,with one's humanity. The retired, she points out, "are not protected from life by engagements, or pleasures, or duties. We cannot get away from it." The one recourse, she concludes, is to "enjoy the simple and immediate."

She writes of her own retirement: "I thought it was a quiet time. My 70s were interesting, and fairly serene, but my 80s are passionate. I grow more intense as I age."

The plot, the scenery, the supporting cast of the "active" life-drama slowly disappear, and one gets down to essences: "I feel most real when alone, even most alive. . .The last years seemed a culmination and by concentrating on them one becomes more truly oneself."

Is this sort of retirement easy? "The ordea of being true to your own inner way," Mrs. Scott-Maxwell answers, "must stand high in the list of ordeals. . .It is not easy to be sure that being yourself is worth the trouble, but we do know it is our sacred duty."

Here is the gift life presents the "nonactive": "A degree of consciousness which lies outside activity, and which when young we are too busy to experience. . .It takes great courage to open our minds and hearts, yet it is required of us to our last breath."

Whatever one's specific interests — one hardly need be an intellectual like Mrs. Scott-Maxwell — her journal and other pioneering explorations like it show the way to a definition of living that stands in promising contrast to the dead ends of certain other 20th-Century patterns. Activity will, and should, go on. Helped by placement services like the Boston Civic Center and Clearing House, one volunteer in her 80s found work at the information desk of that most futuristic of institutions, the Museum of Science. Another (who happens to be blind) teaches arts and crafts to her contemporaries — and her juniors. Still other volunteers spearhead waste-cycling drives with the persistence, say their supervisors, of now — if not future — people.

THE "ACTIVITIES" are numberless. But leiure remains a separate art. As a life-style, "creative" retirement emphasizes the following values in a kind of ascending order:

—The value of doing nothing. Riva Poor, the protagonist of the four-day work week, insists upon the legitimacyof "goofing off."·"We've made perimeters out of jobs and family roles," she argues. "Everybody says, 'Oh boy! Don't take that away! People will collapse.' Maybe they're wrong. Maybe we should leave a lot of nice empty white space at the center and see what happens. People may be better than we think."

Another exponent of doing nothing sums up. "I've learned the difference between being passive and being receptive."

—The value of play. We are becoming slowly aware that what gets self-importantly called "useful activity" can also be interpreted as the games-people-play. Rathar than making us cynical, this insight should enrich our concept of living. The sanction for play should raise the status of both children and the retired, rescuing them from the false categories of the "useless" or the "parasitic" and making them equals with those other game-players whose games happen to be their jobs.

—The value of humor. Here again children and the "creatively" retired form a natural alliance against the pretensions of the madding crowd between them. "I wish a notebook could laugh," Mrs. Scott-Maxwell writes. Detachment makes the retired into qualified critics on the follies of the very busy. And how the world needs that criticism.

"The nice thing about being older," one retired woman said, "is the view. It's like looking down from an airplane — sort of beautiful, sort of funny, watching all the ants."

—THE VALUE of the past. "Feeling at variance with the limes must be the essence of age," Mrs. Scott-Maxwell decided. But this independence can become not mere alienation but a source of restraint to a society where fads are runaway, where novelty and change are absurdly overrated as intrinsic good.

—The value of understanding. Jung wondered if the first half of life shouldn't be devoted to doing, the last half to self-awareness of exactly what one had done and why. Certainly ambition, for instance, becomes a more and more ridiculous quality as a person gets older while curiosity, on the other hand, becomes, if anything, more appropriate.

The first achievement of "creative" retirement then may be to invent an alternative life-style, for the retired, of course, but for others as well. In designing a value-system that gives a continuity to life (unlike the work ethic), today's "creatively" retired will cease to be a despised rear guard. In fact, they will have every chance to become the vanguard of tomorrow's world.

Five Opera Previews To Be Given

The Junior League of San Francisco, including the Marin membership, will sponsor five opera previews as a public service this fall.

The previews are given in cooperation with the San Francisco Opera Association.

The first will be Bellini's "Norma," on Sept. 14 at 11 a.m. at the Curran Theater. Dr. Jan Popper will be the speaker.

Other previews: "Der Ring der Nibelungen," Sept. 25, 11 a.m., Geary Theater; "Tosca," Oct. 12, 11 a.m., Miyako Hotel; "The Vist of the Old Lady," Oct. 18, noon, Fairmont Hotel ballroom; and "L'Africaine," 11 a.m. Nov. 2, Miyako Hotel.

Dr. Walter Schaefer, director of the Stuttgart State Opera, will present the second preview.

Women Economic Status 'Improved'

Efforts to improve the social and economic status of minority race workers have led to better jobs and higher earnings for many minority women, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Between 1960 and 1971 the proportion of all minority women workers employed in professional and technical jobs rose from 6 to 11 per cent, and the proportion in clerical jobs rose from 9 to 22 per cent.

Over the same 11-year period, the proportion in private household work decreased from 35 to 17 per cent. The median wage or salary income of women of minority races employed full time year around rose from $2,372 in 1960 to $4,674 in 1970.

GENERATION RAP

Marijuana Is A Kind Of Grass, So You Can Be Allergic To It

DEAR RAP:

Is there such a thing as being allergic to marijuana? And is it true that it can cause skin trouble? Like acne?

I have hay fever, especially around lawn cuttings and certain flowers. My eyes water and turn red and I can't get my breath, but this usually simmers down to sneezing by late summer.

I started smoking pot recently. And all my hay fever symptoms are back. Whenever I'm around people who smell of it, my eyes pour water, unless I load up on hay fever pills and then I don't know whether it's the pot or the pills that make me sort of float.

Also I've noticed a lot of people who blow weed have bad acne. A friend of mine (who doesn't smoke) says marijuana is bad for the skin. I can't ask a doctor about this, so would you please find out for me? — SNEEZY

DEAR SNEEZY:

My doctor says marijuana is a kind of grass; many grasses initiate hay fever attacks; therefore it's quite possible you can be allergic to pot.

As for skin problems, H. L. Herschensohn, M.D., a well known medical writer, says, "Marijuana has a bad effect on the sebaceous glands so that pimples, water blisters, blackheads, inflamed nodules and infected cysts occur. . .It is also known to cause seborrhea, a greasy scale disease of the skin, and dandruff. When these symptoms occur together with swelling of the eyelids, marijuana is a most likely cause. In some cases, there is a swelling on top of the hands between the knuckles and the wrist, another telltale sign of pot use. . .A doctor can often tell just by the appearance of the skin whether or not his patient is abusing any of the mind-altering drugs."

Acne was a teenage problem long before pot became one, but doctors are beginning to note a correlation between heavy users and stubborn blemishes, Dr. Herschensohn adds in his newspaper column, "Medical Memos." — HELEN

RAP!

Here's my version of TELEPHONE CALLERS I CAN DO WITHOUT:

These people give me telephobia:

. . .The acquaintance who complains, "Where WERE you? I've been calling all day!" (As if you must answer to her for not waiting breathlessly by the phone.))

. . .The guy who says, "Hey, I didn't wake you up, did I?" (At 2 a.m. yet?)

. . .The joker ("This is your electric company. Is your refrigerator running? Well, lasso it!"), the "breather," the "whistle blower." (ouch, my eardrum!) Usually this type gets you out of the bathtub.

. . .Telephone saleswomen who pretend their're doing legit surveys, or tell you that you've won a big prize, like $5.00 down on a cemetery lot.

. . .Politcal campaigners who hang up fast when you say you're only 17.

. . .The dud who asks "What are you doing Sunday?" and you quick-think "I'll be out of town," and he says, "Too bad, I was going to bring Gil who wants to meet you." (Gil happens to be your unreachable dream.)

. . . .The gabber who runs on for an hour about HER life, then asks, "What have YOU been doing?" and before you've managed four words she says, "Well, I'll let you go now."

. . .The company buck-passers who let you explain the whole complaint over and over, all the way down the line till you get to Miss Soandso, who says, "Oh yes, Mr. T. is the one you should talk to, but he's on a month's vacation."

. . .And, your Dad who breaks into a conversation with Mr. Wonderful to say, "Knock it off — I need the phone for a business call!" — SUE

SEW SIMPLE

'Not So Skinnies' Must Choose Right Patterns

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

With the "layered" look for all types of dresses, what are the "not so skinnies" going to do?

MRS. M.E.H.

DEAR MRS. M.E.H.,

We "not so skinnies" will have to spend a little more time carefully choosing the right patterns without sacrificing the new look for fall. I recommend the jumper dress rather than the skirt with all the separates.

Jumpers are not only new for fall, they are much more slenderizing than skirts, which have a tendency to cut you off right in half. If you do make a skirt, add a vest of the same color. This will give you a one piece look.

With the jumpers, you can add the skinny sweaters or shirtwaist blouses. You might even add a sleeveless vest or tunic, buttoned or unbottoned if it seems to be flattering. Jumpers are definitely part of the ensemble look and are usually teamed with a jacket or coat Therefore, they could also double as a sleeveless dress for "after 5."

With careful consideration, almost every fashion can be modificed for almost every figure, but first, you must be honest with yourself and acknowledge what you have to work with figurewise.

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. James L. Orr, Baton Rouge, La., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"To solve the problem most home sewers find in leftover hem tapes, seam bindings, bias tapes, I place the leftover tapes back on the card and sew across the card on my sewing machine, using the longest stitch and leaving two inches of thread at each end. The cardboard is so soft, I haven't found it harms the needle. When I need tape, it's no trouble to rip the few stitches off the card and go again."

DEAR EUNICE,

I am sway-backed and need your help. Since I'm sewing my own clothes, I am more particular about the fitting than I was when I purchased them. Now I am very aware of the way the back of my dresses fit and hope you can give me a few tips.

MRS. L.P.

DEAR MRS. L.P.:

Most women tend to overfit the sway back area. This only causes extra attention to the shape of your body, and besides, it is impossible to shape a piece of fabric to conform.

Instead, choose a pattern that will disguise this figure fault (and you are certainly not alone). I would avoid a skimpy cut dress or skirt. A dress with a slightly raised waistline and a little soft gathers instad of darts could be one solution.

When making a skirt, if you cut a facing of the skirt fabric instead of the convention l waistband, it will fit better. You can curve the back of the waistline slightly and it will lay nice and smooth.

Whether it's a fitted skirt or a dress without gathers, I would always recommend you use a slightly heavier underlining or a separate lining besides the underlining. This will give a little extra body to this part of the garment and prevent it curving or sinking into the curve of your body. It will disguise your figure fault.

DEAR EUNICE,

I try to follow the newest fashions but simply can't see myself in those sleeves with the puffy caps. I agree they look cute on the younger gals, but not for more mature women. I love some of the patterns and wonder if I can't change these sleeves and substitute sleeves with the smooth cap.

MRS. V.L.

DEAR MRS. V.L.:

If the sleeve seems to be cut with a normal shoulder, there is no reason you can't substitute the sleeve pattern. You must also check the shape of the armhole.

This is a simple procedure. Take the bodice front and back from the same pattern that has the sleeve you want to use. Lay the bodice over the original bodice, checking the cut of the armhole and the width of the shoulder and underarm. In other words, the armhole must be cut to fit the sleeve you are using. When they are identical, you may proceed with cutting the new sleeve and setting it into the armhole.

FOR THE professional look in set-in sleeves, you will want to follow Eunice Farmer's illustrated instructions in her informative booklet "All About Sleeves." You may obtain your booklet by sending 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

MARIN NOW'S DEMANDS

Women March On Civic Center

A delegation from the Marin chapter of the National Organization for Women marched through the Marin County Civic Center yesterday and taped a list of seven demands for equal employment opportunities for women to the door of the board of supervisors chambers.

On the eve of Women's Equality Day, chapter spokeswomen urged the county to open jobsat all levels to women on an equal basis with men. They urged the county to employ more women and minority group persons in its better jobs.

The NOW members also asked that the county appoint a full-time affirmative action officer to implement the affirmative action plan suggested by the state Fair Employment Practices Commission, and the spokeswomen called for the county to immediately come up with goals and timetables for the hiring and promotion of women and minority persons for all county departments and for middle and topounty jobs.

Marin NOW has carried on a two-year campaign for equality by the county in hiring and promoting women to its better jobs, according to NOW chapter president Barbara Hosmer.

In 1970 the chapter surveyed county employment rolls and found that women held largely clerical positions. The women who did hold higher level positions were mainly in "traditional" women's departments, Public Social Service and health, she said.

On April 1, 1971, NOW brought its complaint against the county to the FEPC, which voted to undertake an affirmative action study of Marin's employment patterns and to request the county to embark on a plan to hire and upgrade women and minority persons.

The county board of supervisors accepted the FEPC report this year and voted to begin an action plan.

But, Ms. Hosmer said, the county has given the matter lip service rather than action. NOW members who spoke at the board of supervisors' workshop with the personnel commission last month said the county's intention to make its current personnel director also the affirmative action officer represented a conflict of interests and proof that the county intended to do very little in the way of affirmative action.

James H. Mason of the FEPC affirmative action office agreed that a fulltime officer should be hired who had special knowledge of employment problems of women and minorities.

The supervisors disagreed, stating they intend to appoint the current personnel director also as affirmative action officer, as recommended by the county personnel commission.

The NOW demands include recruitment and training for women and minority persons.

"We will continue to press these demands for as long as it takes," Mrs. Hosmer said. "Our aim is to make the county an equal opportunity employer in deed as well as word. We all pay the taxes that support it, and women and minority group persons have the ability and right to be trained and hired for its jobs at all levels."

She pointed out that Aug. 26 is the 52nd anniversary of women's suffrage in America and that it was "high time that women have job equality."

Post Sees Big Gap Caused By Initiative

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post yesterday said passage of the Watson property tax limitation initiative in November would cause a $1.3 billion revenue gap for state and local governments.

Under the initiative, Post said state revenues would increase by $1.85 billion but spending would go up $2.2 billion, leaving an annual gap of $372 million.

He said school spending by local governments would be reduced by $771 million under the initiative but it mandates no financing method to offset the reduction.

Post also said city and county revenues would drop by $90 million.

The Watson measure would impose a $7 per $100 assessed valuation limit on property taxes and provide for other drastic changes in state and local taxes.

Last fall Post forecast a $969 million loss in state revenue would result with passage of the measure. Several weeks ago he revised the figure downward to $400 million.

In his latest analysis of the initiative, Post further reduced the estimated state revenue gap to $372 million in revenue to be gained because Gov. Ronald Reagan vetoed a sales tax measure.

The vetoed legislation would have applied the new sales tax on gasoline solely on the cost of the gasoline and not on the excise tax portion of the cost.

Post also estimated at $73.2 million the cost of Prop. 15, the initiative to restrict the governor's veto power on state employes' pay raises. The estimate on the increased salary costs was based on 1972-73 figures assuming the measure had been in effect.

Under the measure, salary recommendations by the state Personnel Board, University of California Regents and State College Board of Trustees would go into the budget for legislative approval.

He also estimated:

—The cost at $12.6 million for Prop. 16, the initiative requiring that state highway patrol salaries be the same as those of top local police officers.

—The cost of $600,000 in the first year for Prop. 22, which, among other things, established a five-member board to deal with agricultural labor relations.

—Savings of $16,500 to $60,000 by abolishing the annual five-day legislative veto sessions as provided in Prop. 4 which would institute two-year legislative sessions.

—The cost of $45 million through 1976 for Prop. 20, the initiative designed to regulate development along California's coastline.

Young Survivors In Holocaust Get $2.29 Million

WOODLAND (UPI) — A $2.29 million settlement has been awarded to two youngsters who were permanently disfigured in a fire three years ago which claimed the lives of eight members of their family.

The settlement approved earlier this week will go to Sharon Lambert, 13, and her brother, Jesse, 12. It was believed to be the largest settlement of its kind in Yolo County.

The fire in the Lambert family's wooden-frame home near Knights Landing took the lives of the youngsters' parents, five brothers and sisters and a grandfather.

According to investigators, the fire broke out when the parents were painting the bathroom in the home.

Attorneys for the children based their damage suit case on unsafe conditions in the house, illegal installation and maintenance of an "open flame" water heater and insufficient labeling regarding the highly volatile nature of paint being used by the Lamberts.

Defendants in the suit were River Garden Farms, Par Gas, Van Gas and Fuller O'Brien Paint Co. River Garden Farms, owner of the home, will pay the bulk of the settlement.

Samurai Woman Sane Enough To Be Tried

Frances Gail Simpson, the 29-year-old woman accused of attacking a fellow employee in a Sausalito shop with a samurai sword, yesterday was declared legally sane enough to stand trial.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court made the finding after reviewing reports by two psychiatrists, both of whom said Miss Simpson, although psychotic, is sane enough to cooperate with an attorney and understands the charges against her.

Miss Simpson, who affects men's clothing along with a shaved head, is charged in connection with the stabbing of Norman Williams, 20, shop steward at Heath Ceramics where Miss Simpson was a glazer.

She reportedly went straight to Williams after arriving at work on Aug. 4 and stabbed him from behind. Williams was hospitalized with wounds in his arm and stomach.

Miss Simpson fled before horrified coworkers could stop her. She was arrested the next day near Cascade Reservoir in Mill Valley, where her car had been found.

Miss Simpson, charged with felony assault, was ordered to return to Municipal Court Monday for further proceedings in the case.She has been jailed since her arrest.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Four Ways Are Mentioned To Outwit An Allergy To Ragweed

There are four ways to outwit an allergy to ragweed: Run, hide, take medicine, or be desensitized.

"Escapees" usually go where there is no ragweed and the pollen count never exceeds 10. These hay fever havens are well-known and lists are available for those who wish to escape local pollen.

Northern woods and the mountains are favorite spots. Other prefer Miami or a long sea voyage. There is no ragweed in the Southwest, but other weeds are present that may bother the "hayfeverite."

You can hide from pollen by remaining in an air-conditioned room in which pollens are filtered out. Never go outdoors without a mask at the height of the season; otherwise, pollen will enter the nose.

MANY EXCELLENT remedies are available to control the symptoms. Among the most popular are antihistamines, such as Benadryl and Pyribenzamine, and ephedrine products, such as Privine, Neo-Synephrine, and Propadrine. Decadron Turbinaire, a prescription item that is sprayed into the nose, also is available.

Adrenal steroids (cortisone and prednisone) are effective, but their prolonged use leads to disagreeable side effects. As a result, many physicians administer steroids only during the two or three weeks when the pollen count is highest.

DESENSITIZATION is the most logical way to handle the problem, but it is not always the most practicable or effective. The procedure has the advantage of delaying the development of asthma and other complications of hay fever, or even protecting the victim against these disorders.

One of the most popular methods of desensitization consists of weekly injections of pollen extracts that increase the person's tolerance to the airborne offenders. The best time to start is three months before the beginning of the season. Other methods consist of periodic injections thruout the year. There also is a single injection technic.

HISTAMINE HEADACHE

L. A. G. writes: My doctor says I have Horton's dieseas. Could you tell me something about it?

REPLY

I assume he refers to the severe, migrainelike headaches that some individuals develop because they are sensitive to histamine. Pain is located on one side of the head and is associated with tearing of the eye and congestion of the nasal passageway on the involved side.

EXTRA DIVIDENDS

A reader writes: Can a woman who is in the menopause conceive?

REPLY

Yes, but it is unusual because at this time of life the ovaries are less active and fewer ova develop. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on the menopause.

IT TOOK HER A WHILE

Waking Up To Religion

By PATRICK CORMAN

A religious awakening doesn't always have to be an earth-shaking, mind-bending experience.

To Georgie Lee, a recent convert bible-quoting fundamental Christianity, commitment to religion came after a long period of trying and rejecting other religions.

"I've been looking for God for a long time," said the animated 25-year-old, modishly attired in wire-rim glasses and a granny dress.

GEORGIE LEE
"It's like boxes within boxes. . ."

Her conversion last year to an evangelical, Jesus-centered Christianity, she said, was an alternative to having no belief at all.

She described herself as an "ordinary messed-up person, not much different from other lost people."

"I was too old to be a hippie," she said, "and too young to be part of the establishment."

She grew up in San Francisco, the product of what she termed a conservative Chinese family, tried City College of San Francisco for a year, and gave it up for beauty school.

Until her conversion more than 14 months ago, she had daddled in psychedelic drugs and Eastern religions while maintaining a hairdresser's job in a Tiburon beauty shop and modeling clothes for her fashion designer brother.

After she "became a Christian," she said, she rejected modeling because it was a "self centered" activity.

She also gave up the house she shared in San Anselmo with several other young people and moved back to her parents' home in San Francisco.

She was converted by a friend who read to her a small yellow pamphlet entitled "Four Spiritual Laws." Disseminated by Campus Crusade for Christ, a California-based evangelical group geared to young people, the pamphlet views human behavior in biblical terms.

The crusade claims that 25 million of the little yellow pamphlets have been distributed.

"I was looking for something to hit the spot," she said, "and this was it."

Her next step was finding a church. After rejecting a Jesus commune in San Francisco, she settled on the Marin Evangelical Free Church of San Rafael. She joined after hearing Rev. Samuel Walberg, the church's pastor, preach at a Billy Graham rally.

She attends the church twice on Sunday and on Tuesday evenings.

So far, the high point of her evangelical career has been the six days she spent recently in Dallas participating in Explo '72, a kind of Woodstock for young Jesus people. The conference, Campus Crusade for Christ, was an outpouring of zeal by 80,000 young religious enthusiasts. "It was a time for sharing," she said.

Attendence at the conference — which cost her $250 — sharpened her evangelical skills. Now, she said, she has a sixth sense about whom to approach in the street to deliver impromptu testimony. Cynicism and hostility are met with a prayer.

She combines hair styling with soul saving, telling customers unhappy with their personal life to "have faith and things will work out."

"It's just so neat," she said last week in Walberg's study. "It's like boxes within boxes. Every time you open one, there's another waiting to be opened."

Church Elder Will Preach In Larkspur

Ruling Elder Daniel White will be the preacher tomorrow at the 10 a.m. service at Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Larkspur.

White has just completed his first year at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo and, in addition to serving Redwoods Church as a ruling elder, serves at Westminster United Presbyterian Church in Tiburon as that church's minister with youth.

He has been a member of Redwoods Church for 18 years, and comes to the pulpit with an extensive background in the life of the church.

White presently is serving on the Mission Strategy Council of the Synod of the Golden Gate, which is responsible for thinking through, planning and helping local churches implement the mission of the Church today.

Red And White Russians Still Vie In Jerusalem

By MICHAEL GROSS
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — The fight between the Whites and Reds of Russia is till going on in Jerusalem.

Both sides maintain churches in the holy city.

The Soviet Ecclesiastical Mission, with about 100 nuns and a few priests, has been based since 1948 in a compound and the Church of St. John the Baptist in a Jewish suburg. One of the nuns, the Soviets say, is 102 years old.

The White Russians — the Russian Orthodox Church in exile — comprise about 150 nuns and priests mostly based in a golden-domed church on the Biblical Mount of Olives.

Now the church split, dating back to the 1917 Russian Revolution, has become an issue in Israel's law courts.

Israel became involved when it captured old Jerusalem in the 1967 Middle East war.

"Don't make waves was the password," said Saul Colbi, director of Christian affairs for Israel's Ministry of Religion.

The White Russians demanded that Israel recognize their claims to holy places in Jewish Jerusalem. These, according to the head of the anti-Soviet Orthodox Church, Archimandrite Anthony Grabbe, "We were forced to turn over to the avowedly atheistic Soviet government mission in 1948."

According to Colbi, the story is different.

"The Whites were staunchly pro-Arab. When they foresaw Israel's imminent takeover of West Jerusalem in 1948, they fled to the Arab sector.

"When the official Soviet mission requested the properties, they were turned over and on Dec. 31, 1948, the first batch of priests arrived from Moscow," Colbi said.

The White Russians have petitioned the government for return of the properties in West Jerusalem.

The government declined the request and shunted it into the courts, where it has remained for the past four years.

The disputed properties include seven churches, half a dozen tracts in Jerusalem and about 10 more pieces of land throughout the country. Together, they are worth a fortune.

THE CIRCUIT RIDER

It's difficult to resist summer bible school when the transportation is a horse-drawn carriage — like this one rumbling along in Decatur, Ill. — rather than a school bus. Rev. Leslie Wooten of Oak Grove Church of the Nazarene in Decatur bends over to reach one of several students running to catch up to the wagon as it makes its rounds. The wagon was donated by a nearby retired farmer.

Workshop For Laymen, Clergy Set

"Explorations in Faith Building," a series of three workshops for clergy and laymen, will be held on Sept. 9 and 23 and Oct. 14 at Lewis Marshall Lloyd Education Center in San Anselmo.

The workshops, led by Bill and Ann Eichorn, are designed to build "faith communities where trust and openness are realities." They will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. each day at the center at San Francisco Theological Seminary.

Enrollment is limited to 30 persons, and a fee will be charged. Advance registration and a deposit are required.

Persons desiring further information can contact San Francisco Theological Seminary.

The Scout Who Aided His Church

ALEXANDRIA, Md. — Boy Scout Bernard Buckley, 17, was eager to become an Eagle Scout.

To win an Eagle badge had long been his dream. First, however, he had to think of a project that would answer the requirements in obtaining enough merit badges to qualify.

Then, several months ago, he heard the church women's group discussing a project to collect food which Hope Lutheran Church would distribute.

That was it. He set a goal of collecting 1,000 can of food, which would keep, and each weekend he began calling on homes.

"When I thought I'd never make it, my girlfriend gave me encouragement," the youth said. Then his girl showed him a church bulletin, saying that Bernard was going to collect 2,000 cans.

But he surmounted that and finally reached the goal. He figures that the money represented by the 2,000 cans would be about $600.

It's Eagle Scout Buckely now, thank you. (Los Angeles Times Syndicate)

OF GOD AND MAN

The Ones Who Ignore Jesus

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

The notion is widely held that acts of religious devotion are more sincere and meaningful if they are entirely spontaneous. That's debatable.

Spontaneity of religious expression undoubtedly has some great advantages. It guards us against the hypocrisy of doing things, such as going to church, because we're expected to. It also forestalls the sterility of doing things, such as saying grace before meals, out of sheer habit.

But those who engage in acts of worship only when they feel "in the mood" are disregarding the example of Jesus, the teaching of the Bible and the experience of a long line of saints.

Jesus treasured spontaneous acts of devotion. But he knew that a man's mood may be affected by many things, such as illness, fatigue or adversity. And he also knew that it is precisely in such low xoments that men most need to turn ot God for comfort and guidance. So he set an example of disciplines regularity in worship.

From wtat he did, as well as what he taught, we know that Jesus believed in attending worship services every Sabbath. He also set aside time for private prayers and meditations every day.

The same viewpoint is reflected in the Bible, especially in the letters of St. Paul. Paul admonished members of early Christian communities to be "constant" — i.e., regular — in prayer. No one knew better than Paul how easy it is to become so distracted by other concerns — ot just frivolous pleasures but important duties — that one never feels "in the mood" to take time out for quiet communion with God. So he insisted that regular periods must be set aside — and kept inviolate — for prayer and meditation.

Many great saints, including St. Augustine, St. Francis and St. Theresa of Avila, recorded in their memoirs that they often went through spells of "dryness" when they felt absolutely devoid of any spontaneous devotion to God. But they learned from experience that perseverance in worship when you least feel like it is the highest form of devotion because it is an act of pure obedience, a deliberate subjection of your own will to God's will.

Another reason for regularity in prayer, Bible reading and church attendance is that you never can tell, in advance, when some word, sentence or incident will suddenly illuminate your mind and lift up your spirit. It can happen unexpectedly, unforeseeably, in the midst of the dullest sermons, or during private devotions which you had to drive yourself to make.

Spontaneity is a fine thing, and there is merit to the contention of Pentecostals, and young people in the Jesus movement, that there ought to be room for spontaneous acts of worship in all church services. But the testimony of Jesus and the saints is that spontaneous upwellings of love for God are most likely to occur in the context of lives ruled by a discipline of daily devotion.

Jesus Group Evening On Skates Slated

A "skate-a-rama" for young people in Marin County will feature games and "fun on wheels" Monday at Marin Skateland, 863 Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael.

The event, sponsored by the steering committee of the Jesus Music Festival, will begin at 7 p.m. and is open to the public.

Donations of 90 cents each are requested for the non-profit event.

The two-hour party will end with the sounds of "Emmanuel," a Jesus-people musical group from Marin. Rev. Kent Philpott, a Baptist minister and director of the United Ministries in Marin County, will speak briefly.

James David Brecheen, coordinator of the event, said this will be the third countywide activity sponsored by the Jesus Music Festival committee.

The most recent was held in the San Rafael High School auditorium on July 28 with Rick Carreno, a former Hell's Angel motorcycle club member who is now a Christian evangelist, and with the youth choir from First Baptist Church of Modesto.

Colorful Ceremony Opens Olympic Games In Munich

MUNICH (UPI) — To the sound of eight alpenhornblasers, the 20th Olympic games open today in an $86 million stadium under sunny skies and the stadium's spiderweb-like $124 million half roof.

Among the 435 athletes representing the United States will be six who carry the hopes of Marin County, Ca. Rick DeMont of Terra Linda, world record holder in the 1500 meter swim and the gold medal favorite in that event, leads the Marin contingent.

Two boxers from Hamilton Air Force Base, welterweight Jesse Valdez and bantamweight Ricardo Carreras, will fight for the U.S., and a pair of San Rafael High School instructors, Goetz Klopfer and Tom Dooley, will compete in the 20,000 meter walk.

Marin's other entry is bicyclist Emile Waldteufel of Mill Valley.

The Alpenhornblasers — players of century-old alpine wooden instruments which resemble trumpets — signal the entry of Dr. Gustav Heinemann, president of the federal republic of Germany at 2:57 p.m. (9:57 a.m. edt).

Heinemann enters a plush box seat, the floor covered by a cocoa-covered carpet, and greets Willi Daume, the president of the German organizing committee, and Avery Brundage, the 84-year-old Chicago millionaire who is opening his last olympic games as president of the International Olympic Committee.

Three minutes after the blast from the Alpenhorns, the first of 122 nations — all in their colorful native dress — begin marching into the 84,000-capacity stadium. The huge bowl is built on an old airport where Adolph Hitler once met Neville Chamberlain in an historic peace conference prior to World War II.

The athletes from Greece, where the Olympics were founded, lead the parade of 14,000 of the finest amateurs in the world and their coaches.

The United States team, led by flagbearer Olga Connolly of Culver City, will step to strains of "When the Saints Go Marching In." Mrs. Connolly, an outspoken critic of American Olympic officials was picked by her teammates to carry the flag.

The final group of athletes will be the host West Germans, according to tradition, an 18-year-old middle distance runner from Germany, Gunter Zahn, will light the Olympic torch highatop the bowl-shaped arena, already sold out for this event.

One of the German's medal candidates, beautiful track star Heidi Schueller, will take the Olympic vow for all athletes, judges and officials, then comes the tradtional Bavarian salute from 20 cannons each firing three rounds and the release of the 5,000 doves of peace.

The games are the first in Germany since 1936, when Hitler marred them by his attitude toward blacks. The star of those games, Jesse Owens, an American negro who won four gold medals, is among a group of former Olympic greats at the ceremonies.

Daume and Heinemann were determined to have an incident-free games. The difficult Rho-

Tobacco Chewing — Hamilton's Art

CHICAGO — It was disappointing not to find Steve Hamilton in the camp of the Cubs. They released the 6-foot-7, 36-year-old, left-hander just before the Giants came into Wrigley Field for their final season visit.

Hamilton always was good for a brainy discussion about baseball or a relaxed interview on lighter subjects, such as the art of chewing tobacco.

When Hamilton joined the Giant in the spring of 1971 after 10 years as a relief specialist in the American League, Chris Speier already had commanded considerable attention as the up-and-coming rookie shortstop sensation.

"That rookie is a natural," said Hamilton.

A NATURAL? Of course, Speier was a natural ball player. He swung a bat the way a ball player should. He used his glove the way a shortstop should. So what did Hamilton mean?

"I mean he's a natural tobacco chewer," said Hamilton. "He is one of the best looking young chewer I've seen outside of my native Kentucky. We have some dandies down home but this young man shows great potential. He still needs work on his finesse but mark my words Chris is going to be a great one."

Immediately Hamilton had an appreciative and admiring audience demanding more information about the art of chewing.

"I was in the eighth grade when I first tried it," said Hamilton. "I wanted to be a big man. Instead, I was a very sick kid. I didn't try it again until I was in college (Moorehead State). I found it relaxing while pitching.

"It's beautiful when a guy can really chew and be neat about it. Most ball players are messy.

"But a guy with finesse can go half an hour and never even spit. A real classy practitioner can even eat and drink while he's chewing."

When he was asked whether he might have difficulty chewing in Candlestick's wind, Hamilton said:

"IT MIGHT BE a problem for the end man on the bench. But the artificial turf in the National League will be a bigger problem. I like grass better because it has bugs and things that give you moving targets. Besides, I was brought up not to spit on the rug."

But don't get the wrong impression about Hamilton. He isn't some kind of chewing clown. He's an intellectual, gentleman chewer, with a master's degree in education. He even conducts his classes at Moorehead State in baseball's off season with a cud neatly tucket in the pocket of his left jaw. It delights him that none of his students realize that all the time he is lecturing he is chewing contentedly.

JUST AFTER the 1971 season ended, Hamilton asked for his release from the Giants because he set his mind on becoming a college baseball coach. The job he had in mind fell through. When Larry Jansen, former pitching coach of the Giants now with the Cubs, learned that he had the Cubs sign Hamilton.

Now, Hamilton has another college coaching job in mind and he'll undoubtedly get this one. He's his own best reference but Ron Bryant would be happy to write a glowing recommendation of Hamilton. Hamilton showed Bryant the effective wrist action the young southpaw now uses on his curve.

Hot Henderson Leads Giants To 11-2 Rout

CHICAGO (UPI) — The hottest hitter in the National League just keeps getting hotter. Ken Henderson, batting .451 in August, hit a pair of home runs, a pair of singles and drove in five runs yesterday to power the San Francisco Giants to an 11-2 rout of the Chiago Cubs.

Henderson, who was batting only .190 on July 31, slammed a three-run homer in the third inning, a bases empty homer in the fifth and a run-scoring single in the sixth. The outburst raised his average for the season to .260.

Jim Willoughby, a rookie, went all the way to pick up his third victory in four decisions, allowing seven hits, walking none and striking out three.

The Giants jumped to an early 5-0 lead, getting two runs in the second on singles by Dave Rader and Tito Fuentes and a double by Dave Kingman, and three more in third when singles by Bobby Bonds and Chris Speier preceded Henderson's first homer.

Chicago scored in the fourth when centerfielder Garry Maddox of the Giants dropped Billy Williams' fly ball for a three-base error and Joe Pepitone followed with a single, and again in the ninth when Pepitone doubled and Ron Santo singled him home.

Reports that pitcher Juan Marichal had cleared waivers and would be traded to the American League were put down emphatically by Giants' owner Horace Stoneham. "We're putting everybody on waivers at one time or another," Stoneham said. "But there's no one or two specific names." He would not elaborate.

Rookies Face Big Names In Pro Match Play Tourney

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI)— The $150,000 United States professional match play championship opens today with a flock of eager rookies and struggling veterans challenging golf's biggest names in head-to-head competition.

Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, and Arnold Palmer headed a field of 16, half of them chosen during two gruelling days of competition in the accompanying L&M Open golf tournament.

Besides the tour's big three, George Archer, Miller Barber, Jerry Heard, Frank Beard and defending champion DeWitt Weaver qualified automatically for the two-day event.

Joining them for the opening morning round over the Country Club of North Carolina course were a collection of unheralded veterans and streaking newcomers led by young Bob Barbarossa.

Barbarossa posted the hottest 36-hole score in the L&M Open, winding up Friday with a two-under-par 70 for a 136 total.

He had some stiff competition, though, from Deane Beman, Lanny Wadkins, Babe Hiskey, Leonard Thompson, Dave Stockton, Don Bies and Paul Moran. Additionally, Napa's Ron Cerrudo carded a 147.

Battling in an odd-man-out playoffs, Bies and Moran turned back Jerry McGee, who claimed the second round lead in the L&M Open by a one-stroke margin.

Barbarossa may have had the hot hand, but Wadkins, a brash Winston-Salem, N.C., rookie, seemed to have the confidence to take the $40,000 first prize.

Wadkins was tentatively scheduled to face Barber in the opening round, with Nicklaus against Beman, Palmer against Bies, Heard against Thompson, Trevino against Weaver, Beard against Moran, Archer against Hiskey and Stockton against Barbarossa.

A pink-cheeked 24-year-old from Pompano Beach, Fla., Barbarossa clinched his spot in the field with a steady round of five birdies and three bogeys over the 6,973-yard course.

Only a stroke back was Beman, a former Washington insurance agent in his fifth year on the tour, who carded a one-under 70 for 137 through 36 holes.

Davis Gives 'Present' To Athletics

OAKLAND (UPI) —Oakland pitcher Vida Blue gets the Cy Young Award and 1971/American League Most Valuable Player award today from league president Joe Cronin in ceremonies at the Oakland Coliseum.

Blue and his teammates also got a "present" Friday night from former Athletic Tommy Davis, now with the Baltimore Orioles.

Davis, cut adrift by the A's in spring training, stepped in as a pinch-hitter and scored pinch-runner Mark Belanger on a single in the ninth to tie the score at 3-3.

Don Buford tripled home the winning run to give the Orioles a 5-3 win and move Baltimore into a first place tie in the American League West with the rained-out Detroit Tigers.

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver went against the percentages in using Davis as a pinch-hitter because Davis bats right-handed and he was facing Jim Hunter, who hurls right-handed.

"I wasn't surprised," Davis commented. "What's the difference?"

It was Davis who introduced Blue to Los Angeles attorney Robert Gurst, a key figure in Blue's long holdout with the Athletics this season.

"Tommy's just doing his job like I'm trying to do my job," Blue said in reference to Davis' key hit.

The defeat dropped Oakland a full game behind AL West leading Chicago.

Dipsea Run Is Slated

Is Mike Boitano washed up at the age of 10?

This and other equally perplexing questions will be answered tomorrow morning, when the 62nd renewal of the annual Dipsea footrace will be held.

The first of a surging mob of an estimated 1,400 runners will spill out of Litton Square in downtown Mill Valley at 10 o'clock, bound for the mountains and the sea.

Six and eight-tenths miles and several hundred calluses later, remnants of the horde will arrive at the Post Office in Stinson Beach via the mocking Dipsea trail, gentle to the eyes and cruel to the feet.

A goodly portion of the field will have handicaps of up to 15 minutes based on age, a ply implemented by the sponsoring Mill Valley Junior Chamber of Commerce aimed at creating and exciting finish. It may also produce a repeat winner, over the protests of history.

Last year, nine-year-old Mike Boitano of San Francisco utilized a full 15-minute handicap to win the race by just over a minute over 60-year-old Norman Bright of Seattle, Wash.

Boitano will be back this year, and with a 13-minute handicap, must be regarded as a strong contender again. Presumably, a year's growth and training have cut more than two minutes from his time, which was 58:53 scratch.

Historical archives frown on Boitano. The Dipsea has had only three repeat winners in its 67-year history, and only one since 1913. The only back-to-back winner in the race was John G. Hassar of Oakland High School, who won the first two races in 1905-06.

The other double winners were Oliver Millard (1910-13) and Jack Kirk (1951-67).

Also under assault will be the course record of 46:08, set last year by Ron Elijah of Novato, a scratch runner who finished fourth.

In the field again this year will be Harry Cordellos, 35, of San Francisco, who is blind. Cordellos has a 15-minute handicap and will have the aid of a pacer, but will run free except on downhill stretches, when he holds on to the pacer.

Race director John Drew estimates a throng of about 400-500 entrants the morning of the race. They will be processed in the Mill Valley City Council chamber on Corte Madera Avenue, a block from Litton Square. Entry fee is $3, with $1.50 for an Amateur Athletic Union card if the runner doesn't have one.

Volunteers from the Jaycees and the two communities will help administer the race. The San Francisco Ski Patrol will provide first aid, the Marin Amateur Radio Club will set up a communications network, and the United Ambulance Service of Mill Valley and the Mill Valley Air Force Station will provide ambulances.

First U.S. Olympic Win Was Practically Ignored

Boston Man Had To Pay Own Way

By BARBARA CRAIG
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

The United States' first Olympic winner was James B. Connolly, who, in his later years, became a well-known writer of sea stories.

He won the hop, step, and a jump competition in the first modern Olympics held in Athens back in 1896.

But no cheering throngs or big brass bands greeted the athlete when he returned home in triumph to Boston. He was practically ignored. In those days, Olympic gold-medal winners were not the celebrities they are now.

In fact, Connolly, a sophomore at Harvard University, almost didn't make it to the Olympics. His dean refused him permission to leave classes so he could compete in Athens. Young Connolly finally had to quit school.

In addition, he had to pay his own way to Greece. He represented "the little Suffolk Athletic Club" in his hometown of South Boston, and the organization didn't have a penny in its treasury.

Connolly later wrote: "Only one American college (Princeton) and one athletic club besides my own, the Boston Athletic Association, were represented on that first Olympic team.

"Bob Garrett in the discus, and shot put, the broad and high jumps; Herb Jamieson in the 400 meter; Frank Lane in the 100 meter; and Al Tyler in the pole vault were the Princeton entries. The Boston club entered the great Tom Burke in the 100 and 400 meters; Arthur Blake in the 800 meters; Tom Curtis in the hurdles; Ellery Clarke in the high, broad, and hop, step, and jump; and Bill Hoyt in the pole vault."

The first American Olympic squad left New York on March 20 aboard a German steamer and reached Athens 17 days later.

Wrote Connolly: "It was nine o'clock at night when we reached our hotel in Athens. Tom Burke and I roomed together. About four o'clock we came wide awake together. There were soldiers parading and a powerful band whaling away.

"It was too late to bother with any more sleep, so we had breakfast, remarking what a lucky thing it was we had 12 days to get in shape after that long 17-day trip. Then two members of some committee came in and handed up the programs for the games. Right then and there we discovered we were supposed to compete in the Olympics that very day.

"We soon discovered that the athletic officials back home who had given out the data for the opening of the games had made a mistake of 12 days, the difference between the Greek calendar and ours."

When Connolly arrived at the stadium a few hours later he discovered one more problem. He learned his competitors were all doing a hop, hop, and a jump, and not the hop, step, and jump he expected to use. The hop, hop, and jump, it should be noted, is ancient Olympic form.

Connolly recalled:

"Some said 100,000 people filled the stadium. The hills above and just outside the walls were packed with men, women, and children. It was the day of days, the first day of the first Olympiad after 1,500 years. This very stadium had been erected on the banks of the Illyssus, on the site of that very stadium wherein the games had last been held 15 centuries agone.

"I was the last to jump. I gripped my hands for the last time — I had the right feeling now — and started for the takeoff. And a curious thing happened to me. I had intended to eo a hop, step, and a jump, but what I said to myself as I waited there was: 'Me, too, for the two hops and a jump.'

"As I landed in the pit a tremendous cheer went up. There had been no great cheering before that from the seats.

"By and by, I took my second try. Another roar went up. An Englishman named Perry was leveling off the pit after each jump. After my second try, I said to him: 'They ought to tell how far each man jumps. Then a fellow won't be breaking his back when there's no need to it.'

"To that he said: 'As far as the measurements go, there's nobody within a yard of you.'"

Connolly won the double hop and a jump with an effort of 45 feet, which was three feet, three inches ahead of his closest rival.

"A band of 200 pieces was grouped at the foot of a lofty flagstaff in the center of the arena," he went on. "Before I woke up to what the band was playing, I saw a group of San Francisco bluejackets from the good ship Liberty, which was in Greece at the time. They were standing at attention and saluting.

"I came wide awake then. That big band was booming out the opening notes of 'The Star Spangled Banner' and two Greek sailors were slowly hoisting the American flag to the top of that high staff. The thousands and thousands of spectators sat or stood in hushed attention.

"It was a moment in a young fellow's life. I had won an Olympic victory for my country, and atop of that I was the first Olympic victor in 1,500 years, since my competition was the first event scheduled. South Boston, I thought happily, would be pleased to get word of that."

Court Order Stops Hull From Promoting Winnipeg

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

CHICAGO — A federal judge, acting on a suit charging that hockey superstar Bobby Hull was influential among children and other hockey players, issued an order Friday to prevent the long-time Chicago Black Hawks' star from promoting his new team, the Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association.

U.S. District Court Judge James B. Parsons issued a 10-day restraining order prohibiting Hull from using his name to promote any team other than the Black Hawks. The order also said Hull could not report to the Jets' training camp, play for any team other than the Black Hawks or represent himself as "anything other than a Chicago Black Hawks hockey player."

Following Parsons' order Friday, Hull said the order wouldn't change anything: "I plan to play for the WHA, he said. "I didn't have plans to do any of those things."

Anderson's Ulcer Is Soothed By Victory

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Being manager of the Cincinnati Redlegs gave George "Sparky" Anderson what his previous jobs as a shoe salesman and a used-car dealer couldn't: an ulcer.

The doctor prescribed rest but Sparky cured his ills —at least temporarily—by watching his Don Gullett stop Philadelphia with three hits as Cincinnati pounded out a 6-1 victory while tagging Ken Reynolds with his 12th straight loss.

Gullett also climaxed a five-run fourth inning uprising with a bases-loaded single off Reynolds, who tied a major league record for consecutive losses.

In other National League action, Atlanta nipped New York, 2-1, Los Angeles won 4-3 in the nightcap after Pittsburgh scored a 3-2, 12 inning victory, Montreal stopped Houston, 4-3, Cincinnati downed Philadelphia, 6-1, St. Louis topped San Diego 7-4 before losing 8-7 and San Francisco clubbed Chicago, 11-2.

In the Americ League, New York beat Kansas City 4-1 before losing 5-1, Baltimore defeated Oakland, 5-3, Boston halted Texas, 4-0, and Cleveland eked past California 2-1 in 11 innings. Chicago at Milwaukee and Detroit at Minnesota were rained out.

Mrs. Robinette In Bowling Meet Win

"I only wanted to get my money's worth." And Novato bowler Natsuko (Koko) Robinette, 42, did just that in winning the state 500 Club Tournament in San Jose concluding last Sunday after successive weekends of competition starting May 20.

With her reported $5 entry fee in mind, the Marinite notched an 873 series that included her 88-pin handicap in the tourney held on successive Saturdays and Sundays in conjunction with the Women's State Tournament.

The Novatan topped her 161 average by rolling games of 179, 176, 213, and 217 in her winning series. Following this effort, Mrs. Robinette commented: "I felt pretty good, which enabled me to shoot fairly well." Indeed.

KUDOS ARE ALSO extended to four San Rafael Bowlers who performed admirably in the L and L Castle Lanes league activities at San Francisco last week.

The four Marinites are: the McPhersons, brothers Rich and Mike, and Marilyn Epidendio and Bea Hoffmann.

Rich, 20, and Mike, 17, taking part in the Boys Eliminations tourney play, rank third and seventh, respectively. Rich, with a high game of 255, has 9,407 pins, and Mike, with a 244 top mark, has 9,208 pins.

Mrs. Epidendio and Mrs. Hoffmann, competing in the 1972 Ladies West Coast Match Game Eliminations finals, are 10th and 11th, in that order, after 16 games.

Mrs. Epidendio sports a 7-9 record, 3,266 pins and a 182 average, and Mrs. Hoffmann holds a 6-10 mark with 3,187 pins and a 180 average. While Mrs. Epidendio remains in 10th against tough Bay Area competition, Mrs. Hoffmann has climbed three pegs in the standings from 14th. Nice going, ladies.

MARIN COUNTY Bowlers are getting ready to swing into the Winter Season and as a prelude, a Workshop will be held at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. This is for the assistance and information of the more than 100 league secretaries, or any interested bowler.

AN IMPORTANT coming event for the Women's Association is the Open Meeting of Sept. 9 at 1 p.m. at the Rafters in Corte Madera.

New officers, including president, will be installed and delegates for the national convention in Las Vegas and state convention in Bakersfield for 1973 will be elected.

PRO FOOTBALL

Landry, Lions Top Redskins

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Greg Landry made the "Over the Hill Gang" look a bit over the hill Friday night before a national television audience.

Coach George Allen's geriatric Washington Redskins had allowed only 13 points in 12 quarters while winning their first three exhibitions game but Landry piloted Detroit to a 20-point second quarter and the Lions downed the Redskins 23-10 for their third victory in four games.

Landry, playing only the first half, completed seven of 11 passes for 107 yards.

In the only other exhibition game Friday night, Miami downed Atlanta 24-10.

Bob Griese played more than he was expected to at quarterback because Earl Morrall wasn't too impressive in his stint. Griese hit Paul Warfield with a 16-yard scoring pass and Jim Kiick scored on runs of two and 12 yards.

There will be one afternoon game and four night games on Saturday. In a national telecast, the New York Jets will invade Irving, Tex. to meet the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys Saturday night. In other night games, Minnesota is at Cleveland, Baltimore meets Pittsburgh at Tampa and San Diego is at New Orleans. Oakland meets Buffalo at Berkeley in an afternoon contest.

REVAMPED BILLS VS. RAIDERS IN BERKELEY

OAKLAND (UPI) —The Buffalo Bills, a revamped squad bad enough to get the first draft choice two of the last four years, today visited the Oakland Raiders, winners of their last eight exhibition games at the University of California stadium in Berkeley.

This year, the Bills, under new coach Lou Saban, are proving tough to handle. They won two of their three exhibition contests this season.

In the three games the Bills have doubled their victory total in last season's regular 14-game schedule.

Ralston's Broncos Meet Injury-Riddled 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Coach John Ralston, who took nearby Stanford University to a pair of dazzling Rose Bowl victories, makes his Bay Area debut, as a pro mentor Sunday when his Denver Broncos clash with an injury-riddled San Francisco 49er squad.

Ralston had a brutal initiation into the play-for-pay wars when his Denver team was steamrollered by Washington 41-0. But Denver's offense and defense both showed a little more stuff in a second game loss to St. Louis by only a 17-13 margin.

The Forty Niners have downed Cleveland 20-13 with John Brodie at the helm and lost to New York 17-10 and San Diego 17-16 with Steve Spurrier the signal-caller. Sunday is Brodie's turn.

The key to the contest figures to be how a rookie-filled San Francisco defensive backfield can stand up against the bombs of veteran Charlie Johnson, whom Ralston has tibbed to start for the Broncos.

No Charges In Escapers' Case

No charge will be pressed in Marin against two men who escaped from a Department of Corrections conservation camp and were captured in Bel-Marin Keys after a high speed chase Tuesday.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Joshua W. Thomas said Martin Ervin Murrill, 28, and Charles John Lares, 24, will be turned over to state prison authorities.

They will not be charged with car theft in Marin, he said, because police could not identify them as having been the persons in a stolen car found near their hidding places.

They had escaped earlier from the Sierra Conservation Camp in Jamestown, Fresno County.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

Declarer Can Run Long Suit If He Has No Discard Woes

When you can run a long suit as declarer at a no-trump contract, the chances are always fairly good that a defender will be embarrassed by the need of finding safe discards. If you will have no discarding problems of your own, run the suit and see what happens to the enemy. Odd things have a way of happening in hands that look perfectly straightforward.

TRICK NEEDED

West opened the five of spades, and South won with the queen. Declarer saw that he could win two spades, two diamonds and four clubs. One other trick was needed.

South thought of making a heart play of some kind, but saw no harm in running the four club tricks first. This turned out to be a very good idea.

NO SAFE DISCARDS

When the third club was led, West was in trouble. He didn't dare discard a diamond, for then declarer could duck one diamond and later take three diamond tricks in dummy. West likewise couldn't discard the queen of hearts, for South would lead a heart to set up three tricks in that suit.

For lack of anything better, West had to discard a spade. Declarer promptly took his fourth club trick, and West had to discard another spade for the same reasons.

THREAT GONE

These discards gave South no tricks, but they removed the threat of the long spade suit. South could afford to set up his hearts, giving West two tricks in the process. West could get only one spade trick, and South made his contract with an overtrick.

Press Is Better Because Of Bush

When Dr. Chilton R. Bush died tragically of cancer at the age of 76 earlier this week, we were all cheated.

Cancer is supposed to develop slowly enough in the aged that it never catches up with them. They usually live on to succumb to some more natural debility of advancing years.

CHICK BUSH'S personal fame in no way equalled his wide influence on human events in California and nationally.

As head of Stanford University's department of communication and journlistic studies for 27 years prior to his retirement from that post in 1961, Chick Bush probably influenced more improvement in California newspapers than any other single human being.

More than a generation ago, he organized what become the annual Stanford conference for California editors, bringing them together to exchange information and meet with nationally known journalistic innovators. Most who attended the conferences went away with new ideas and inspiration for producing better newspapers.

About two decades ago, the annual conference tradition was well enough established that Doctor Bush could turn it over to the California Newspaper Publishers Association with the knowledge that it would endure. It has. And it still is the best of its kind in all the nation.

When Chick Bush retired as head of journalism at Stanford in 1961, the I-J editorially acknowledged that California newspapers were far better for his having served so long and effecitvely.

THOSE OF US who knew him personally thought Chick Bush would take a well deserved rest.

Instead, he became a consultant on news research to the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

At Stanford, he had been a pioneer in the science of measuring readership and the impact of news on the reading audience. He had originated and first put into practice many now-common techniques for attitude measurement. He was the founder of the Stanford Institute for Public Opinion Research.

As ANPA research consultant, he kept abreast of news research throughout the nation and published periodic bulletins reporting new developments. These bulletins were disseminated nation-wide by ANPA to communications media and were subsequently compiled into a series of important reference books.

The influence of all this on the gathering and presentation of news throughout the nation is immeasurable.

In the decade after his retirement at 65, Doctor Bush influenced communications media performance improvements even more widely than he did during his earlier years.

CHICK BUSH ALWAYS was mindful that our form of self-government succeeds or fails according to how well informed or misinformed is our electorate.

With all their faults, today's communications media do a better-than-ever job of informing the electorate. Chick Bush was an humble man; it probably never occured to him that he contributed as much or more to improving the public information flow that any other American of his time.

As a classroom teacher, Chick Bush was not regarded by students as the most exciting lecturer of the faculty. But most graduates who emerged from his journalism school proved well prepared to face the challenges of the profession. The list of his former students who succeeded eminently well in professional journalistic endeavors is endless. By feeding well-prepared beginners into the news-handling profession, he was in another way doing his best to see that the electorate was better informed.

HIS PIONEER communications research was aimed at improving the flow of meaningful information to the citizenry. Unfortunately, much effort expended on university campuses today in the name of communications research is plain boondoggling.

If Chick Bush's contributions to the discipline are to be remembered nowhere else, the deserve to be recognized in journalism and communications departments on college campuses acorss the land.

We still need improvement in the methodology of keeping the citizenry informed.

We aren't likely to enjoy much improvement as the result of the rantings of contemporary non-constructive critics of the press.

What we really need is some people of quiet dedication to follow in Chick Bush's footsteps.

More Olympic Winners

In our editorial on Marin's six-member Olympic Games contingent, we overlooked mentioning a present and a former resident of Marin who captured Olympic gold medals.

Archie F. Williams of Fairfax, science and mathematics teacher at Sir Francis Drake High School, won a gold medal in the 400-meter run in the 1936 Olympics in Berlin. That was some time before he came to Marin.

Eleanor Garatti was a San Rafael resident when she was a member of the gold medal-winning women's 400-meter relay swim team in the 1928 Olympics in Amsterdam. She is now Eleanor Garatti Saville and resides in San Francisco.

No doubt these two will be watching, with even more interest than most of us, the performance of Marin's athletes in the Munich Olympics.

Even back in 1928, Marinites were in the thick of things!

"Well, Abernathy, what is it we have to mentally adjust outselves to today?"

BOUQUETS for long, devoted public service to two city officials in Marin who have announced their impending retirements: John G. Deceptive Packaging: The Eternal Feminine

According to California Farm Bureau Newsletter, and I quote, "A survey of women attending a meeting to protest "deceptive packaging" revealed this: 15 per cent tinted their hair, 38 per cent wore wigs, 80 per cent wore rouge, 98 per cent wore lipstick, 25 per cent wore eyeshadow, 22 per cent wore false eyelashes, 93 per cent used nail polish, and 100 per cent favored the resolution condemning any kind of false packaging."

I found this article quite interesting in view of the current complaints of "deceptive packaging."

Proofreading Errors Look Bumblewitted

Word may, by now, may have filtered up to the management level of the I-J that a great many of your loyal readers are beginning to refer to the paper as the Illiterate Journal, as a consequence of the sloppy proofreading you so prominently display.

For example, in your editorial of Aug. 5, there is a gross spelling error.

In a good editorial, such as you consistently write, possibly you should read the proof yourself, lest you give the impression that your paper is staffed with bumblewits.

Joint Use Of HAFB 'Great Step Backward'

The proposal to convert Hamilton Air Force Base into a civilian commercial airport is probably the greatest step backward Marin County has ever considered. Have the citizens of Marin County such short memories that they have forgotten the poor homeowners of Millbrae on the peninsula? All of their protest meetings, all of their complaints against noise, noxious gases and TV interferences were wasted. The airlines had long ago had the permission.

Marin County residents, now is the time to emphatically block the move 100 per cent or forever hold your peace. Don't complain later about decreased property and land values — you will have sanctioned it by your failure to write your city and county officials.

Russia Again Curbs Jewish Emigration

The Jewish Community Relations Council, which represents more than 50 organizations and congregations in San Francisco, Marin and Peninsula, has become very concerned about the latest development in the continuing harassment of Soviet Jews who are trying to emigrate from that country. A new system of heavy exit fees ranging from $5,000 to $25,000 for educated Jews has apparently been instituted.

This concept — that anyone desiring to exercise his basic human right of movement must first pay a retroactive fee to the state — amounts to a new form of slavery. The Soviet explanation was that the fees were necessary to repay the government for the costs of state-financed education . . .

We hope this latest ploy of the Soviet Union will be repugnant enough to you that you will editorialize on it . . .

Far-Out Protest May Trigger Repression Of Our Freedom

MIAMI BEACH — The picketers chant outside the Fontainebleau Hotel. Long-haired, most of the men stripped to the waist, they have a variety of red flags. Part of the picketers sitting down in the entrances to the hotel, headquarters for the Republican convention, prevent many of the guests from entering to attend the $500-a-plate gala dinner.

"Keep out the rich," the picketers chant," — You, Richard Nixon," "Workers and students, unite." They are burning an American flag. In the early dusk the television cameras zero in and the powerful television lights give the whole scene the eerie look of a Hollywood production.

A black shiny limousine manages to get through the picket lines. It is immediately surrounded by the demonstrators who pound on the windows of the air-conditioned car. Then a solid line of helmeted, brown-uniformed Florida highway patrolmen move in. They sweep back the demonstrators and the clogged traffic on Collins Avenue begins to move.

The gala honoring Mrs. Richard Nixon and her daughter, Tricia, goes on without interruption. They are flanked at the head table by Gov. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller. While some of the guest were shaken by the ordeal of forcing their way through the screaming picketers, the diners who have paid their $500 for the re-election of the President are confident of their own righteousness. Implied in their self-confidence is the conviction that they are the wave of the future or, at any rate, the immediate future.

IN A PRO FORMA convention in which news is scarce or nonexistent the chanting picketers are making their own contribution to the re-election of President Nixon. As seen on the television screens across the country they provide the contrast with all that is tidy, secure, proper, promising for a future, with the Nixon image embodying the good and the true.

There can be little doubt that to the average American the alientation of these far-out protesters — the hippies, zippies, yippies — is repelling. Concentrating on the Republican Convention, having abstained when the Democrats were here, they are certainly no help to the McGovern-Shriver ticket. If the Committee to Re-elect the President is not paying them $50 a head per demonstration, as one cynic put it, they are being cheated.

Small in numbers, they are nevertheless a phenomenon to be reckoned with. They may be naive enough, self-indoctrinated enough to believe their impact is antiwar, antirich, antiestablishment. But, conceivably, the effect could be just the opposite.

AN ABIDING FEAR of Henry A. Kissinger, the President's adviser on national security affairs, is a right-wing revolution triggered by extremists on the left. Revolution may be too strong a word and Kissinger's fears may be conditioned by the fact that as a youngster he escaped with his family from Nazis in 1938 as Hitler consolidated his savage grip on the Third Reich with the liquidation of six million Jews.

A repression by force not only of the extremists but of all forms of dissent may be nearer the mark. This is where the Nixon administration, with the big majorities that to most Republicans here seem an inevitable result of the November election, will have to exercise a restraint that has so far not been evident. Why, the right-wingers demand, should things like the demonstration outside the Fontainebleau be allowed to go on? Why shouldn't these people be locked up, put away somewhere?

That is the kind of pressure that will mount if the Nixon triumph is as great as now anticipated. It can find expression in the Department of Justice, in the courts, in the power of the police.

To contain these pressures will take not only restraint but the kind of leadership that President Nixon has thus far rarely shown. The 200th anniversary of America's freedoms is only four years away and that anniversary should be a celebration of what those freedoms mean.

Above all, the freedom of speech and worship guaranteed in the First Amendment to the Constitution is the core of American liberty. And polls have shown how little the average citizen understands and appreciates what that amendment means. Understanding can come only from leadership at the top.

Israel, Fearing Peace, Ignores Sadat's Signals For Settlement

Israel has grown and prospered throughout 24 years of intermittent war with its Arab neighbors, but would it be able to come as sturdily through a protracted period of peace?

The government in Tel Aviv is obviously reluctant to try the experiment. Peace could be had, right now, on terms highly favorable to Israel, more favorable than anything possible since the founding of the state of Iarael in 1948. President Sadat of Egypt has been frantically signaling his desire for a settlement. But so far Prime Minister Golda Meir reminds one of Nelson at the battle of Copenhagen. He put his telescope to his blind eye.

THE QUESTION disturbing western diplomats is how long Mr. Sadat can survive in his present condition without a settlement with Israel.

He has broken with Russia, to a degree which continues to amaze the West. Russian reconnaissance planes have left the Mediterranean. There is no more aerial surveillance of the U.S. Sixth fleet. The Russians literally are leaving Egypt. Most have left already. It is not even certain that Russian naval units will continue to use Egyptian ports. In Washington, it sounds too good to be true. Yet each succeeding report confirms an almost complete Russian withdrawal.

This is fine for Mr. Sadat, for the immediate future. The Russians had been too long in Egypt. Their presence had become unwelcome. Mr. Sadat threw them out. But he threw them out because they were interested in endless continued tension in the Middle East, not in any settlement between Egypt and Israel. Mr. Sadat had to throw them out as a first step to a settlement which they did not want, and persistently prevented.

But now the Russians are going and will soon be gone. That clears the way, so far as Mrs. Sadat is concerned, for a settlement. But if Israel refuses to walk halfway down the road toward him, he continues to be unable to get peace for his country.

Sooner or later he either gets a settlement with Israel, or will be overthrown. Perhaps the Russians come back at that stage.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT is satisfied that right now would be the ideal moment for Israel to open talks pointed at long-term settlement. It would happily start pushing Tel Aviv toward such a settlement, were it free to do so. It isn't. The White House has forbidden any pressure of even the gentlest sort on Prime Minister Meir, at least until after election day. And no other western government has any leverage in Israel comparable to Washington's.

So the prospect is for no serious approach toward peace by Israel through this year. And can Mr Sadat last that long without a prospect of peace? It seems doubtful.

In other words, the state of controlled tension which Moscow preferred seems also to be preferred in Tel Aviv for the obvious reason that Israel thrives best when under presumed and continuing threat.

Perhaps the Russians are getting smart. They may hurt Iurael far more by walking out of the Middle East than they did by coming in.

Republicans Find Way To Spend Embarrassment Of Riches

MIAMI BEACH — The money keeps rolling in for Nixon. Conservative estimates indicate that by October the Republicans will have $2 billion to re-elect the President.

The concern here in Miami was that since it won't cost more than $50 million for the 1972 campaign, the Republicans will have a surplus of $1.950 billion.

This problem was given serious discussion at the convention. I overheard a group of Republican financial people discussing it in the Boom Boom Room at the Fontainebleau on the last night.

"WE'VE GOT to spend the money," one Republican executive said. "How do we do it?"

"Why don't we bug the offices of every Democratic Party club in the country?"

"That would only take care of $2 million," another Republican said. "We've got to come up with something dramatic to make the people who donated money believe their gesture was worthwhile."

"I think we should invest the money in tax shelters. There's no sense giving it to the government who will throw it away on wasteful welfare giveaway programs."

"WHY DON'T WE buy our own television network so we can tell it like it really is?" a Republican suggested.

"That's not a bad idea. We could make Spiro Agnew news director."

"Dammit," said one of the men, "we're not thinking big. Surely there is something we can do that will catch the imagination of the American people"

"How about buying Alaska? Then we wouldn't have to worry about it going in the Democratic column."

"You're on the right track."

"We could make a bid for ITT. W've got a close association with them anyway."

"No, I think we should buy the telephone company instead. Then we could make sure the Democrats don't get any phone service for the next four years."

"What about bailing out Lockheed? Surely they could use the money and it would help us win California."

"I don't think we should use Republican money to bail out Lockheed. That's the government's job."

"HOW ABOUT building Richard Nixon football stadiums all over the country? That would please the President."

"We could buy him a pro football team for his birthday," someone suggested.

"These are all good ideas but they don't seem right," the leader of the group said. "You have to remember this is not our money. It belongs to millionaires and bankers and corporation executives. They earned this money through their own sweat, and they're going to be watching what we do with it."

"Why tell how much money we took in?" a man said. "Why not just declare $50 million. Nobody will be the wiser."

"That would be illegal. Besides, someone will find out about it and try to make it a political issue."

A MAN JUMPED up. "Wait a minute! Wait a minute! I think I've got it. Why don't we announce that for the week before the election, the Republican Party will pay for the bombing of Vietnam. It won't cost the taxpayer a cent."

"That's it," everybody said at once. "We'll give the country a free week of bombing. It's a taxpayer's dream!"

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Aug. 26, the 239th day of 1972 with 127 to follow.

The moon is between its full phase and last quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mars and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Virgo.

Socttish statesman and novelist John Buchan was born Aug. 26, 1875.

On this day in history:

In 1883, the volcano of Krakatoa in the Netherlands East Indies began erupting. Before it subsided the following day, two-thirds of the island had been laid waste and 36,000 persons were dead.

In 1920, women were given the right to vote as the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution went into effect.

In 1964, President Lyndon Johnson and Sen. Hubert Humphrey were selected to head the Democratic ticket.

Jazz And Classical Mix: Don Ellis Band In Marin

The sight of an 18-year-old classical cellist lugging her amplified cello into Marin Veterans Memorial Auditorium, amid two dozen jazz musicians would boggle the mind of most any self-respecting jazz aficionado.

Classical cellists just aren't found in big-time jazz bands, let alone female classical cellists only recently out of high school.

Mind boggling or not, Patsy Kudzia will be playing her amplified cello in two performances tomorrow of the Don Ellis 21-Piece Quadraphonic Space Music Band at the Marin auditorium.

A trumpeter, composer and arranger of avante-garde jazz, Ellis has recently added an innovative feature to his 21-man band: a classical string quartet. And the quartet includes Miss Kudzia, an effervescent brunette who lives in Los Angeles when not on tour with the Ellis extravaganza.

Miss Kudzia will be joined on stage by two violinists and a viola player. Using the string quartet as the springboard for an assortment of wild imporivisations, the Ellis band is known for its unique time signatures and unusual rhythms.

Miss Kudzia joined the group in April after she was recommended by her instructor, cellist Gabor Rejto.

Since then she has been touring the country in a bus with the Ellis band.

Miss Kudzia was trained in classical music and performed with the Oregon Symphony, and never considered jazz music until Don Ellis came along.

"I never even listened to jazz before I got the job," she said. "In fact, I never knew anyone who ever bothered with jazz.

"Sure, I was afraid when I first saw the music. Don's rhythms are so much different from anything I'd ever seen. It takes a while to get used to."

After four months on tour and in the recording studio, Miss Kudzia has made the musical transition, but she's still stunned by the band's sound each night.

"With a jazz band, every time I play, it's an awakening experience, a discovery. Your mind has to be in another place when you approach jazz than when you approach classical music. You have to learn to flow with the music."

Ellis recently scored the films "The French Connection" and "Kansas City Bomber". The film credits plus several albums on Columbia have helped pack college auditoriums and jazz clubs wherever the band has appeared on cross-country tours.

The band will perform at the auditorium at 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. tomorrow — complete with string quartet.

A cellist since she was 11, Miss Kudzia says she has no definite plans on the horizon. For the present, she'll just play her amplified cello while the rest of the band "blows their brains out."

WITH ELLIS BAND — Cellist Patsy Kudzia will join the 21-piece Don Ellis Band tomorrow for two performances at Marin Veterans Auditorium. She is a member of the classical string quartet which accompanies Ellis's avante-garde jazz band.

More Buses Slated For Lucas Valley

Expansion of commuter bus service to Lucas Valley and express bus service between Terra Linda and San Francisco will start Monday, Golden Gate Bridge District officials reported yesterday.

The new route 40 serving Lucas Valley commuters weekdays will leave Mount McKinley and Idylberry roads in the morning at 6:30, 6:45, 7:05 and 7:25 o'clock.

It will depart from First and Fremont streets in San Francisco in the afternoon at 4:45, 5:00, 5:15 and 5:30 o'clock, and will follow the financial district route.

Route 36 express runs from Terra Linda at 6:28 a.m. and 6:53 a.m. will bypass San Rafael. Evenings, express service will be on the runs leaving from First and Fremont at 4:50 and 5:20 o'clock.

The new service, previously authorized by district directors, was announced at the board's regular meeting.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

SAND — Bought 2,500 tons of sand for sandblasting from Lone Star Industries Inc. of San Francisco for $20,000.

SEDAN — Bought an air-conditioned sedan from Courtesy Ford of Napa for $3,999.

DESIGN — Approved an $18,000 contract with Sverdrup and Parcel for design plans and specifications for bus facilities in Novato and Santa Rosa.

SMART — Renewed for fiscal 1972-73 the district's annual contract with attorney Richard Smart of San Francisco for $30,000. He was hired last year to handle the district's applications for federal grants. The district has won $25 million in grants since he was hired.

SAUSALITO — Extended for four months the district's lease with Donlan Argues for its Marinship parking lot at a cost of $1,200 a month.

Colombia Airliner Hijacked To Cuba

BOGOTA (UPI) — Three armed men seized a Colombian airliner with 27 other persons aboard Friday and forced it to fly to Cuba.

The Colombian civil aeronautics agency said the TAO domestic airlines Viscount propjet landed at Camaguey, Cuba. The airline said the Colombian government has asked the Swiss embassy in Havana to make arrangements for the return of the plane, its six crew members and the 21 passengers.

Carmaker Announces Price Rise Holdout

DETROIT (UPI)—American Motors Corp. has decided to hold out for a full $157 price increase on its 1973 model cars, despite government-induced backpeddaling by General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co.

The decision, announced Friday by AMC President William V. Luneburg, marked a partial reversal of its previous position on 1973 increases.

The company had said earlier that it would forego a requested $79 increase to cover labor and material costs, but would not bend to pressure from the Nixon administration's Cost of Living Council that it rescind its $78 increase request to go towards the cost of government required safety and pollution control equipment.

Luneburg said AMC reconsidered its initial position and concluded that it was "fully entitled" to the full increase.

In addition, he said, "We cannot reduce the amount of the increase to cover safety and emission costs."

Chrysler Corp. is the only other auto company to stand by its initial request for a $110 increase on 1973 models. GM and Ford reduced their original requests by $31 and $33 respectively and both are now seeking $59 hikes.

The Price Commission Thursday ordered the car companies to keep their 1973 model prices at 1972 model levels until the conclusion of hearings on the price hike requests which begin Sept. 12 and probably will last until sometime in early October. All the companies will have begun selling their new models by that time.

Luneburg said AMC will abide by the Price Commission's directive "but we will continue to press for consideration of our request which we feel has been well documented."

AMC is the smallest of the "Big Four" automakers.

Morena Sworn In As School Boss

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Steven P. Morena, 51, of Larkspur, was sworn in yesterday as superintendent of the San Francisco School District to replace Thomas Shaheen who stepped down under pressure and with $56,000 severance pay.

Shaheen, who had two years of his four-year contract remaining, quit with a blast at the Board of Eeucation that it had "blown a chance for educational greatness."

Morena, appointed on a 6-1 vote, was assistant chancellor of the San Francisco Community College District and former president of Oakland's Laney College.

A native of San Francisco, he graduated from San Francisco State College and received his master's and doctoral degrees from Stanford University.

He was appointed to a two-year contract at the same $42,000 a year salary that was paid to Shaheen.

Shaheen's resignation came at a boisterous meeting at which several speakers denounced the board of education.

Shaheen said the board had substituted a "retrogressive position which will make the mediocre schools of San Francisco even poorer."

Petaluma Open Space Study Due

The Petaluma City Council will consider a proposed interim open space element at its meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The plan proposes that hills around Petaluma be kept as open space as well as land designated as flood plains along the Petaluma River and its tributaries.

The council also will review a proposed project schedule for the planning department.

G.M. Recalls Weak-Axled Limousines

DETROIT (upi)—Cadillac has recalled its entire 1972 model production line of ambulances, hearses and luxury limousines and sedans—a total of nearly 4,000 vehicles—to replace weak rear axles.

Cadillac, a division of General Motors Corp., said Friday rear axle shafts on the vehicles were improperly tempered and could break, causing the rear weels to fall off.

A company spokesman said there have been seven reported axle shaft failures, one of them involving a hearse, and six involving ambulances. There have been no injuries, the spokesman said.

Cadillac manufacturers chassis for builders of ambulances and hearses.

The limousines are part of Cadillac's Series 75 line of nine-passenger cars, the longest if not the most luxurious models built by GM.

Cadillac said it would arrange for replacement of the axle shafts on all of the vehicles involved without charge to the owners.

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon Monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:

San Francisco, light air pollution.

San Jose, significant air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, while the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Four Films Due Fair Showing

Four films from the National Gallery of Art in Washington D.C., will be included in the entertainment program of the Marin County Fair, Thursday through Sept. 4.

The films and their schedules are:

"Art in the Western World," a description of the National Gallery and the works in its collection, Thursday; "The American Vision," tracing the development of American painting from pre-Revolutionary days to the 20th Century, Friday; "Time Enough to See the World," an analysis of paintings from the Renaissance to the 20th Century, Sept. 2; and "The National Gallery of Art," a tour of the major paintings in the gallery collection, Sept. 4.

Each film will be shown at 5 p.m. in the Veterans Memorial Building at the civic center, site of the fair.

'Pack Rat' Suspect To Napa

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court has committed David Richard Massagli, 33, accused San Anselmo "Pack rat" burglar, to Napa State Hospital.

The judge suspended criminal proceedings in Massagli's case after reviewing reports from two psychiatrists who said they did not think Massagli is presently sane within the meaning of the law.

Massagli, who has pleaded innocent to charges of burglary and resisitng arrest, was arrested June 19 while hiding in the kitchen of a San Anselmo home.

A subsequent search of his home at 23 Brookside Drive in San Anselmo turned up enough loot to fill a dozen trucks.

Police believe he is responsible for about 50 burglaries within 10 blocks of his home during the past three years.

Arab Leaders To Meet Over Israel

CAIRO (UPI)—Arab Foreign Ministers will meet next month to discuss methods of getting Israel out of the occupied territories and strengthening the Arab League, the Al Ahram newspaper said today.

The ministers will meet Sept. 9. Arab League Secretary-General Mahmoud Riad has already suggested this meeting draw up a plan dealing with the continuing Israeli occupation of Arab lands. The plan would then be submitted to a full summit meeting of Arab Kings and heads of state for action.

Defiant Magee In Walkout

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Ruchell Magee walked out of the courtroom yesterday, but without the fuss accompanying previous frequent departures.

Magee, during pre-trial proceeding in the charges of murder and conspiracy against him, asked Superior Judge Morton Colvin if he could leave.

Colvin said no, but Magee rose and started to leave anyway.

"You will not be permitted to return until you give me an assurance that you will not further disrupt the court," the judge warned Magee.

The convict left the courtroom and entered a nearby holding cell where he could hear court activity through a loudspeaker.

Magee faces trial in connection with the Aug. 7, 1970, shootout at the Marin County Civic Center.

His next appearance is scheduled for Sept. 5 when Colvin plans to hear the question of whether Magee is competent to act as his own attorney as he wishes to.

Innocent Plea To Drunken Driving

A Richmond man has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a felony charge of drunken driving that resulted in an accident July 27 on Highway 101 in which he and four other persons were injured.

A preliminary hearing for Loycell Peacock, 34, was scheduled for Sept. 7.

According to the California Highway Patrol, Peacock's car crossed to the side of the highway near Marin City and hit a car driven by a Daly City man.

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

It is amazing to me that anyone still can watch those late shows such as NBC's "Tonight" and the Dick Cavett program on ABC. The sameness, night after night, turned me off long ago. CBS sensibly gave up in this area by cancelling Merv Griffin and turning the time over to old movies. Which makes it easy to turn off the set at the conclusion of the 11 p.m. news.

If you remember how Carol Burnett, the best protean comedienne on television, began her video career, you have been around quite a while and have a remarkable memory. In the very early 1950s, she was sort of a stooge on a program that starred ventriloquist Paul Winchell. Followed quickly by a quick failure in a series entitled "Stanley," in which she was vis-a-vis comic Buddy Hackett.

Comedian Lily Tomlin has been signed as a guest star on three variety shows in the fall. She will appear Oct. 30 on "The Bill Cosby Show" on CBS, Carol Burnett's CBS hour on Nov. 6 and ABC's "The Julie Andrews Show" Dec. 13.

Lynn Klugman, a television associate director, is the niece of star Jack Klugman of "The Odd Couple" series.

Jonathan Winters Prefers The Quiet Life

By VERNON SCOTT

Jonathan Winters, whose brand new "Wacky World of Jonathan Winters" goes into first-run syndication this fall, lives in a most unwacky personal world.

Winters lives as quietly and privately as possible in Hollywood, choosing to remain at home with his wife, Eileen, and daughter, Lucinda, 16.

His son, Jay, has been graduated from college and is out on his own.

Home and hearth are reminiscent of his childhood homes in Dayton and Springfield, Ohio. The house is large, abounding in rooms all tastefully and conservatively furnished. The grounds include a swimming pool and great expanses of lawn.

The most striking element of the Winters' home is a dazzling display of paintings, somehow suggesting Salvadore Dali.

The canvases are a riot of arresting colors, bright blues, reds, yellows and greens done in acrilic. Many are humorous. Some are compositons of intricate design. Surrealistic.

Next to painting Winters finds fishing the most relaxing avocation of all.

In 1969 he won a game fish tournament off the coast of Florida. He has fished for the big ones in Hawaii, Panama and Mexico. Jonathan has wet lines in the Rocky Mountains for trout and in northern California for bigger fish.

His favorite charity is the American Indian. He contributes time and money generously to a variety of tribes across the country with as little publicity as possible.

A complex man of many moods, Winters dislikes traveling around the country. Invariably he is approached by total strangers who ask: "Are you Jonathan Winters?"

Grudingly Winters admits his guilt:

Because he has created so many characters in his years on television and in night club appearances, the intruder frequently askes Winters to "do Maude Frickert" or one of the others.

An intensively shy and introverted man, Winters simply signs an autograph and begs off miming his characters.

In the comfortable surrounds of his home Winters is more at ease.

Fascinating as many a museum room is Jonathan's den. He is a compulsive collector. Every corner of the large room is filled with mementoes and objects d'art he has picked up in his travels around the world.

He has, for instance, one of the rarest collections of lead soldiers in the Western world. They stand in array between bookshelves.

Indian relics of all kinds are set proudly on view.

This is where Winters spends a great deal of time, surrounded by inanimate objects, almost all of which have some personal meaning for him.

And it is in the den, too, one is likely to mistake the real Maude Frickert, a large and elderly matron of a dog which appears to be a golden spaniel, for a lumpy throw-rug.

Winters tapes his show several times a week at ABC studios working without a script most of the time. His humor is actually based on characters he has known at one time in his life and for maximum impact he improvises whenever possible.

Although he plays nightclubs, Winters avoids them most of the time. Drunks in the crowd annoy and anger him. As is the case with most comedians, Winters seldom makes an attempt to be humorous when he's not working.

He does, however, possess a sardonic wit and a keen eye and ear for mimicry. Heaven protect the man who sinks a barb in Jonathan Winters when he is in a mood to respond.

On the other hand, and unexpectedly, Winters may jump into one of his characters and fracture a group of close friends with a few minutes of ad lib monologue. Just as quickly the mood subsides and he is once again the shy man from Ohio.

Eileen and Jonathan have been married 23 years and spend more time together than most Hollywood couples.

Jonathan's long-range plans include a home in the mountains where he can fish, paint and be with his wife.

The deeper into the wilderness, the better.

On The Stereo Scene

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Big Broadway musicals inevitably are converted into movie spectaculars but only rarely is the trend reversed and a film transplanted to the Broadway stage.

Remember "Some Like It Hot?" It starred Marilyn Monroe, Tony Curtis and Jack Lemmon in a crazy comedy that had the male heroes wearing women's clothes during much of the action. Now it is a Broadway hit, "Sugar."

Elaine Joyce has the lead role as "Sugar" with Robert Morse and Tony Roberts in the parts portrayed by Curtis and Lemmon. The story is about the same as the movie but the stage version has an excellent score by Jule Styne and Bob Merrill.

As far as the original Broadway cast album (United Artists UAS-9905), Cyril Ritchard seems to be the sentimental favorite. Ritchard, cast as Osgood Fielding, Jr., has only two vocals — "November Song" and "Beautiful Through and Through" — but he handles them so nicely and with such little effort that the listener might wish for more.

Most of the songs are lively, from the opening "Penniless Blues" to the fast-tempoed closer, "When You Meet a Man in Chicago" by Sheila Smith, the Society Syncopaters and Vocal Ensemble.

"Sugar" is enjoying a nice run on Broadway and probably will be around for some time because the music is strictly show tunes, written for each situation.

PAUL ROBESON was a black militant at a time when it was not only unfashionable but dangerous to be one. As the nation went through critical periods, Robeson became a most controversial man but that has now been forgotten. The first recordings made by Robeson in the late 1920s are now available on an LP, "Songs of My People" (RCA IM3292.)

RICHARD MARSHALL, chief engineer at Marin's Radio Station KTIM and himself an entertainer before going into electronics, is happiest when he has some motion picturé film in hand — especially if it is footage from one of the old and classic movies. Film buff Marshall is one of the organizers of the Lyric Photoplay Society, an organization dedicated to the preservation of old films endangered by time and neglect. And because of his hobby he has taken a special interest in the program for the 1972 Marin County Fair opening Thursday at the Civic Center fairgrounds. Old-time comedy films are to be shown all five days of the fair in the Marin Veterans' Memorial Building auditorium. Marshall, and other film buffs, can be counted on to be present. (Independent-Journal photo)

A Gathering Of The Old-Time Comics

Marin County's fair program will pay a deserved tribute to the early comics who were, says a buff of old films, the kings of the motion picture industry, and who remain as funny today as they were when their movies were first released.

Movies of today are more than 60 years old in style and format, and if you don't believe it, view "The Birth of a Nation," made by D. W. Griffith back in 1914.

Richard Marshall, chief engineer at Radio Station KTIM and an "old movie buff," claims that by 1914 "every one of the cinematic devices currently in vogue had been put into use."

"We already had a full language of the screen more than 60 years ago," he asserts, and his experience with old-time movies, his enthusiasm and his understanding of the film medium make him most convincing.

UPON LEARNING that old and classic comedies of Charlie Chaplin, W. C. Fields, Laurel and Hardy and Buster Keaton will be played during the 1972 Marin County Fair, from Thursday through Monday, Sept. 4, Marshall began to enthuse about this form of the arts.

"Comedy was the foundation of the film industry," he says, "and the first known film with a plot —going back to 1896 and made by a Frenchman named Lumiere — was a comedy.

"It was called "Watering the Gardener,' and it showed a man watering his lawn when along came a boy who stepped on the garden hose and shut off the flow of water.

"WHEN THE man looked into the end of the hose to find out why the water didn't gush out, the boy stepped off the hose and the man was drenched," Marshall still laughs as he tells the story.

"This exact plot has been used hundreds, perhaps thousands, of times since then," he adds.

The schedule of the old-time comedies, which will be shown from 60 to 80 minutes beginning at 11 a.m. daily during the fair in the Marin Veterans' Memorial Building auditorium, includes "The Barbership," "The Pharmacist" and "Pool Sharks" with W. C. Fields on Thursday, and Fields' "The Fatal Glass of Beer," "The Dentist" and "The Golf Specialist" on Friday.

ON SATURDAY, Chaplin will be featured in "Behind the Screen," "Easy Street," "The Rink" and "The Cure," while on Sunday it will be Laurel and Hardy in "Below Zero," "Leave 'em Laughing" and "The Music Box."

On Monday Keaton will be starring in "My Wife's Relations," "Cops" and "Balloonatics."

"Chaplin and Stan Laurel came to this country together in an English music hall act called 'Fred Karno's Mumingbirds' in 1912," Marshall says. "Chaplin was hired for films, but Laurel returned to England and it wasn't until he came back here in 1917, during World War I, that he started his own film career."

"HE WASN'T teamed with Oliver Hardy until the mid-1920s, and their first film was called 'Putting Pants on Phillip,' " Marshall reports.

"The Laurel and Hardy style of comedy was called 'two minds without a single thought,' " Marshall chuckles, "and I love it."

Currently Marshall is involved in the presentation of silent films with organ accompaniment in the Avenue Theater in San Francisco, founded by two friends, Edward M. Stout III and Vernon Gregory.

BUT HIS MAIN concern is the preservation of old films, and he has made public requests for anyone who knows anything about the location of "People involved in working with their hands are happy people, and the products they produce provide happiness for the buyer. The whole industry has good vibes," believes Jack Haehl, who works often and creatively with his own hands and teaches his skills to others.

Marin Feels The Crafts Explosion

County Fair Is One Place Where Impact Will Be Felt

More craftsmen are making better things that are in greater demand by more people.

That sums up today's world of crafts and is particularly applicable to Marin County, according to Jack Haehl, accomplished craftsman, high school teacher, design consultant, and crafts coordinator for the 1972 Marin County Fair.

"THE CRAFTS that will be on display during the five days of the fair — starting Thursday and continuing through Sept. 4, Labor Day — will be illustrative of what is happening in the creative arts," Haehl promises. something that is innovative and specific trends as the soaring increase of interest in ceramics during the past decade, and such more general patterns "as the new freedom that artists enjoy to do what they want to do because purchasers are more willing to use or wear something that is innovative and different."

Haehl teaches painting, sculpture and crafts at Terra Linda High School, and also conducts classes in drawing and painting at San Quentin Prison two nights a week.

HE IS ALSO a design consultant for the Victor Equipment Co., makers of welding equipment.

"The crafts which have been selected for the Fair by our judges, and which will be presented in more than 40 booths on the fairgrounds at the Civic Center, cover stained glass, leather work, blown glass, wood sculpture, weaving, patchwork, embroidery, cast jewelry, and many, many more activities," Haehl says.

"But I think the most popular craft right now is ceramics," Haehl notes, "and that's quite a change from, say, 10 years ago, when small handicraft like belts and rings were so popular."

"IT'S BECAUSE there is more money available for craftsmen now," Haehl explains that trend. "Ceramics requires a wheel or an electric kiln, and the artists can afford to buy this equipment now instead of making do with the small handicraft kits like we did in the 1950s and early 1960s."

Haehl also notes that many craftsmen are into sculpture, using welding and similar industrial equipment, because companies are producing smaller tool units that the artisans can afford.

"Many craftsmen are abandoning the traditional material like stone and wood," Haehl grins, "although there are still some of us old fogies around."

HAEHL HIMSELF works in wood, and he was the designer of the eight-foot mahogany-on-mahogany cross that decorates the sanctuary of the new First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael.

When the handsome old stone edifice that had served the congregation so many years was razed, services were transferred temporarily to the social hall pending completion of a new church building. Haehl's impressive cross was part of a redecorating program to fit the social hall for its new role.

"People nowadays would rather have a piece of original art or craft instead of a factory-made piece," Haehl asserts, "and this means more freedom and a greater market for the craftsman."

HAEHL ALSO points to the development of handicraft and art instruction in the schools as a reason for the "crafts explosion."

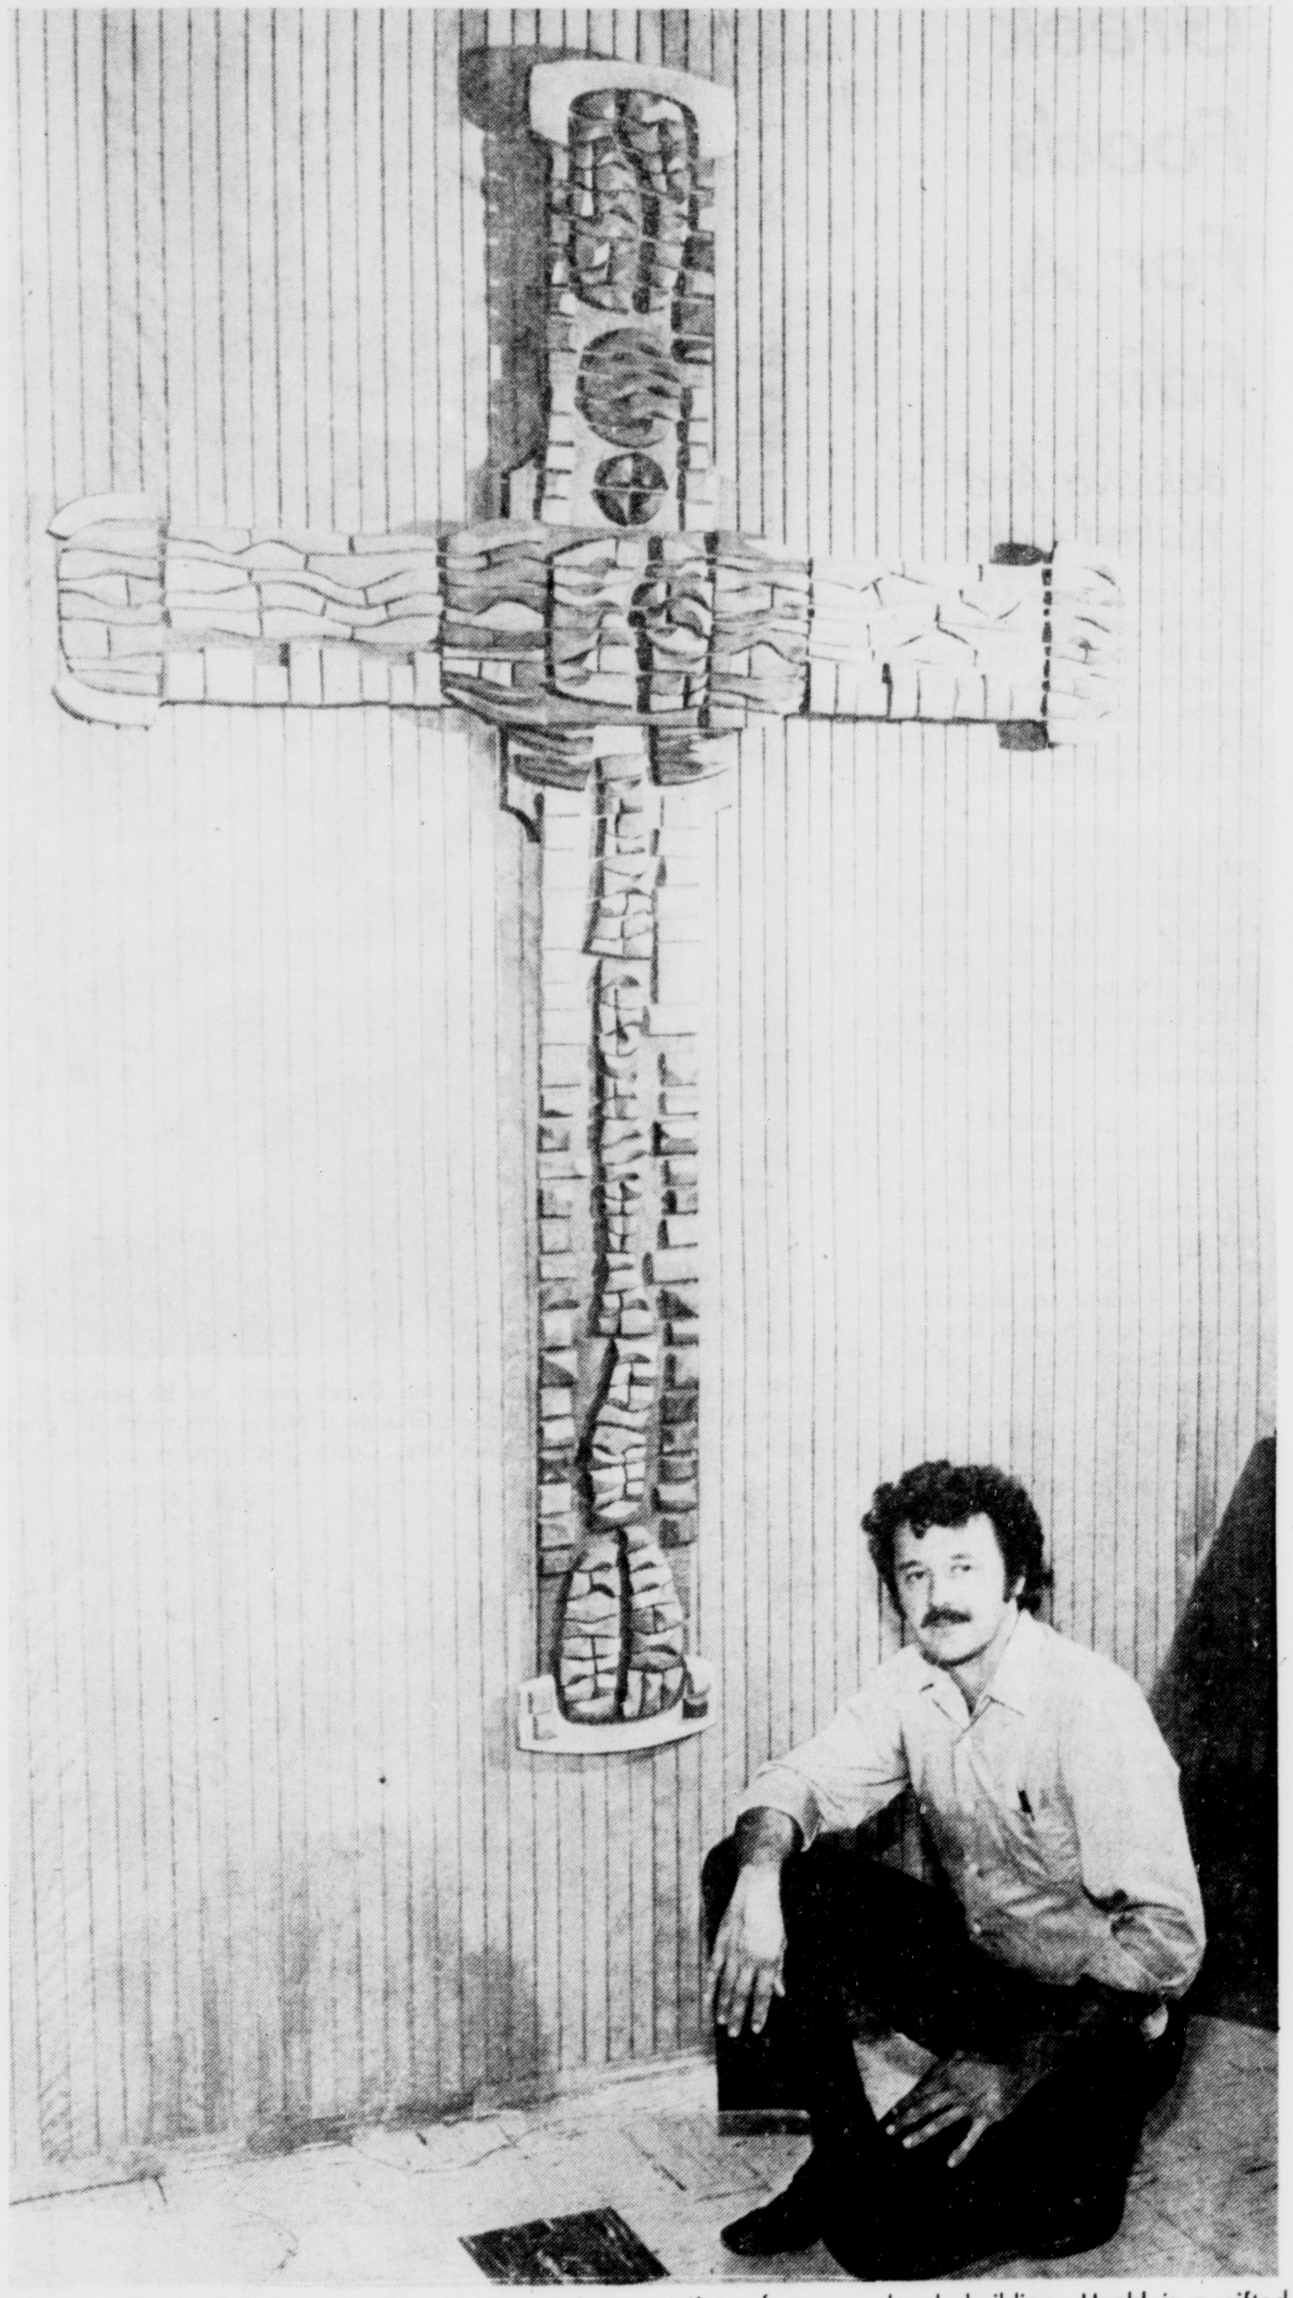
"Most high schools in Marin are teaching art at the college level," he says. "Now there are more mature craftsmen at an earlier age.

"As an example, Dan Losee at Terra Linda High is in the second year with his course in Creative Plastics and Woods, and the products which his students are turning out are wonderful."

But Hael also notes that the craftsmen who were working with their hands 10 years ago are still around and are still producing items which the public finds attractive.

"PEOPLE ARE incorporating crafts in their lives now, and this is of great help to the artist," Haehl says with satisfaction. "I am tremendously pleased with the variety and the quality of the crafts we will display at the Fair because I believe the artists who are represented will offer a comprehensive picture of what people are interested in today."

"People involved in working with their hands are happy people," Haehl believes, "and the products they produce provide happiness for the buyer. The whole industry has good vibes."



JACK HAEHL inspects the eight-foot-high cross that he crafted from mahogany for the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael to help transform its social hall into a place of worship pending the construction of a new church building. Haehl is a gifted designer, artisan and teacher, and will be in charge of the crafts department at the 1972 Marin County Fair. (Independent-Journal photos)

Greek Foods For A Fair

Baklava And Walnut Cake

The last of some 8,000 pieces of Greek pastry is about ready to go into the oven this weekend as members of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin prepare for the opening of the 1972 Marin County Fair on Thursday.

The church is sponsoring a refreshment booth at the fair, and members of the Philoptochos Society, the ladies auxiliary of the church, will staff the booth during the five days, from Thursday through Sept. 4, Labor Day, at the Civic Center fairgrounds.

BUT THE LADIES have more responsibilities than just serving in the booth. They have organized into groups and have produced the Greek pastries which will be served from the booth — 8,000 pieces of baklava, koulouria, karithopeta, kourambethes, melomakarona and other Greek delicacies.

Baklava is the honey and nut squares that are familiar to anyone who has ever eaten in a Greek restaurant, and the other pastries are just as delicious. Koulouria is a braided cookie with an orange taste; karithopeta is a walnut cake, while kourambethes is a butter cookie covered with powdered sugar, and melomakarona is a cookie covered with chopped walnuts, cinnamon and sugar.

Under the direction of Mrs. Milton Sideris of Terra Linda, as general chairman, and co-chairmen Mrs. James Kambur, Terra Linda, and Mrs. Dom Selmi, San Rafael, the members of the Philoptochos Society have met for the past two or three weeks to do the tremendous amount of baking necessary to meet the requirements of hungry fairgoers.

A GROUP OF six or eight women met in Terra Linda and in two days prepared more than 1,000 pieces of baklava. The other pastries were baked individually in homes of the members.

By the time the "pastry stockpiling" will be completed, there will be about 1,500 pieces of Koulouria, prepared by one group baking 500 and another group producing 1,000; there will also be some 1,500 kourambethes, the same number of melamakarona, and about 1,200 pieces of the karithopeta.

There will be other Greek pastries served at the booth, too. And the ladies expect the entire production to be gone by the end of the fair.

THE HONEY-RICH baklava is the Greek pastry to be served by the women of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin with which the general public is most familiar. Here Mrs. Costa Dracopoulos of San Rafael removes a sheet of these delicacies from the oven. Some 1,500 pieces of baklava are being baked for hungry fair-goers.

MRS. JAMES ADAMS of Novato offers teen-ager Irene Perivolaris, left, also of Novato, a sample from a plate of kourambethes, the powdered sugar butter cookie certain to be a favorite with nibblers at the 1972 Marin County Fair when it opens next Thursday. Mrs. Adams is the wife of Fr. James Adams, the pastor of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin County.

THE RECIPES

KARITHOPETA
(Walnut Cake)

1 cup sugar
½ tsp. cloves
1½ tsp. baking powder
1 cup salad oil
½ tsp. cinnamon
1 cup chopped walnuts
2 cups Bisquick
⅛ tsp. salt
½ tsp. soda
1 cup milk
4 eggs, unbeaten

Place all ingredients in one bowl and blend well together. Pour batter in ungreased pan. Bake 45 minutes or until cake loosens on sides of pan in 350 degree oven.

Syrup

Boil until slightly thick for about 20 minutes 1½ cups water, 1 cup sugar and a tablespoon lemon juice. Allow to cool and pour over warm cake slowly. Allow cake to set for at least five hours.

KOURAMBETHES
(Powdered Sugar Butter Cookies)

1 lb. sweet butter (room temperature)
½ cup powdered sugar
2 egg yolks

Beat together until light in color — about 30 minutes — then add one level teaspoon baking powder.
Sift flour and add flour a cup at a time to a soft consistency (so you can form a round ball). Form cookies in any shape you like. Bake 25 minutes in 350 degree oven until light brown.

While still hot sift powdered sugar over entire cookie. Let cool completely and recover cookies with powdered sugar.

KOULOURIA
(Cookie)

1 cup butter
2 cups sugar
6 eggs
8 -9 cups flour
1 cup warm milk
4 Tb. baking powder

In a large bowl beat eggs thoroughly. Add sugar. Warm the milk. In a very large glass place warm milk with baking powder. Stir well. Add in egg and sugar mixture. Add flour slowly, while mixing dough well by hand. Make dough into a braid shape. If desired you may make several other shapes. Place cookies in greased cookie sheets.

In a small bowl combine 1 egg and 1 tsp. orange extract. Beat well. Brush on top of each cookie before placing them in oven. Bake at 355 degrees for about 15 to 25 minutes or until brown on top. Makes about two dozen cookies.

MELAMAKARONA

1½ cups oil
1½ cups sugar
½ glass orange juice
6 eggs
dash of cinnamon
8 -9 cups flour
1 Tb. baking powder
1½ tsp. soda
½ tsp. vanilla

Mix oil, and sugar in a large bowl. Then beat in eggs, cinnamon and vanilla. Mix baking soda, baking powder, and orange juice in a glass. Beat that in. Add flour in while mixing dough by hand. Bake at 325 degree 20 to 25 minutes.

Syrup

1 cup sugar
4 Tb. honey
1 cup water

Mix together in a pot. Cook over high heat until it boils. Let it boil for 5 minutes. Put Melomakarona in syrup for 1 minute. Let cook, then dip in chopped walnuts, cinnamon and sugar.

BAKLAVA

3 lbs. walnuts, chopped coarse
3 lbs. almonds, chopped coarse
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. nutmeg and all-spice
3 Tbs. sugar
1 lb. filo (strudel dough)
1 lb. butter

Mix nuts, sugar and spice in bowl. Butter a large pan — place seven layers of filo buttering each one separately. Put half of nut mixture on top. Place two more layers of filo — each buttered. Put in rest of nut mixture. Finish with rest of filo — buttering each as before. Butter top filo well. Bake at 325 degrees for about one hour.

Syrup

3 cups sugar
4 cups water
1 slice lemon

Boil for 15 minutes. Let cool. Place over warm Baklava. Cut in diamond shapes.

A Taste Treat For Fairgoers

ship of the booth, described the dedication of the women.

"IF WE NEED more pastries than we have planned, the ladies have said they will go home after the fair closes at 10 p.m. each night and make more of the cookies, the baklava and the walnut cake," Father Adams said.

The booth at the fair, which the church is sponsoring for the second consecutive year, and the Greek Festival at the Civic Center, which is also an activity of the church, support the Church's building fund.

At present, Father Adams noted, the church is using facilities made available by the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, but the Congregation's plan is to build a building of their own on property the church owns in Ignacio.

THEY HOPE TO begin construction at the end of 1973, Father Adams said, and the efforts of the Philoptochos (a Greek word meaning "Friend of the Poor") Society are vital in meeting this goal.

So forget the calories and try the baklava, or the karithopeta, or the melomakarona, or any of the other delicacies which will be served beginning Thursday in the Greek Orthodox Church booth at the Marin County Fair.

WITH AN ARRAY of appealing Greek pastries already on the table, Mrs. James Spallas, left, of Novato and Mrs. George Catel, also of Novato, take time from their baking to make sure a batch of baklava is exactly to their liking. The two women were participating in the mammoth task of preparing some 8,000 pieces of pastry for sale at the Philoptochos Society booth during the five-day run of the 1972 Marin County Fair, opening Thursday at the Marin civic Center fairgrounds.

Pure Sunshine, Lots Of Water

COVER PHOTO

GENEVIEVE BROWN walks through the backyard garden of her home on San Rafael's Grove Street where, despite its modest dimensions, she and her husband, Tom, produce a bounty of vegetables, fruits and flowers. They are organic gardeners. The ribbons in the photo were not grown in the garden. But they were the result of its harvests. Mrs. Brown hopes to add to her ribbon collection in the horticulture and floriculture sections of the 1972 Marin County Fair, opening Thursday.

There may be people who will win more ribbons than Mrs. Genevieve Brown from the fruits, vegetables and flowers they enter in the 1972 Marin County Fair, but no one will get more enjoyment from the competition.

Mrs. Brown, who has lived in San Rafael jll of her life, has a moderate-sized backyard on Grove Street. Last year she won five first prize ribbons, four seconds and four thirds, a total of 13 ribbons out of 16 entries, from the growing things in that plot.

This year she expects to enter in some 16 to 20 of the floriculture and horticulture classes, and to add to the total of more than 100 ribbons she has won in Marin County fairs over the past 20 eyars.

THE 1972 MARIN County Fair will begin Thursday and will continue through Labor Day on the Civic Center fairgrounds.

In addition to the floriculture and horticulture competition, there will be a juried art show, film competition, free outdoor entertainment, performances daily in the Auditorium Theater, and a host of commercial booths, refreshments and attractions for the youngsters, including a puppet show, circus, kiddie train and boat rides.

But Mrs. Brown and her husband Tom are mainly interested in the fruits, vegetables and flowers.

"WE USE PURE sunshine and lots of water to grow our plants," she said. "We Italians — my maiden name was Maggiore — love our gardens, and it takes a lot of hard work to get something nice out of the ground. We grow our fruits, vegetables and flowers in a natural organic way and we have been doing so for years, before it became so popular.

"The Labor Day weekend dates for this year's fair will be better for some plants, but not so good for others," Mrs. Brown observed. But she is confident she will have a good representation from her garden at the fair.

Last year Mrs. Brown took first ribbons for her Meyer lemon, her summer squash, her string beans, her fuchsias and her dwarf French marigolds. Her second places came for her white squash, Swiss chard, carnations and canna, and she received third place ribbons fgr lemon cucumbers, red and white potatoes and her lettuce.

THIS YEAR SHE is not sure exactly what she will enter, but based on past performance, with winning entries almost every year for the past two decades, Mrs. Brown will have more ribbons to add to her pile of prizes.

"We use a compost pile and give plenty of attention to our plants," she said. "I believe that potato peels, carrot peels and such things came out of the ground and should go back in to help other plants grow.

"I am also a firm believer in watering by hand and in soaking the ground. Sometimes it takes us two or three hours to water our plants."

"IF YOU WANT a nice place, you must work at it," she said firmly.

Besides gardening, Mrs. Brown spends her time as a baby-sitter with her five grandchildren, and she is as proud of the children she has raised as she is of her prize-winning plants.

The Browns have three boys and a girl, and they are a fourth generation Marin family, since their parents lived here, and now their children and grandchildren are Marinites.

Mrs. Brown and her husband were 4-H leaders when their children were youngsters, and that is how they became so enthusiastic about the floriculture and horticulture competitions in the fair.

"IT IS NOT only the ribbons that mean something," Genevieve Brown said, "it's knowing that plants which we have raised are as good or better than those of other people.

"And we don't just grow our plants for show, either," she smiled. "We eat what we grow, and I do a lot of canning, too."

Old Films At The New Fair

old films to contact him at KTIM.

"The negatives of the old-time movies were not as stable as is the current film stock, and we are in danger of losing many of the finest examples of old motion pictures because they were not stored properly, or not cared for, and are just disintegrating," Marshall mourns.

"We have organized the Lyric Photoplay Society to work toward the preservation of old films, and we are looking for any help we can get," he adds.

MARSHALL, A native of Texas who was a boy soprano, served in both World War II and the Korean War, and sang in musical comedy as a youngster. He sang the lead in the Western road company of "Oklahoma!" before entering the field of electronics and the engineering end of broadcasting. He has been with KTIM for three years.

He began his interest in old movies by getting involved in pipeorgans, which were used as musical background for the silent films,

"With 'The Birth of a Nation' in 1914, films passed out of the stage of being a curiosity and started to become a great social force," Marshall resumes his history of the cinema. "Why they even had 'dirty movies' back in the 1890s, and I have seen a documentary on venereal disease and prostitution made in 1915 that is as explicit as anything made today."

"THE ONLY difference is the nudity shown today," he adds.

"I love to watch Chaplin, Fields and the other old-time comedians," Marshall says, "because they are so professional.

"AND THEY are all so funny that you ignore the technical weaknesses, compared to the films of today, and just glory in their presentations," Marshall says. "I hope there are packed houses for these showings at the fair, because I think the public will really enjoy this kind of entertainment."

Richard Marshall, for certain, will be a part of the audiences, chuckling at antics he has seen many times, but still finds hilarious.

THE COMICS who reigned when the comedy was the staple of the movie industry will be featured in a Marin County Fair film festival of old classics. Starring in the line-up of all-time greats will be such immortals as Charlie Chaplin, left; W. C. Fields, above; Buster Keaton, below; and Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in the photograph at the bottom of the page. Showings will begin at 11 a.m. on each of the five fair days in the Marin Veterans' Memorial Building.

Their Music Comes From Dixie

"DIXIELAND IS happy music," say the members of the Olema Owls, and their smiling faces mirror their enjoyment as they urge on their trumpet man, Tom Leps, in a solo effort. The other Owls are, left to right, Ken Combs, Bruce Duncan, Jeremy Jones, Elmer Albritton and Rod Roberts. They'll be one of the featured attractions on the 1972 Marin County Fair program. By DON KEOWN

"The thing about Dixieland jazz is that it is happy music. The audience enjoys it, and the musicians enjoy it.

"It's smiling music."

Thus do the six Marin men of diverse professions, but sharing a common enthusiasm for the traditional jazz that came out of New Orleans, describe their favorite music.

They make up the regular membership of the Olema Owls, a group that has been playing together since 1959 and spreading the message that to hear Dixieland is to enjoy, enjoy!

THROUGH THE years they've played at private and club parties, at military bases, at weddings, at political rallies, at picnics, in schools, at pizza parlors, before Little League baseball games, at community celebrations.

In the coming week they are scheduled for four appearances — Thursday and Sunday nights, twice on Monday —at the Marin County Fair on the new Civic Center fairgrounds off Highway 101 north of San Rafael.

It will mark a first county fair appearance for a band that has played at just every other kind of place.

consists of Tom Leps of Greenbrae, trumpet; Jeremy Jones of Terra Linda, clarinet and tenor sax; Ken Combs of Terra Linda, trombone; Rod Roberts of Ross, piano; Bruce Duncan of Fairfax, tuba; and Elmer Albritton of Kentfield, drums.

"Sometimes," they say, "we will ask a banjoist to sit in with us as well."

Duncan is with Adam-Hill Co. of South San Francisco. Jones is director of foundation programs for the University of the Pacific; Combs is a United States District Court reporter or stenographer after working for years as a reporter in the court of Marin Superior Judge Thomas Keating; Leps is a cabinet-maker, furniture refinisher and water ski manufacturer; Roberts is a consulting mechanical engineer with the firm of Montgomery and Roberts, El Cerrito; and Albritton is a patent attorney with the law firm of Flehr, Rohbach, Test, Albritton and Herbert in San Francisco.

COMBS, DUNCAN, Jones, Roberts and Leps have been with the Owls, full or part-time, since their beginning 13 years ago.

Combs, who shares with Leps the leadership responsibilities, recalls that it all began one day when tuba player Duncan "came up to me, and asked if I would like to help him get a Dixieland group together. He had heard I liked the music, and he knew some other musicians who also dug it."

The group was formed, and because some of the earliest rehearsals were held in the old Druids' Hall in Olema, the name "Olema" was chosen for the band. The "Owls" was added for alliteration. And the name has stuck.

LEPS, UNTIL then an irregular with the Owls, became a regular in 1967. And Albritton became the last to join in 1969.

The Owls rehearse once a week, usually on a Wednesday night, at a member's home. They will average three or four engagements a month.

"And sometimes," says Ken Combs, "one of the fellows will simply get the urge for some music and will call the rest of us up. And we'll get together at some steakhouse or pizza palace for a jam session just for our own enjoyment."

"THE OTHER night we played for an hour at a gasoline service station justfor the heck of it," laughs Tom Leps.

All read music, and all began their interest in music in their school years.

Among the Owls, Jones has the most extensive musical background, having played professionally all over the world and having led his own groups.

But the others have had experience beyond their school bands as well. Leps, for example, played first trumpet in the U.S. Coast Guard Band. Combs was with the Hamilton Air Force Base Band.

THE OWLS stress that their repertoire is by no means limited to Dixieland. They will play dance music, sweet or swing. And they will play rock — "Watermelon Man," "Aquarius," etc.

"We play the kind of music the audience wants," says Leps.

But there is no question but that Dixieland is their favorite, and it will be featured on their Marin County Fair programs. "It fits the spirit of a fair," says Combs.

COMBS TELLS how the Owls came to land the spot on the Marin County Fairprogram. "I just happened to be walking past the county fair offices at the Civic Center, and on an impulse decided to go in and ask if there was a spot on the 1972 fair program for some good Dixieland music."

WHEN THE OWLS HOOT

The Olema Owls and their Dixieland jazz music will be heard four times from the outdoor stage of the fairgrounds at the Marin Civic Center during the five-day Marin County Fair.

The first appearance will be Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The Owls will also be heard Sunday, Sept. 3, at 7:30, and twice on Monday, Sept. 4, at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Fair Manager Marcelle McCoy asked him to bring in a tape of the Owls performing, then listened to it "and snapped us up."

The Owls have no big ambitions for a busier engagement schedule or for recordings. "We are satisfied doing just what we are doing now," Combs says. "We don't care to play any oftener. But the one thing we are interested in is playing better and better. And we think our music is improving steadily."

THE OWLS come equipped with "first class instruments" which easily exceed $5,000 in their total value. Included are amplifiers used only when playing in a very large hall or gymnasium, or for the piano during outdoor performances.

If no piano is available at the concert site, the Owls use instead as pianist Rod Roberts' instrument an electric organ belonging to Tom Leps.

The Owls wear natty red vests as a regular part of their performance attire. White shirts and white pants complete their costumes. Sometimes derby hats are worn as well in the spirit of the Dixieland music.

THE DIXIELAND repertoire includes such traditional tunes as "When the Saints Come Marching Home," "St. James' Infirmary," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Frankie and Johnny" and "Tin Roof Blues."

But it also includes such pieces as "Midnight in Moscow" and "Hello Dolly," played in the Dixieland style.

What is it that distinguishes Dixieland from other jazz?

"The tailgate or slide trombone and the wah-wah or muted trumpet," Combs and Leps agree.

WHILE ALL three up-front instruments —the trumpet, the trombone and the clarinet (or sax) — are basic to the music, the trumpet, as the lead instrument, is the key horn, they also agree.

In the Bay Area, they say, Turk Murphy and his band, based in Murphy's Earthquake McGoon's club in San Francisco, have served to keep interest in Dixieland alive and high.

The Owls frequently journey to San Francisco and McGoon's to hear Murphy or traveling Dixieland units perform there.

"But my personal favorite for Dixieland trumpet is Al Hirt," says Leps. "He's a wonder."

INTEREST generally in Dixieland was in a decline, the Owls admit, "until about three years ago. Then interest began to revive, and it is very much on the upgrade now."

They credit the success of banjo bands — "even at the ballpark" — as being a major factor in that reversal, at least in the San Francisco area.

"Most of us grew up with Dixieland music," says Combs of the Owls. "We like and play all kinds of music. But it is the Dixieland that we enjoy most. And which most audiences seem to like the best."

ADDS LEPS: "While we are not at all adverse to making a little money, we prefer to play the kind of jobswhere the band will have fun right along with the audience. The playing itself is so rewarding that the pay comes as a sort of added bonus."

So rewarding, in fact, that rarely does an Owl regular fail to put in an appearance for a program.

His fellow Owls tell of Jerry Jones showing up with a temperature of better than 100 degrees, a sick man, and playing through the evening, "feeling better and better as the night went on. It's pretty good therapy."

AND AS AN indication of the freewheeling approach of the Owls toward their music, they point out that they played Dixieland for a re-election rally for Gov. Ronald Reagan in 1970, and a few days later performed at a similar function for Reagan's Republican Party primary election challenger, Norton Simon.

Politicians, it seems, can recognize a good sound when they hear it. So can Marin County Fair Manager Marcelle McCoy. And consequently, fairgoers during the coming days are going to be in for a treat — Dixieland music in the style of old New Orleans, played by six Marin men who pursue their own separate professions most of the week, but who are joined as one in their dedication to and practice of traditional jazz.

THE INVISIBLE MEN OF THE FAR EAST

A TASTE OF FREEDOM: Memoirs of a Formosan Independence Leader, by Peng Ming-min; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 270 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

The "invisible men" of the Far East are the Formosans. In the past century they have been ignored, exploited, suppressed and snubbed by the Manchus, the Japanese, the Nationalist refugees, and at a distance by the Chinese Communists and the U.S.

Eighty-five per cent of the island's people of 14 million are native Formosans whose identity is buried under the fiction that Formosa is the Republic of China. Subjugated by Chiang Kai-shek's refugee army they have very little part in the shaping of their government or their future.

When the unseen speak, their words come as a shock. In this sense "A Taste of Freedom" is a shocking book. It is like hearing the little boy who pointed out that the emperor wasn't wearing any clothes. Unpleasant reality is intruded upon comfortable illusion.

Peng Ming-min, an international lawyer, educated in Japan, Canada and France, speaks for the Formosan Independence Movement through this memoir. He gives voice to the voiceless against great odds.

Formosa has no powerful friends in the international community. The Chinese Nationalists have suppressed the Formosans. The People's Republic of China considers Formosa an offshore province. The Japanese want trade with Mainland China and won't jeopardize that goal for Formosa, and Formosan independence as yet has no place in the United States' changing China policy which still needs the illusion of "two Chinas."

Formosan people are descendents of Southern Chinese frontiersmen who fled Fukien and Kwangtung provinces for the jungles of Formosa, in order to improve their impoverished lot. Well into the 19th Century Formosa was a disease-ridden pirates' den. The fading Manchu dynasty forbade immigration to Formosa until 1875, but could not halt the illegal flow of immigrants. The Japanese reign, beginning in 1895, was no gentler but was more efficient. Public health was vastly improved because bugs and bacteria do not distinguish between conqueror and conquered.

The Nationalists, driven from the Chinese Mainland in 1949, fled to Formosa, bringing corruption, monolithic government and the secret police with them. The rulers of Formosa have changed three times since 1895, but the condition of the native population as a second class citizenry has remained constant.

In "A Taste of Freedom," Peng, recently escaped from Taiwan and now teaching at the University of Michigan, makes visible the plight of the Formosan people.

Visibility won't bring much immediate help to the Formosans but it will help readers to understand a little known but very touchy facet of Far Eastern affairs with which our newly emerging China policy must cope.

THE HIDDEN NORTHWEST by Robert Cantwell; Lippincott, 285 pages, $8.50. Reviewed by John Yates.

The author has not written this book on a whim. The work is obviously a labor of love based upon his intuitive feeling for the area and most impressive research (10 pages of bibliography, 24 pages of notes and references), and hundreds of camping trips spanning many years. The result is a very readable and vital history of the Pacific Northwest.

Robert Cantwell has disseminated a vast amount of information into rare narrative form. The style is very much his own but akin to that of the almost legendary maritime chronicler, Samuel Eliot Morison.

Part One is history and describes the area as it appeared to early explorers, trappers and settlers. Rain and the great Columbia River and its tributaries are to the Northwest what the sun fertile soil are to California. Rain produced the enormous forests and the wealth and variety of its lumber — for instance the unique cedar which splits naturally into long straight boards. The cedar sheltered the Indian, and the great salmon from the rivers fed him.

Rain kept the Spaniards away, who, making landfall on the Manila run at the 48th parallel, always moved south in the face of poor visibility and low lying clouds. Drake touched the coast of the Olympic Peninsula after a long and arduous voyage, but he decided to take his chances with the Spaniards rather than face that wet climate. Thus the rain scared off explorers until a very recent era — the Spaniard Juan Perez in 1774 followed by the English adventurers John Meares and Capt. George Vancouver.

The author relates stories of the Hudson Bay Co. (its charter, like that of the East India Co., gave it all power of government, even to declare war, but not against a Christian government) and the early fur trading industry, the adventures of Lewis and Clark, and the daring and the horror of the Astoria expedition. The latter was made famous in Washington Irving's book "Astoria" with the vivid descriptions of the voyage of the Tonquin under Captain Thorne and the destruction of the vessel by Indians.

The strange Treaty of Joint Occupancy is discussed; the joint rule of Great Britain and the United States of Oregon Territory was an innovation in international dealings. Who really ruled the country — who would collect taxes and issue regulations?

Part Two brings us up to date from the settling of the territory when the first towns were built in the middle of a stand of lumber, owned by the lumber companies and named after the leading stockholder. There was a look of impermanence — rather like theatrical set of a typical midwestern town with a backdrop of a waste land of logged hills. The enormous fish canning and lumber industries of the modern States of Oregon and Washington are honestly assessed; the conclusions must be positive for they are the economic backbone of the region.

Park Two is also a look at the Northwest a century after Theodore Winthrop's death (the author of the adventure novel about the territory — "The Canoe and the Saddle". Cantwell retraces Winthrop's steps and finds the area still a place of enormous promise and still a naturalist's paradise in spite of the encroachment of modern life.

Robert Cantwell, a native of the Northwest and a descendant of the first American settler on Puget Sound, has used the region as a setting for two novels and as the subject of several magazine articles. He is a former literary editor of both Time and Newsweek and, since 1961, has been a senior editor of Sports Illustrated.

Ritual Murders In Marin County

THE PEDLOCK INHERITANCE by Stephen Longstreet; David McKay, 408 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

With a storyline about ritual murders on a Sausalito houseboat, veteran author Stephen Longstreet couldn't really miss.

There's a Black soldier, much decorated in Vietnam, who's AWOL from the Army, accused of the murders. A Marin County D.A. who's determined to finish off the case in a hurry to hush any scandal and perhaps improve his own political image. And the hero, Rufus Pedlock, the reluctant defense attorney, who has quite a few problems of his own.

What is the Pedlock inheritance?

". . . We have no law of primogeniture. . . but I've taken up ancestor worship, Rufus," says his father, the judge, in one of his many, long drawn-out speeches. "Why not pride in one's genes?"

The judge is about to be appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court and he lectures throughout the book on the problems of the courts, the responsibilities of the law and lawyers, and the general direction the country is taking. Social programs, minority dissenion, ethics. . . all fall within the relm of his ramblings.

". . . and used you as a dartboard for my painful thoughts," says the judge in one of his letters to his brother. Some times the reader is left to feel the pinholes, too.

However, Stephen Longstreet has great fun using San Francisco and Marin settings and half heartedly disguising the names and places.

There's a twist ending and yet no real solution to the emotional problems Rufus faces.

The book is diverting escape reading.

Patricia Highsmith Probes The Psyche

A DOG'S RANSOM by Patricia Highsmith; Knopf, 275 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Patricia Highsmith's psychological depth is such that her characters are rarely pleasant. In "A Dog's Ransom" she presents us with a chilling company of creeps that outdoes her previous casts in sheer noisomeness and despicability.

The scene is New York City and it all begins with the kidnapping — or rather a dognapping — of the pampered pet of a stuffy, well-to-do, middle-aged couple. Ransom is demanded, and paid, but the dog is not returned. Ransom is demanded again.

To most cops, it is a minor, routine crime. But one conscientious young patrolman, an outsider on the force, better educated that his fellow police, is attracted to the case. His involvement is to prove his undoing.

The theme that runs through the horrors that follow is the utter, selfishness of man. It is the ingredient that, exposed in the owners of the kidnapped dog, in the young patrolman's Mod girl friend, in others who become involved, shows them to be not greatly better — only different — from the twisted psychotic who started it all by stealing the dog.

The officer, deserted by those he had befriended, desperately lonesome, is left to face alone the consequences of his involvement, not the least of these being the enmity and callous brutality of his fellow police resentful of his being different.

It seems finally that the young cop is New York's only decent person. And then Miss Highsmith hits you with her hardest punch — a new doubt. Is even he the sane, humane person you had come to accept him as?

The picture "A Dog's Ransom" paints of urban American society is a depressing, terrifying one. Which is exactly what Miss Highsmith intended. She demonstrates once again why her reputation as a writer has scorec far above the usual confines of the mystery-suspense genre.

"For too many years, social scientists have paid scant attention to the broad problem of official secrecy. . . That vacuum ought to be filled. The academicians should form a partnership with journalists in providing the American citizenry with a reasoned and thoughtful critique of the excesses of clandestine bureaucracy." — R. Harris Smith in the preface to his "OSS."

Uncle Sam's World War II Spies

By DON KEOWN

We are supposed to learn, we are told, from history, But how do we learn when an arrogant, timid or tradition-bound bureaucracy withholds indefinitely from public scrutiny as secret or confidential the documents that constitute that history?

The question, of course, was at the heart of the flap over the Pentagon Papers, with Daniel Ellsberg, the New York Times and Sen. Mike Gravel teaming up to thwart a pointless and needless withholding of a historical record from the people.

R. Harris Smith encountered it, too, when he decided to write the history of the Office of Strategic Services, the World War II predecessor of today's controversial Central Intelligence Agency. The archives holding papers dealing with SOS activities of the 1940s would not be available to him, he was told.

So Smith, briefly a CIA agent himself, set out to write the story anyway, relying upon published materials, and more particularly upon the recollections of several hundred of the men and women who served with the OSS.

The result is "OSS: The Secret History of America's First Central Intelligence Agency," published by the University of California Press where Smith is now a lecturer in political science.

Despite the refusal of access to official papers, Smith has put together an amazingly detailed history of one of the most colorful war-time agencies ever assembled under the American or any other flag. His story makes all the more puzzling the refusal of the government, after this lapse of time, to open up the official archives, for plainly the OSS, despite intense factionalism, some bungling, some farfetched scheming and some failures, nevertheless enjoyed an amazing degree of success and served its country well.

The OSS reflected to a large extent the personality of Gen. William (Wild Bill) Donovan, the World War I hero and millionaire lawyer chosen by President Franklin D. Roosevelt to be its head. Donovan brought to the post a freewheeling approach, a weakness for administration and a strength for innovation, a willingness to run risks, and a tolerance for diverse political and social philosophies.

This last was to contribute mightily to the factionalism that sometimes threatened to split the agency between leftists, often the most effective field agents, and conservatives, to whom were entrusted major administrative responsibilities. Caught in between, of course, was a large group of men and women unaffected by their personal politics, bent only upon doing their jobs.

OSS: The Secret History of American First Central Intelligence Agency, by R. Harris Smith; University of California Press, 458 pages, $10.95.

Still, to a surprising degree, all three groups succeeded usually in burying their differences and working togethar to attain brilliant results. It was only later that the leftist-oriented OSS agents, who often had endured the greatest peril, were subjected to a disgraceful political persecution in which their former teammates sometimes joined.

The names found in the Smith book reflect the diversity of personnel in the OSS — Allen Dulles, William Bundy, Herbert Marcuse, Clark MacGregor, Arthur Goldberg, Ralph Bunche, David Bruce, John Birch, Ralph de Toledano, Arthur Schlesinger, Elmo Roper, Kermit Roosevelt, Henry Ringling North, Sterling Hayden, Serge Obolensky, Stewart Alsop, John Gardner, H. Stuart Hughes, August Heckscher and, yes, Julia Childs of TV cooking fame.

Even Msgr. Givanni Battista Montini, to become Pope Paul VI, played a key role with one OSS-inspired American espionage network.

Are there any lessons for us from Harris' history? A great many, one must conclude. But the chapter detailing our World War II and immediate post-war involvement in Vietnam would alone suffice to justify the writing of the book and its serious study.

Many will be surprised to learn that our early involvement there was generally on the side of Ho Chi Minh and his revolutionaries. OSS agents on the scene defied the antagonism of their French, British and Chinese allies to encourage and supply Ho and his revolutionary movement, against the Japanese and into the uncertain months that followed the surrender of Nipon,

The agent in charge in Hanoi recommended continued American support for Ho and his Viet Minh in his final report. But the decision, made in Washington, was to be a political, not an idealistic one: The United States would "respect French sovereignty in Indochina."

It is an eye-opener, however, to learn that the Americans on the scene and most involved, the OSS agents, generally favored the Ho movement and saw its leader as more nationalistic than communistic. Had their advice prevailed, how different the course of history might have been!

Similar insights can be gleaned from chapters dealing with Thailand, North Africa, the Mediterranean, France, the Balkans, China, and occupied Germany. In all these areas, the OSS agents not only matched wits with the enemy, but found themselves often at odds with their British and Russian allies, and faced with choices between rival underground claimants to their support (in Africa and France, the Gaullists or the Giraudists, in Yugoslavia, the Partisans or the Chetniks, in China, the nationalists or the communists). And then there were always the OSS's own internal struggles, usually subordinated to common goals, but sometimes erupting nastily.

The wider contribution "OSS" makes to contemporary understanding of international and national affairs is a better comprehension of the roots of today's Central Intelligence Agency, descendant of the OSS and termed by Smith "the most misunderstood bureaucracy of the American government."

True, today's CIA has changed greatly from the more idealistic, more individualistic, anti-imperialistic OSS. But, argues Smith, the influence of the OSS lingers in the CIA, although it diminishes year by year. Thus, as federal agencies dealing with international affairs go, the CIA remains relatively freethinking and liberal.

Progressives, in denouncing the CIA as a reactionary, militaristic, troublemaking body, have not always been accurate or fair. For instance, opposition to the Vietnam policy has existed within the CIA consistently and rather outspokenly.

More and more, however, the conservative viewpoint has come to prevail in executive positions. Thus the policy of counterinsurgency, and our adventures on behalf of repressive, status quo regimes.

More and more? Smith admits, the conservative, even reactionary, character of the schizophrenic CIA has come to dominance. And liberals, given little support by progressives outside the agency, have been thrown on the defensive.

"The CIA has not yet become the reactionary monster the New Left has created as its straw man," Smith writes. "But unless the Agency leadership makes a determined effort to renew the OSS passion for democratic dissent in yet another generation of American intelligence officers, the reality of CIA may soon coincide with its sinister image in the intellectual community"

Smith overlooks one very important question — whether there is any place in a democracy for a super-secret agency devoted to clandestine political manipulation and activism abroad during a time of peace, no matter how enlightened its motives. Nevertheless, Smith has written an important book that is not quick or easy reading, so crammed is it with names, agencies (and to an annoying and confusing degree, the initials thereof), factions, philosophies, ploys, plots and intrigues. But it is well worth the reading effort. And it does, indeed, shed light, not only upon the events of the 1940s, but upon our predicaments of today. It is unfortunate the federal bureacracy did not see fit to cooperate with a writer who has given the U.S. intelligence apparatus a fairer, more understanding treatment than it is accustomed to receiving from its analysts.

AMERICANS AND WORDS

"Words to the contemporary American," writes Alan Pryce-Jones in the London Times Literary Supplement, "are not supple, elusive things which conceal or divulge precise shades of meaning, they are not concepts to be loved and chosen, but, on the contrary, something like fill to a builder. They cover holes of thought; they offer a flat surface."

A SPECIAL interest book of considerable importance to its limited audience is "Weapons & Fighting Arts of the Indonesian Archipelago" by Donn F. Draeger, an expert in Asian martial arts and a co-author of the six-volume "Practical Karate" series.

Charles E. Tuttle Co., which published the karate series, is also the publisher of this new book which is profusely illustrated with black and white photographs and drawings, and which offers a very learned and technical discussion of Indonesian combative techniques from the bare-fisted (and bare-footed) to the use of spears, knives and the dreaded kris.

The price is $12.50.

NAVAL HISTORY buffs will be delighted with "The Battle of Trafalgar" by Paul Davies, published by Ballantine Books as a $1.95 paperback. Davies not only re-creates the decisive battle of October, 1805, but also sets the stage with the flavor and the figures of the era, and includes maps, prints, paintings and photographs as illustrations. Finally there is the kind of ship-by-ship record — captains, firepower, casualties, etc. — that serious students of this kind of thing find invaluable.

SWIMMING champion Don Schollander's "Deep Water" has been reprinted by Ballantine Books as a $1.25 paperback.

THE STORY of H. A. W. Tabor, Colorado's first bonanza king, is told in George F. Willison's "They Dug the Gold," now available as a $1.50 paperback in a Ballantine Comstock Edition.

Sleuths & Suspense

KISSING COVENS by Colin Watson; Putnam's, 189 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Mary Leydecker.

Colin Watson's latest book has a catchy title and an even more attractive dustjacket.

From there on, it gets more difficult to be complimentary.

If sex orgies involving extremely unattractive middleaged nuts are your thing, you'll love this book. Otherwise, a rather clever little plot, involving English "witches," gets into a pretty sticky wicket.

The scene is the small town of Flaxborough, where rumbles about localities forming a witches' cloven (a word much favored in crossword puzzles) bring the English press flocking.

There are also some television types in town, making a commercial for a detergent and who speak a jargon understandable only to themselves.

The plot gets pulled together somewhat when the fatally gored body of Bert Persimmon, missing local grocery store manager, is found in the river where the commercial filming is going on. The mystery is solved in the end, of course, but not before a couple meetings of the witches — who turn out to be much more interested in public sex than magic.

Watson has a reputation for humor and burlesque — but groans of "ugh" seem more likely than chuckles to greet this book.

AT LEFT, students at Christ's College in Christchurch, New Zealand, file into one of its Victorian buildings for their classes. In close promimity to the college are another famous school, the University of Canterbury with equally historic buildings, and the Canterbury Museum, world famous for its collection of historic artifacts from the Maori culture. Christchurch has been described as "more English than England itself." It is a city of parks, cathedral, beaches, gardens, horseracing courses, fine restaurants and even a River Avon. And it is the touring center from whence depart parties bound for some of New Zealand's most spectacular natural scenery and most picturesque towns. With the seasons reversed from those of North America, the prime tourist's months for New Zealand lie ahead.

A Very English City Outside England

Some cities can be described as "exotic," others as "exciting," and still others as "unique."

Christchurch, New Zealand's second largest city, is really none of these. And yet it is lovely and quaint, warm and friendly. . .and thoroughly charming.

Christchurch is frequently described as "the most English city outside of England," and this is true with its quiet, green countryside, the picturesque River Avon, winding through the center of the city between sloping, grassy banks fringed with English willows, and its Gothic cathedral, whose tall spire dominates almost every vantage point.

CHRISTCHURCH is also known as the "garden city" with its wide, straight avenues that in the suburbs are lined by the carefully tended gardens of neat homes — gardens unrivaled for beauty and tidiness anywhere in New Zealand and perhaps, in their profusion, anywhere in the world.

There are more than 1,000 acres of public reserves and parks within the city boundaries, including Hagley Park and its botanic gardens' 62 acres of neat flower beds, lovely trees from all parts of the world, native plants sweeping down to the Avon, and only a few minutes' walk from the center of the city.

Christchurch too is a university town. The historic buildings of the University of Canterbury have an old world charm with their impressive quadrangles and cloisters. The atomic scientist Lord Rutherford carried out his earliest experiments as a student here.

ACROSS THE road from the university is Canterbury Museum, where the emphasis is on the culture of the Maoris, New Zealand's earliest settlers who preceded the white man by hundreds of years.

Next door to the museum is Christ's College, its Victorian buildings grouped around a spacious quadrangle reminiscent of an English public school.

Not only is Christchurch interesting in its own right, but it's also the hub of all activity on the South Island. The city is the permanent American base for "Operation Deep Freeze," the UnitedStates' Antarctic expedition, and has become a home away from home for many American servicemen.

Christchurch International Airport, five miles from the city, is the only airport in the world which has a special departure and arrival counter for Antarctic travel.

LOCATED SEVEN miles inland, midway down the east coast of the South Island, Christchurch is the jumping off point for numerous tours and side trips of the scenic south whether you go by rail, bus, air or car. To the north, you skirt the Pacific coastline to the province of Marlborough at the top of the South Island; to the west, the highway penetrates the Southern Alps through five-mile-long Otira tunnel to the rugged and beautiful west coast; and south are the fertile Canterbury Plains, the province of Otago and the South Island's second largest city, Dunedin, which offers a little bit-o' Scotland.

Some 100 miles west of Christchurch is the country's main alpine resort, the Hermitage Lodge at the foot of 12,349-foot Mount Cook, New Zealand's highest peak. There are regular flights to Mount Cook from Christchurch, including Sunday excursions when passengers lunch at the Hermitage and return to the city in the afternoon.

Immediately south of the city, the hills of Banks Peninsula rise to 3,000 feet and enclose deep-water harbors, including Lyttleton, busiest port in the South Island and the third busiest in New Zealand (after Auckland and Wellington). Lyttelton, connected to Christchurch by a mile-long tunnel, is the South Island terminal for the Union Steam Ship Co.'s inter-island auto-passenger steamer-express service, which operates an overnight service to Wellington six nights a week.

OPPORTUNITIES for recreation and leisure abound in Christchurch. Certainly you'll want to spend a few hours exploring the Botanic Gardens which are open daily from 8 a.m. until approximately 7 p.m. The gardens are famed for the many fine trees and the collection of plants from many parts of the world.

Also on the grounds are a fully equipped children's playground and a tea room.

Another popular pastime is canoeing on the Avon, a relaxing way to see the gardens and 500-acre Hagley Park. Canoes can be hired at the old boathouse near Christchurch Hospital.

OTHER POINTS of interest: Bowker Fountain, which plays varied and colored water patterns nightly; Christchurch Cathedral, from whose tower you can enjoy a panoramic view of the city; Millbrook Reserve for display of azaleas and rhododendrons; the Museum, which houses the collection of the provincial geologist Julius Von Haast, and a totem pole presented to the city by the state of Oregon in recognition of the city's hospitality to "Operation Deep Freeze."

The city also boasts three beautiful race courses — spacious Addington Raceway, home of a number of trotting clubs, Elizabeth Park and Riccarton Racecourse, home of flat and steeplechase racing.

There are a number of excellent beaches, all within seven miles of the city; New Brighton, North Beach, South Brighton, Summer and Waimairi. All offer good swimming.

THERE ALSO are numerous beaches at Lyttleton Harbor; Corsair Bay, a short walk from Lyttelton; Governor's Bay, at the head of Lyttelton Harbor with a tearoom and a delightful view of the harbor; Charteris Bay, five miles by launch from Lyttelton; and Diamond Harbor, a mile and a half by launch from Lyttelton.

For a pleasant picnic spot, try Ashley Gorge, 40 miles from Christchurch.

Also worth a visit is Akaroa, 51 miles south of Christchurch via Tai Tapu and Little River, one of the most picturesque towns in New Zealand. Akaroa Harbor was once a famous whaling base, and it was here that the British flag was first hoisted over the South Island. There's good accommodations in the town, which can be reached by car or rail.

For a memorable experience you might want to take the one-day tour of Waimakariri Gorge and a thrilling jet boat ride, which includes a back-country barbecue. Details on this and other activities may be obtained from the Government Tourist Office or the Canterbury Public Relations Office in Christchurch.

CHRISTCHURCH offers a wide range of accommodation including the Clarendon in the downtown shopping area overlooking the Avon; the United Service, also downtown; the White Heron Lodge and Russley — both adjacent to the airport; and Shirley Lodge, in a garden setting three miles from the city.

Christchurch also has some excellent restaurants of international standard. Some of the more popular are Flamingo, Malando, Berens and the Continental Room of the White Heron Lodge.

One of the most unusual restaurants in New Zealand is the Sign of the Takahe, a castle-like structure along the Summit Road in the Cashmere Hills, which commands a sweeping view of the city, the Canterbury Plains and the snow-capped Southern Alps. The richly ornamented ceiling, colorful murals and fine carvings in wood and stone make this one of the showplaces in Christchurch. It's open daily for morning and afternoon tea.

Boston: Gateway To New England

By RALPH HUBLEY

Located at the top of the busiest air traffic corridor in the United States, Boston, traditional gateway to New England, is rapidly becoming one of the chief aerial ports of the world with more than a million international arrivals and departures a year.

Airlines that have become disenchanted by tieups and delays at New York's JFK International Airport continue to schedule more overseas flights into and through Logan Airport, spread out just across the harbor from Boston.

In fact, many first-time visitors feel as if they are landing in the harbor waters as their plane begins to settle on the landfill extension of what was once called Noddle's Island. One of the chief features of the eighth busiest airport in the world, served by 27 airlines, is that it is so close to the city — two miles from downtown Boston.

THERE ARE FOUR ways to get to the city from the airport:

By taxi, which can cost nearly $4 to some hotels. A cab dispatcher in red jacket and cap is standing on the sidewalk outside the terminal doors to signal a taxi for you. It is proper to take the first cab in the waiting line rather than to get into one that has just discharged passengers.

By subway, if you don't have much luggage. The fare is 25 cents plus 20 cents for the connection bus that arrives at the terminal every 10 to 20 minutes.

By limousine, which stops at major hotels on 15 or 30 minute schedules, according to the time of day. The limousine costs only $1.50 and comes in two sizes — small buses and 10-passenger cars.

By rented car, if you're planning to take trips outside Boston. An automobile in Boston is a handicap since many streets are narrow and parking is limited.

THE 15-MINUTE trip can take 45 minutes if the tunnels jam up. This can happen during rush hours — 7:30 a.m.to 9 a.m. and 4:40 p.m. to 6 p.m. So scheduling arrivals from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. or after 6 p.m. will save time.

A longer route over the Mystic River Bridge sometimes is quicker during rush hours. But the bridge, too, can get tied up in heavy traffic.

Free rides between terminals with your luggage is provided from noon to 9 p.m. Look for a red-and-white vehicle with a "courtesy bus" sign. It runs every 15 minutes.

A sidewalk information booth has been set up as an experiment at North Terminal for overseas arrivals. If successful, other booths will be set up at other terminals.

INSIDE THE international terminal is the MASSPORT information booth, open from noon to 7 p.m. Nearby is Traveler's Aid.

There now is parking at Logan for approximately 8,000 automobiles. The five-level parking garage, recently completed, offers covered walkways into the terminals.

Frequent bus service is offered to New Hampshire and Rhode Island from the airport.

If the visitor doesn't arrive by plane, it is usually by automobile. The great era of passenger trains and ships is past, although there are notable attempts to revive it. The experimental TurboTrain continues to rock along at one-third its designed operating speed for most of the way from New York, but with nothing like the old glamour and excitement. The two Boston stops are at Back Bay and South Station.

HIGHWAYS, ON the other hand, sweep right into the center of the city from three directions.

Again the rush hours should be avoided by the visiting motorist. And remember that the combination red-and-yellow traffic light is the signal for pedestrians to walk. All vehicles should stop. Don't even gun your motor! More visitors are confused by this red and yellow walk light than by any other single factor, since there are also green walk signs at some intersections.

It's hard to imagine what old Bill Blackstone would say about modern Boston with its many new buildings still rising above the skyline. For he moved out when other settlers decided to join him on his isolated Shawmut Peninsula where he sought solitude about 10 years after the Pilgrims settled Plymouth. His land is now called the Boston Common. It was the first public park in the colonies and still offers a pleasant relief from the nearby state government activities, shopping hub-bub, and financial whirl.

ADJOINING THE Common is the Public Garden, beautifully landscaped with a pond in the middle where swan boats move gracefully over the still water. The other major green area is in the Back Bay section and is called the Fenway. Here city folk do a bit of gardening.

Boston is a city for walking. Besides enjoying the parks, I like to stroll along tree-lined Commonwealth Avenue or along the Charles River Basin. But it is also fun to look at the variety of shops running the length of Newbury and Boylston Streets, or to gaze at Bulfinch-erected townhouses on Beacon Hill.

A must for all visitors is the Freedom Trail, which begins at the Boston Common and leads to important historical landmarks. For an overall view of the city and suburbs, the Skywalk atop the Prudential Center is the place to go. If the top of the "Pru" is in the clouds, the 26th floor of the John Hancock Life Insurance Co. Building offers a free observation platform.

FROM THESE vantage points you can easily pick out MIT across the Charles in Cambridge, the gold dome of the state capitol atop Beacon Hill, Bunker Hill in Charlestown, the airport, the new government-center complex, the rising new John Hancock skyscraper, the Christian Science Center, Fenway Park (baseball), as well as the many other Boston landmarks.

Also not to be missed by the visitor are two world-famous museums — the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum. Both are in Back Bay's Fenway area. The noted Fogg Art Museum is located at Harvard University across the Charles River in Cambridge.

Many other museums and exhibits scattered around the city provide enjoyment for the whole family. They include such a variety as the Children's Museum, Science Museum, London Wax Museum, Antique Auto Museum (Brookline), the New England Aquarium, the Planetarium and the Mapparium.

Most of Boston's major attractions can be seen in two or three days — with the help of sight seeing bus tours.

VOICE OF THUNDER

I have stood upon a mountain
when lightning zagged the sky
and a sudden shot of thunder
broke with crash above my head.
I have seen a giant cedar fall
struck by the fire of heaven,
and wondered whether owlets died
hiding in their hollow home,
wondered if the chipmunks sleeping,
ever scurried out to search again?

Awakened from too-solid sleep
at burst of barrier above my roof,
alerted to awareness by a jet,
I have heard the bombs of Vietnam,
and the thundering silence of the dead!

THE GARDEN PAGES

A Perennial Problem With Falling Leaves

Even in Marin County where the seasonal change of climate is less severe by far than most places, falling leaves are still as certain as the arrival of September.

How you handle them depends a lot on you, your property, and the equipment you have available.

By far, the most popular method, short of hand raking, is to put an inexpensive blade attachment on your rotary power mower. The mower then acts as a leaf shredder with centrifugal force of the mower blades whisking the leaves into your catcher, or if you prefer, dropping the shreds back to the ground as a winter cover.

THERE ARE also power sweepers which use a rotating brush (much like street sweepers) to sweep whole leaves back into a catcher as the sweeper proceeds across the lawn. These are neat and efficient and particularly adaptable to medium sized lawns with few tight spots.

Since the leaves are left whole, it is well to choose a model with a large catcher to cut down on the number of times the catcher must be emptied.

Next on the list is the lawn vacuum . . . that's right, vacuum. This is usually a push-type unit with a wide nozzle on the front. The vacuum works much like your house vacuum. The nozzle sucks in every leaf it passes over with the blower forcing the leaves into very large catcher bags. The force of the blower tends to compress the leaves in the bag so it has to be emptied less often.

AN ADVANTAGE of the vacuum is its ability to suck leaves from under shrubs and tight corners. Certain models even have hose attachments to clean garages and workshops.

Just the opposite from the vacuum is the blower. These units are capable of creating winds of almost hurricane force to blow leaves across the lawn at each pass. Equipped with throttle controls to vary the wind velocity, the blower can pile leaves as neatly as you can with a hand rake.

If you're a gardener, you might team up one of the units above with a shredder that grinds and pulverizes leaves, sticks, stalks, trimmings, vines.

Mix in some manure and/or rock phosphate and you're making your own plant fertilizer.

THESE UNITS roll between garden rows or next to plant borders and flower beds to put your compost where its needed.

Use of any of the units listed here tends to create a good deal of dust since leaves are best handled when they are dry. The dust tends to rob the unit's engine of power and can even clog the blower housing air intake and carburetor to the point of engine failure. It's best to choose a leaf unit with a highly efficient air cleaner or filter.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

With Ingenuity, The Living Room Becomes Your Guest Room Too

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

No, you won't very often hear today's hostess say "join us in the guest room."

Chances are you've slept in someone's living room, perhaps even your own living room. You know the problem — how to make it as interesting as possible, yet provide sufficiently for that over-night sleeper.

THE BEFORE and after shown at right is unusual in that one crazy, mixed-up wall has been given a new face, and the result is pleasant and architectural with almost the feeling of Santa Fe or Taos, N.M., in the heart of a city.

The window wall now has a new skin of stucco. It was sprayed on after the residents, a young couple, built a frame about eight inches away from the existing wall. The old baseboard heater no longer functioned and an ugly pipe filled one corner.

There was also an air conditioner that did work, so a dummy panel was designed for easy removal during warm summer months.

IN THIS SMALLER first home, a young couple has furnished the living room to also serve as their guest room with a Simmons Hide-A-Bed as the key piece. But nothing is dead, and all these furnishings will be useful a few years from now when the couple move up into a larger second home. Inset shows the wall before the facelifing treatment was applied.

THE WOOD floors were a saving grace and merely required refinishing. So the decision was made to select a low-key area rug, one with carved design, rather than busy pattern or colorations. Best of all it was a size that would move well to a second, larger home when the day arrived for such expansion.

The bride had a collection of miniature paintings in mix-match frames, so as interim decorating she tacked them to the newly painted wall in a horizontal arrangement. Later acquisitions could be used at higher levels.

The major piece of upholstery had to be a sleep-type sofa, since there really wasn't any other space for a bed. So the young marrieds chose a handsome, soft-edge style by Simmons in an awning-striped fabric that features browns and blacks.

PLANTS WERE a big part of these youngsters lives, yet their walk-up offered no terrace or area for a garden. So the new window wells, the floor near the windows and a few ceiling-hung baskets hold a nice variety of soft greenery.

A larger tree-size plant is used near the hall door, but occassionally is rotated to the window for necessary daylight. Bed pillows are stored in the old trunk that is used as a coffee table and electric blankets and bright-patterned bed linens make this a comfortable switchover from living room to guest room.

August Is The Time To Think Of Air Conditioning — For '73

BY DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

Right now in August, when the weather can be its hottest and muggiest, when you think you can't take another sleepless night: that's when converts to home air conditioning are made.

If you are at that stage, don't rush out and buy the first thing you see. Take time first to bone up on the hows and whats of air conditioning: How big an air conditioner do I need? What's the best type for my home? How can I be sure my electric wiring will supply enough current?

A NEW BOOKLET of valuable tips on room air-conditioning by Emerson gives concise, understandable answers to these and many other questions.

Basic to your decision, says Leo Hahn, vice president and general manager of Emerson's Quiet Kool division, is the size area which is to be cooled, what time of day the cooling is most needed, the type of window in which the unit will be installed, and the voltage and amperage of the circuit which will provide power.

Additionally, you must decide what options are important to your individual situation.

For example, Hahn noted, one might elect to purchase a high-efficiency unit that carries a slightly higher price tag but provides long-range savings on electric bills. Some units have features that move the air more efficiently. And there are numerous design options.

THE BOOKLET, discussing what to look for in an air conditioner, notes room coolers are sized in terms of BUT (British Thermal Unit-the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit), volts and amperes. The BTU figure indicates the cooling capacity, voltage describes the circuit rating needed, and amperage tells you how much current will be required.

Where temperatures do not usually exceed 95 degrees, as is the case in Marin, an air conditioner rated at 6,000 BTU per hour, for example, will cool a room with 100 to 180 square feet of floor space. Where temperatures exceed 95 degrees, but do not go over 100, one rated about 7,500 BTU per hour is required to cool the same area.

Voltage refers to the electrical pressure of the circuit to which the conditioner will be connected. Typically, a house or apartment building will have a circuit of 230 volts that separates into two 115-volt branches.

An air conditioner of a stated voltage can be used only in a

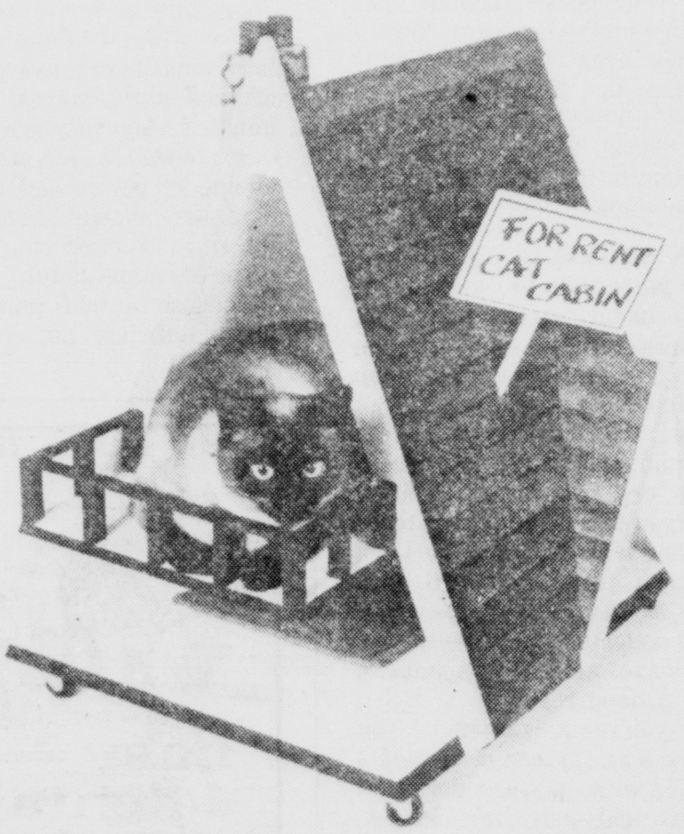
SYLVESTER'S HIDEAWAY



IT WOULD BE hard to estimate the total number of cats in these United States. Let us just say there are a lot. And they are a haughty, independent creature, expecting to be catered to and pampered. Steve Ellingson's Cat Cabin is a step in that direction. There are both side and front entrances, a quiet bedroom for sleeping and even a balcony from which to watch the human world go by. It's an easy project with the help of Ellingson's full-size pattern. For it, send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Cat Cabin Pattern 442. Ellingson also has doghouse patterns — No. 299, for large pooches, No. 136 for small, at $1 and 50 cents respectively, and a cat or dog bed pattern, No. 170, for 50 cents.

Handyman's Pages

The Eskimo Kayak Built Of Plywood

For a lightweight, easily propelled watercraft, the Eskimo's kayak has proven difficult to improve upon.

David Jordan and Edwin Monk, however, have made certain adjustments to make the dependable work boat of the Eskimo suited to our recreation purposes.

One big revision: Whereas the Eskimo builds his kayak of whale bone and walrus hide, Jordan and Monk call for the far more readily available plywood.

So they call their craft the "plyak."

The plan is part of a fleet of plywood boats designed for the American Fir Plywood Assn. of Tacoma, Wash. The plyak is 11 feet three inches long, has a 30-inch beam and weighs approximately 40 pounds.

The estimate is that it can be built in 40 man hours of labor at a cost of about $100.

When launched, it makes an excellent one-man boat with possibly one child to "crew."

The directions include step-by-step illustrations, as well as diagrams and construction notes, plus instructions on how to choose plywood for marine use, so that you can't go wrong.

For the pattern, send 25 cents to American Plywood Assn., 1119 A St., Tacoma, Wash., 98401. Ask for Plyak Plan 95.

THIS PLYAK built by a home handyman differs from the Eskimo's trusty kayak not so much in design as it does in materials. The whale bone and walrus skin of the Eskimo have been replaced with the more easily available exterior grade fir plywood. The pattern cost 25 cents.

Be Ready For Heat When August '73 Rolls Around

AMPERAGE REFERS to current that the unit will consume. A house may be wired for 60 to 100 amps, divided into branch circuits, usually of 15 amps each. A 7.5 amp air conditioner may be plugged into a 15-amp branch circuit if other equipment on the line draws no more than 7.5 amps. Otherwise the conditioner may require a separate branch circuit.

Concerning the size conditioner to buy, the booklet notes there are several methods for determining the proper size, taking into consideration such factors as size of the room, heat from the sun, effects of exposures, proximity to roof, and the time of day that cooling is most needed. A bedroom would have one requirement, a living room another.

Dealers have charts you may use as a guideline. To use them you must know the measurements of the room, and determine whether conditions will be extra hot-such as the top floor of a house with an uninsulated roof, or one where windows face south or west, or if there are large room openings, or where there are many summer days over 95 degrees.

For a room where cooling is needed primarily at night, the Emerson chart has a column marked bedroom. Other situations call for normal cooling capacity.

FOR BEST RESULTS, the booklet recommends, select a conditioner having cooling capacity rating as close as possible to the estimated load, determined by consulting the chart. If your requirement is between two BTU designations - for example, if the chart says you need 13,000 BTU and units of 12,000 and 14,000 are the only ones available - it is advisible to choose the unit with the smaller cooling capacity.

An oversized unit, operating intermittently, is less desirable than a slightly undersized unit that would operate almost continuously.

You get better dehumidification with a smaller unit that is running most of the time than with a big unit that's loafing half the time.

ANOTHER TIP worth considering: Your home layout may lend itself to an alternate arrangement - a pair of smaller units strategically located in the areas where maximum cooling is desired - rather than one large model. This often is a practical solution to a long, narrow room or an L-shaped living room and dinette combination, or a floor plan that requires the cooled air to run around corners.

Although, ideally, central air conditioning gives the finest whole-house cooling, there often is a way to achieve a reasonable substitute by using a large window unit, the warm air distribution equipment already in your house and some ingenuity.

The booklet outlines the method:

"A 24,000-or 28,000-BTU model will take care of most homes. When used with your warm-air heating ducts and furnace fan, you can improvise."

AND, IF YOU decide whole-house air conditioning is really for you, as more and more people do these days, the time to do something about it is now.

Ask your dealer to survey your home now, when it is warm, but let him do the installation next winter in his slow season. Come next summer you'll be ready.

Wind Dies In Huge Fire Area

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Howling winds which earlier toyed with efforts to harness California's largest brush fire of the year subsided today, allowing a weary 2,100-man force to gain ground on the flames.

The winds, which whipped up to 40 miles an hour last night, let up so much that they presented no problem in battling the 16,500-acre fire near Ojai, northwest of Los Angeles, said Hal Sebring, U.S. Forest Service information officer.

Meanwhile, fire fighters worked to control a 3,440-acre fire near Banning in the San Bernardino National Forest and mop up at the scene of a 1,760-acre fire in Healdsburg in Northern California. A fire in the Sequoia National Forest remained out of control.

The Ojai fire-caused by illegal fireworks-had burned 350 acres of the Los Padres National Forest on the western edge of the 53,000-acre Sespe Creek sanctuary, home of the nearly-extinct California condor.

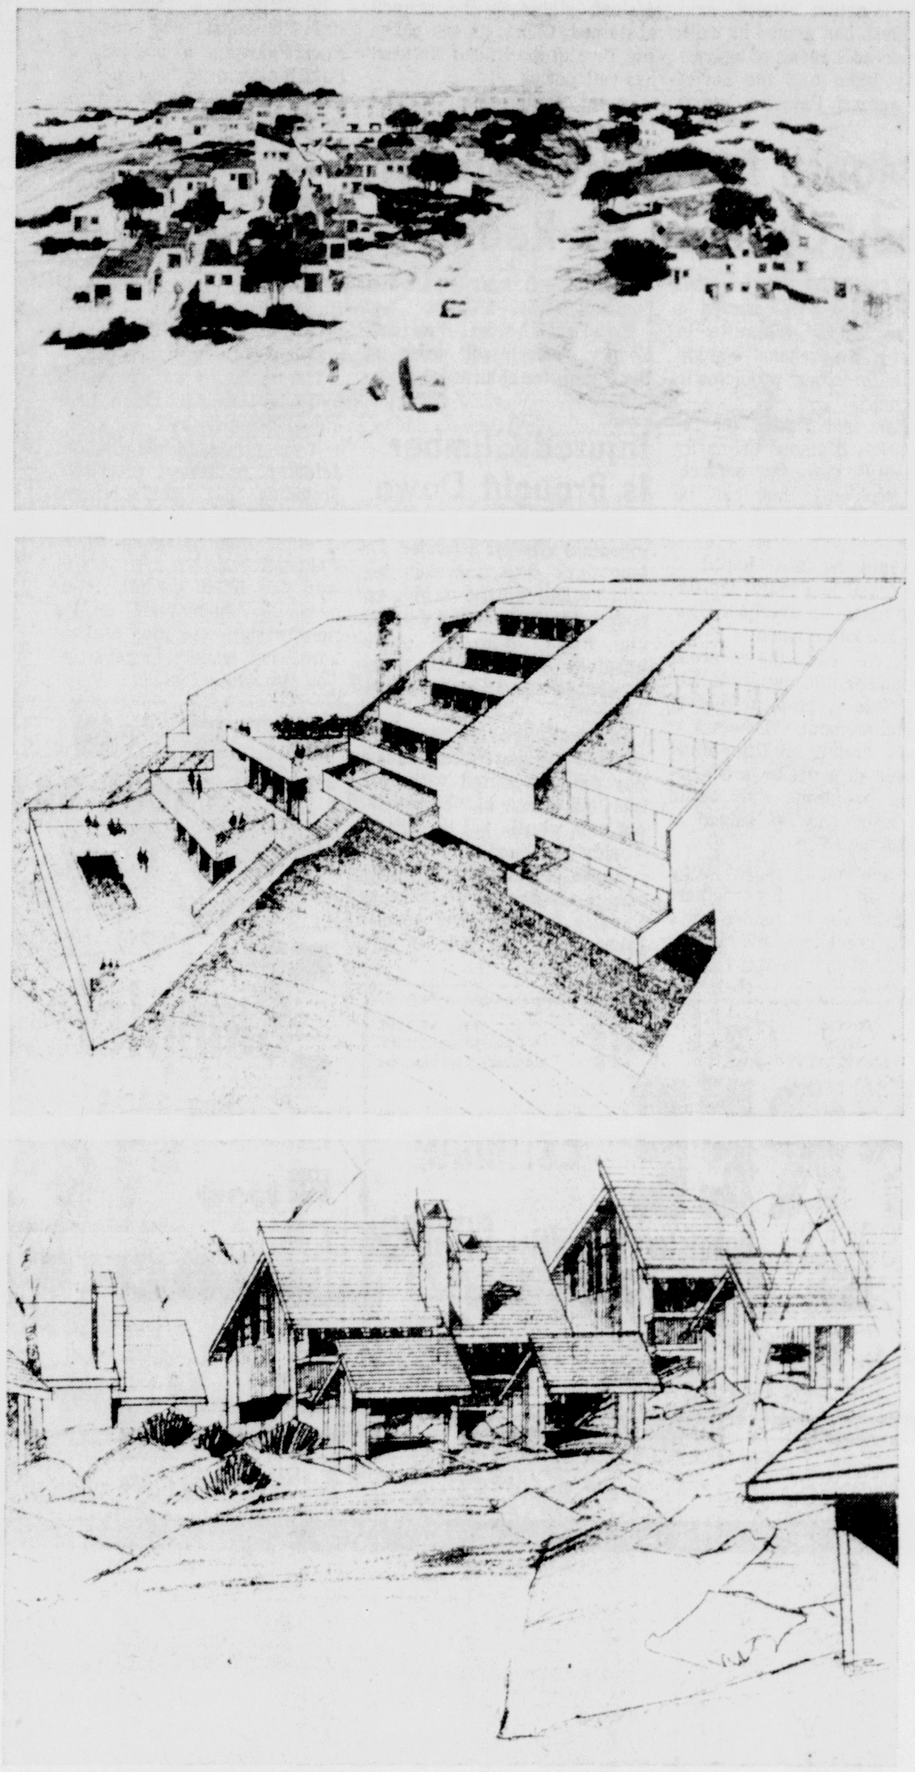
A spokesman said the fire was still miles away from the birds' nesting place and most of the birds were in Kern County about 50 miles to the northeast. Only 60 of the vulture-like birds are known to exist.

Fire fighters had managed by this morning to carve a fire line around 14 miles of the blaze's 24-mile perimeter, the spokesman said.

Cost of fighting the fire was estimated at $1.5 million, he added.

The Healdsburg blaze destroyed eight homes, 18 other structures and 10 vehicles before it was controlled Thursday night. Damage to property was estimated at $113,000.

A force of 925 men using 10 air tankers contained the San Bernardino National Forest fire Friday but it was not known when it would be controlled. The fire, which had a 15-mile perimeter, had caused no structural damage.



DEVELOPERS' PLANS — Townhouses, condominiums and apartments like these may soon rise on Marin City's long-vacant redevelopment lands in the heart of the community. Five development companies submitted proposals for the area yesterday. Mid-City Development of Washington, D.C., would build 444 apartments and condominiums (top), while plans submitted by Barry Slatt Mortgage Co. of San Francisco and Kaiser-Etna call for 180 apartments (center). Subsidized Housing Inc. of Beverly Hills proposed 462 apartments and townhouses (bottom.)

BIDS BY FIVE FIRMS

By PAT ANGLE

The prospect of Marin City redevelopment — stalled for nearly 15 years — appeared brighter yesterday as five firms submitted proposals to build apartments, townhouses and condominiums on remaining vacant residential land in the community.

"It's just like Christmas," Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of the Marin County Redevelopment Agency, exclaimed happily as the development plans poured into his office. Shepherd said yesterday's submittals were the "culmination of a year and a half of hard work."

Most of the long redevelopment delay has been caused by the California Development Co.'s failure to complete development of the community and by the agency's inability to regain control of the redevelopment land.

Cal Development, which served as the agency's only developer for more than seven years, finally released title to the unused property in January in exchange for title to the 167-acre ridgeland above Marin City. The New York development company had purchased the ridge for $441,000 in 1962, but had not received title to it until early this year.

Three companies — Inland Steel Corp. of Chicago, Mid-City Development of Washington, D.C., and Subsidized Housing Inc. of Beverly Hills presented plans to develop the entire 36 acres of residentially zoned property left in the redevelopment area.

The Barry Slatt Mortgage Co. of San Francisco, with Kaiser-Aetna, submitted proposals for nine acres, while the Larwin Corp. of Los Angeles presented two sets of plans, one for nine acres and another for four acres.

The smaller Larwin development would be done in conjunction with the Marin Urban Development Association, a community group which would own 1 per cent of the completed project under the plan.

All units propoed are market rate — rather than low cost — housing. (Despite protests from some residents that housing construction should be within the financial reach of persons now living in 300 units of public housing in Marin City, the agency has set itself against additional lgw-income dwellings in the community.)

The proposals, which would cost from $3.7 million to $10.7 million, are:

1. Inland Steel, 276 two, three and four-bedroom sale townhouses, $35,000 to $40,000 per unit, total project cost, $10.2 million.

2. Mid-City Development — 284 studio, one and two-bedroom apartments which will rent from $180 to $275 a month and 160 sale condominiums, $32,000 to $35,000 per unit, total project cost, $10.7 million.

3. Subsidized Housing — 462 units, including 237 apartments and 225 sale townhouses; size rental and sale costs of units unavailable.

4. Slatt-Kaiser Etna — 180 studio, one and two-bedroom apartments, from $225 to $320 a month, project cost $3.7 million.

5. Larwin — (nine acres), 200 one and two-bedroom apartments, $210 to $275 a month,

Yanks Blast Bridges Near China Border

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Air Force "Bridge Buster" team flew deep into North Vietnam Friday and destroyed three bridges on the Hanoi-China rail line, the U.S. command said.

The F4 Phantom jet fighter-bombers of the 8th Tactical Fighter Wing based in Thailand, dropped laser-guided "smart" bombs on the main and bypass bridges over the Hoa River 37 miles from the Chinese frontier and on the Lang Dang bypass bridge 30 miles from the border.

One Phantom flying cover for the bombing strike was hit by antiaircraft fire but the crew was rescued after ejecting safely over the Gulf of Tonkin, an Air Force spokesman said.

Air Force B52 bombers dropped a million-and-a-quarter pounds of explosives Friday and today on suspected Communist positions near the recaptured town of Que Son in an attempt to check what the U.S. command said was a major potential threat to Da Nang, 30 miles to the north.

Heavy fighting continued today around the nearby artillery base Ross which is still in Communist hands.

Col. Tran Van Nhut arrived at artillery base Baldy this morning to take command of the South Vietnamese 2nd Infantry Division and the drive on Ross. Nhut was named Friday to replace Brig. Gen. Pham Hoa Hiep, who was relieved of his command for abandoning Que Son and Ross. Nhut was one of the heroes in the siege of An Loc.

Government forces Friday recaptured the vital Que Son district town, and were pushing toward Ross three miles southeast. They reported that they had killed 100 Communists. UPI reporter Ed Bassett said the Saigon troops also had captured five Soviet-made wireguided missiles for the first time in the area.

It was the fifth time the main Cao Nung railroad bridge on the Hoa River has been destroyed and the second time U.S. planes have blown up the Lang Dang span.

"The Cao Nung is a difficult bridge to keep down," a spokesman said. "We would bomb it and they would build up the bypass. Then we would hit the bypass and they would repair the big bridge. This time we went there and hit them both at the same time. This will set Charlie (the North Vietnamese) back a while."

Other Air Force pilots have nicknamed fliers of the 8th Tactical Fighter Wing the "Bridge Busters" because of their speciality of attacking spans in Communist territory.

Radio Hanoi said two more U.S. F4 Phantom jets were shot down over North Vietnam Friday.

GOP Campaign Law Violation Is Hinted

Report Referred To Justice Department

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a report inspired by alleged bugging of Democratic national headquarters, the General Accounting Office today referred to the Justice Department "apparent and possible violations" of the new federal campaign law by President Nixon's reelection organization.

The GAO said in its report that the Committee for the Reelection of the President appeared to have violated the 1971 act in the following ways:

—The committee failed to keep detailed and exact accounting of the $25,000 contribution received by Kenneth H. Dahlberg, midwestern finance chairman for the re-election committee on April 9. The report said this constituted an apparent violation, as did the committee's failure to disclose the details of the $25,000 contribution in its June 10 report.

—The committee's failure to keep a "detailed and exact account" of how the $25,000 check and four Mexican bank checks totalling $89,000 were spent, along with the committee's failure to disclose the details of the expenditures in a June 10 report. The four checks were drawn on the Banco Internacional of Mexico City to the order of Sr. Manuel Ogarrio, a Mexico City attorney, and deposited in the same account on the same day as the Dahlberg check.

—The GAO cited the "committee's failure to keep and maintain adequate books and records on a current basis with respect to the $25,000 check and its proceeds, the proceeds of the four checks totalling $89,000 and the balance of the $350,000 in currency (which) constituted an apparent violation" of the comptroller general's rules and regulations under the law.

The report was issued after weeks of probing bank records in an effort to trace $114,000 that was allegedly channeled through the Nixon campaign fund to the Florida bank account of Bernard L. Barker, one of five men charged with breaking into Democratic National Committee headquarters on June 17.

The men, including James W. McCord Jr., then chief of security for the Nixon reelection

Nixon Prepares 'Final' Viet Troop Withdrawal

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—President Nixon today was preparing his next U.S. troop withdrawal announcement, probably his last until the Vietnam war ends.

The announcement will be made next week, possibly Monday, and is expected to fix a residue force of perhaps 25,000 men or less to remain in Vietnam until Hanoi releases U.S. prisoners of war.

Nixon previously cut the force level to 39,000 by Sept. 1.

The chief executive, exhausted but exhilarated after a triumphal Republican National Convention and a one-day cross country campaign kick-off, was making plans and pacing himself.

Settled into the relaxing surroundings of the Western White House overlooking the Pacific Ocean, he also was conferring with his chief foreign policy adviser Henry A. Kissinger on his two-day summit meeting late next week with Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka in Honolulu.

The Aug. 31-Sept. 1 talks are expected to be tough. Nixon and Tanaka will have to come to grips with Japan's friendly new relationship with China which is expected to lead to establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries in the near future.

The long simmering rift over U.S.-Japan trade relations also will be a prime topic between the two heads of state when they meet for the first time since Tanaka took the leadership reins.

The President's promised "political press conference" may be held next week before he goes to Hawaii. White House aides hinted a possible postponement until after the trip. It was expected to be held at Nixon's villa on live television.

The White House was walking a fine line on what is "political" and what is "presidential" in Nixon's activities these days.

McGovern To Base Race On Nixon's Personality

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. George S. McGovern, apparently convinced that a majority of Americans really do not like President Nixon very much, plans to make Nixon's record, personality and style his major campaign issue.

McGovern planned no public appearances this weekend in his quest for the presidency. His staff said the Democratic candidate would rest at his Washington home.

He spent a low-key day of campaigning on Capitol Hill Friday, speaking before labor leaders and officials of Rural Electric Cooperatives. He also named five women to campaign staff posts and reinterated his pledge to appoint a woman to the Supreme Court.

In McGovern's recent speeches, Nixon's name has appeared more than any other. There has been an occasional mention of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew as well.

"We are going to make Nixon the issue," McGovern said Friday. "I haven't been in power for the last 3-1-2 years when 2 million people were added to the unemployment rolls and 4 million people were added to the welfare rolls."

McGovern drew his loudest cheer from a group of supporters in organized labor when he said:

"I don't think the country can stand four more years of Richard Nixon and I know we can't stand four more years of Richard Nixon followed by what they are planning—eight years of Spiro Agnew."

Nixon, freshly renominated by the Republican party and on the way to his seventh summit meeting with a foreign head of government in less than a year, appears to be at the pinacle of his popularity.

But the McGovern camp clearly thinks the support for Nixon is superficial and can be eroded away.

In almost every speech, McGovern says Nixon has favored the rich and powerful over the common people. A favorite target is the $10 million in campaign funds which McGovern says Nixon received before the current campaign finance disclosure law went into effect.

A Liberation Celebration

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Women marked the third annual Women's Liberation Day Friday and today's 52nd anniversary of women's suffrage with parades, fairs and awards designed to demonstrate their demand for equal rights. (Related Story, page 7.)

Three female motorcyclists and a woman drummer led a parade of about 2,000 womens' rights activists down Fifth Avenue to a rally in New York Friday. Groups parading ranged from the National Organization for Women (NOW) to the Lesbian Liberation Committee.

In California, state Sen. James R. Mills of San Diego arrived in Fresno for a visit and was unpleasantly surprised with an award he wouldn't accept.

The Democratic senator was met at the airport by a group of NOW members demonstrating against his opposition to the state legislature ratifying the equal rights amendment passed by Congress. The women tried to present him with a "Barefoot and Pregnant" award for "non-contribution to the women's rights cause."

But in Washington, Lucy Wilson Benson, national president of the League of Women Voters, said 20 of the 38 state legislatures required to ratify the amendment have approved it. "If this pattern continues," she said, "we should be celebrating enactment of the 27th Amendment in May of next year."

In Philadelphia the Women's Political Caucus passed out feminist literature at a booth in center city and also urged women to register to vote.

Chicago NOW members conducted a feminist fair at the Church of Our Savio. Other members attended a hearing of the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission which heard charges of pay discrimination by the city of Chicago.

Some of the more militant marchers in New York jeered and hooted as they proceeded down Fifth Avenue. At one point, several hundred knocked down police barricades that were set up to keep the marchers on one side of the avenue and leave the other side open to traffic.

The women carried signs calling for repeal of all abortion laws, equal pay for equal work and "less love and more respect."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Oil Accord 'Near'

BEIRUT (UPI) — Western oil companies and Persian Gulf states are closer today than ever before to an agreement on the degree of participation host countries will receive in the running of foreign oil firms, oil sources said today.

The talks between representatives of companies operating in the gulf and five producing nations began last Saturday.

The countries, Saudi Arabia, Abu Dhabi, Qatar, Kuwait and Iraq, have demanded a minimum 20 per cent share of the companies' assets.

After the latest round of talks last night, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Oil Minister and chief spokesman for the governments, told newsmen, "Several obstacles have been overcome."

Angela Aid Offer

ATLANTA (UPI) — Angela Davis has offered her support to a committee formed to aid an Atlanta black woman charged with murdering her white supervisor at an Internal Revenue Service regional center.

Miss Davis, heavily guarded, spoke at a black Atlanta church yesterday on behalf of Emily Butler.

Miss Butler is accused of shooting Betty Davis last June after the woman allegedly harrassed her. The victim died a month later.

"Emily Butler has been made a scapegoat in the truest sense of the word," said Angela Davis. "She has been charged with being a murderer... she is a victim."

Lightning Strikes

DONGES, France (UPI) — Lightning ignited a cargo of oil on a Greek tanker in the Donges harbor today, setting off an explosion that tore the ship in half, maritime authorities said.

They said the fire and explosion aboard the 33,403-ton tanker Princess Irene injured 28 persons and 20 others were listed as missing. The ship was reported sinking.

Workmen were unloading the ship when the lightning struck. Donges, on the Loire River just off the Brittany coast, is the site of an important French oil refinery.

As the fire continued to rage, several more explosions rocked the Princess Irene, authorities said.

Russia Criticized

CAIRO (UPI) — An influential columnist said today the Soviet Union was free to withhold offensive weapons from Egypt, but has no right to dictate policy to the government of President Anwar Sadat regarding its right to liberate Israeli-occupied lands.

Ihsan Abdel Koddous, editor of the newspaper Akhbar el Yom, also criticized Russian leaders for failing to "rise to the situation" following Egypt's expulsion of Soviet military advisers.

It was the third article in as many weeks in which Koddous, known for his close connections with Sadat, criticized Russia's Middle East policy.

Deadline Ignored

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Juan D. Peron, who ruled Argentina as a dictator from 1946 to 1955, ignored a deadline yesterday to return from exile in Spain, thus voiding his candidacy for the March presidential election.

Peron's spokesmen here said the aging former president will return by October "at the latest" and will run in the 1973 elections, despite failure to meet the deadline.

Under pre-election conditions set by President Alejandro Lanusse, commander-in-chief of the Argentine army, it was clear that Lanusse would not be a candidate.

By failing to comply with the deadline to return, Peron was automatically ineligible, although his Justicialista party nominated him as its candidate last May.

Vatican Edict

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican has again ordered priests, monks and nuns not to abandon or modify their religious garments, Vatican sources said today.

A letter from the Department for Religious Orders was sent to papal diplomats around the world asking them to ensure that the dress rules are kept, the sources said.

Priests who trade their cassocks for business suits are told to wear nothing more jazzy than dark grey, along with the stiff white Roman collar. Nuns who are allowed to wear civilian clothes must choose dress which is consistent with "poverty, simplicity and modesty," the letter said.

Satellite Failure

TOKYO (UPI)—Japan's second scientific satellite, launched last weekend, has stopped its data transmission to the ground because of a power system failure, Japanese space scientists said today.

Chess Title Probe Yields Dead Flies

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) —A two-day investigation by chemistry professors, lighting engineers and x-ray photographers produced a piece of wood and two dead flies at the hall where the world championship chess match is held.

But there were no traces of the "electronic devices and chemical substances" that the Russian camp had charged the Americans were using to upset world champion Boris Spassky's game.

After Friday's adjorned 18th game in the 24-match championship between Spassky and U.S. challenger Bobby Fischer ended in a draw, Icelandic Chess Federation President Gudmundur Thorarinsson led a parade of experts on stage to complete the investigation he called Thursday.

"Gentlemen, the search is over," said Thorarinsson after technicians had dismanteled Spassky's $470 black leather swivel chair. "There was no trace of electronic or chemical devices. I hope we can get on with the match."

X-rays had earlier revealed a "large black shadow, like the shape of a knife" in the seat of Spassky's chair, Thorarinsson said.

But when the chair was scattered in pieces on the brightly-lighted stage, the "knife" turned out to be a wooden filler board. Earlier, engineers had come up with two dead flies discovered in the playing hall's lighting system.

The 19th game in the $250,000 match gets underway at 10 a.m. PDT Sunday.

China's First U.N. Vote Blocks Bangladesh Entry

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—China used its first U.N. Security Council veto Friday to buck the other four big powers and block admission of Bangladesh to the world organization.

Chinese Ambassador Huang Hua, defeating the resolution supported by 11 other members of the 15-nation council, said Bangladesh had gained its independence as a result of aggression by India and the Soviet Union against Pakistan and it should not receive membership until complying with U.N. resolutions calling for repatriation of prisoners captured in the war.

Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union voted for the resolution. Only China voted against. The three African states in the council abstained. China, as one of the Big Five in the United Nations, has veto power.

Soviet Ambassador Viktor Issraelyan, said the veto showed the "total bankruptcy of the Chinese position." He said China, excluded from the world body for more than 20 years, now "has used the veto to block the admission of a new state in the same violation of the principle of universality."

Bangladesh, a country the size of Wisconsin, was known as East Pakistan, a province of Pakistan, prior to the two-week Indo-Pakistani war in December, 1971. India with Soviet backing, defeated Pakistan, which had been supported by China and favored by the United States.

India then supported East Pakistan's declaration of independence as the new nation of Bangladesh. With 75 million people it is the eighth most populous country in the world.

The resolution was sponsored by India, the Soviet Union, Britain and Yugoslavia.

It was presented following the defeat of a Chinese resolution providing that Bangladesh be considered for membership only after repatriation of 80,000 Pakistani military prisoners of war and 10,000 civilian detainees. An amendment to the membership resolution making admission subject to repatriation also was defeated.

6-Month Law Enforcement Study Ordered By Reagan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan has named a five-man "select" committee to conduct a comprehensive study of law enforcement problems in California.

Reagan said Friday the research was designed primarily to "identify those law enforcement problems that can be most effectively solved by state action."

He said he also hoped it would result in a major legislative program to overhaul California law enforcement.

In recent years, the governor said, substantial progress has been made at the local level of law enforcement. "However," he said, "relatively little effort has been directed toward identifying problems that could most effectively be solved at the state level."

The governor's Select Committee on Law Enforcement Problems will be funded by a $102,451 grant from the California Council on Criminal Justice. The study will begin Sept. 1 and conclude by Feb. 28, 1973.

Edwin Osborne, Ventura County counsel, will serve as the committee chairman.

Injured Climber Is Brought Down

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)—A mountain climber stranded for four days with a broken leg said he had started to give up hope before helicopters plucked him Friday from his perch hundreds of feet above rocky ground in the Cascade Mountains.

Craig Keyes, 31, said he couldn't swallow chocolate for a day until it poured with rain and told of how he "blew hell" out of a whistle but thought he wouldn't be found.

Keyes of Bellingham, Wash., was in satisfactory condition at Swedish Hospital after he was taken from the side of Mt. Index.

Schmitz Targets Media, Nixon

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Rep. John G. Schmitz, American Independent Party presidential nominee, criticized the news media Friday for failing to give him as much coverage as the Republican and Democratic nominees.

"My complaint is that we keep getting calls from our own people...saying, 'We keep reading in the paper that President Nixon is rolling over in bed and George McGovern sneezes and it's front page,'" Schmitz said.

Speaking at a news conference, the lame-duck Republican congressman from Orange County, said socialism "has never moved faster in this country as it has under the four years of Richard Nixon."

Schmitz also said the Nixon administration was endangering U.S. troops in Vietnam by making trade technology deals with the Soviet Union, which supplies North Vietnam.

He said one example was the President's agreement during the recent Moscow summit to trade computer technology with the Soviets.

The Japanese try to pay all debts and end family feuds for the New Year.

Booby Trap Bomb Kills Two In Ireland

BELFAST (UPI)—A booby-trapped automobile exploded today near a border village, killing two part-time Ulster Defense Regiment (UDR) soldiers, the army said.

Minutes later an army truck carrying 13 troopers hit a landmine as it rushed to the scene, smashing the vehicle and hurling its occupants into a ditch. Most escaped with minor injuries, an army spokesman said.

"It was a well planned ambush," said one officer "they really must have thought this one out."

At least three more deaths were discovered today, bring the death toll in the province in three years to 536.

Police found the body of a bound and gagged man in the mixed Catholic-Protestant Old Park area of Belfast. He had been shot to death.

At least two other persons were killed in a pre-dawn bomb explosion at Downatrick County Down racetrack, authorities said.

Authorities declined to speculate whether one of the racetrack victims might have been the bomber killed by his own bomb going off prematurely. They said so far only parts of a body had been found.

The army said a four-man UDR patrol spotted four men running from a car on a lonely country lane just north of Enniskillen, 72 miles southwest of Belfast, shortly after midnight.

The patrol parked 75 yards from the car and two soldiers gave cover while the other two approached it. As soon as they touched the vehicle, it exploded, killing them instantly, the spokesman said.

Almost immediately, a regular army four-ton truck traveling nearby hit a landmine in the road as it rushed to the scene.

In the past week, landmines in border towns and on border roads have killed four British soldiers. Other mines have been uncovered and defused.

The increase in attacks by gunmen and bombers near the border had been expected by army intelligence agents following capture of secret Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) documents, an army source said.

The documents, seized after the army's move last month into Londonderry's barricaded "no-go" areas, showed the IRA hoped to draw troops from heavily fortified towns and cities to open areas near the border where they would be easier targets.

Police said the victim found in Belfast's Old Park area today had been bound and gagged. Discovery of the body came shortly after troops arrested three Protestant youths Friday.

Tax Rate Goes Up, Not Down

The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported yesterday that the Mill Valley City Council had set a tax rate four cents lower than last year's rate.

At a meeting Thursday night, the council set a rate of $2.84 per $100 assessed valuation which is actually eight cents higher than last year.

The tentative 1972-1973 budget, as originally proposed by City Mgr. William H. Cunningham, carried a proposed tax rate of $2.88 per 100 assessed valuation.

Argentina's main exports are meat and grain.

Final Mill Valley Budget Approved: Up $439,000

The Mill Valley City Council has adopted a final budget of $2,577,502 for 1972-1973, up $439,371 over last fiscal year.

At its final budget session Thursday night, the council also set a tax rate of $2.84 per $100 assessed valuation, an increase of eight cents.

Increased budget expenditures included $12,000 for an additional fireman; $3,200 for fire resistant clothing for the department; $12,000 for an additional police patrolman, and $7,500 to pay the five city councilmen's salaries of $150 per month.

The biggest budget increase went to the planning department, with about $24,000 added to its account. The council budgeted $15,000 in partial pay for a private planning consultant to prepare a master plan of the entire city and $9,000 to hire an assistant planner. The assistant planner will relieve Planning Director Tom W. Newton of some day-to-day responsibilities.

The council also budgeted $8,500 for a standby generator for city hall in case of a power shortage and $15,000 for the parks and recreation department to finance new fee-collecting recreation programs.

Also budgeted was $44,500 to pay interest and principal on $450,000 worth of sewer bonds sold in 1971 and $8,250 to pay interest and principal on $275,000 worth of fire house bonds to be sold next year.

DUMP TRUCK TIPS, SNARLS TRAFFIC

A dump truck lies on its side on the southbound right shoulder of Highway 101 north of Greenbrae while workmen try to right it. The accident, which slowed traffic for two hours, occurred about 1 p.m. yesterday as the truck was being filled with a load of rock, according to the California Highway Patrol. The incident in which apparently no one was hurt, was one of a series of misaps — including a four-car accident at 1:20 p.m. on the Waldo Grade northbound — that snarled already heavy Friday afternoon highway traffic.

No Quorum For Meeting On Hub Tax

A special meeting of the San Anselmo School District board, called last night to consider a 17-cent hike in the district's tax rate, failed to draw a quorum, Supt. Frank R. Elliott reported today.

Elliott had called the meeting after new figures from the Marin County Schools Office showed the district's tax rate for 1972-73 to be $3.62 per $100 of assessed valuation — a 27-cent hike over the tax rate he had projected last month.

Elliott said that the district's current levy of $3.45 per $100 of assessed valuation will have to be raised to finance an adopted budget of $2,278,046 for 1972-73, up about $200,000 from last fiscal year. The new superintendent said that earlier predictiaon of a 10-cent cut in the tax rate resulted from misinformation between incoming and outgoing administrations.

He said the board again will consider the tax rate at 8 p.m. Sept. 14 in Red Hill School. Trustees Franklin C. Latcham and John Hulpke were absent last night.

Elliott said that about 50 people attended last night's meeting, but that "there wasn't much dispute" regarding the new tax rate figures.

The superintendent also told concerned parents from Sleepy Hollow that he would explore the possibility of providing bus service for third and fourth graders. The service had been cut from the 1972-73 budget, he said.

Petaluma Youth Killed By Car

A 14-year-old Petaluma boy was killed yesterday when struck by a car as he was crossing Magnolia Avenue at Antone Drive in Petaluma.

Bret Plourde of 1224 Kathleen Way was hit at 9:30 p.m. by an eastbound car driven by William L. Larsen, 29, of 4 Jessie Avenue in Petaluma, police said.

project cost $5 million; (four acres), 100 one and two-bedroom apartments, $210 to $275 a month, $2.8 million cost.

Douglas C. Myers, a San Jose consultant retained by the agency to handle its real estate matters, said selection of one or more of the development firms will be based on architectural excellence and the developers ability to provide training, jobs and investment opportunities for community residents.

The companies all have submitted plans for community involvement in the various projects proposed.

All have indicated they will meet federal standards for recruiting minority subcontractors and employees and provide job training for minority workers.

In addition, Larwin has promised to give the locally-based urban development association a 1 per cent interest in the project and provide MUDA with a role in management and operation of the completed development.

Mid-City Development would refinance the 56-unit Oak Knoll Apartments in Marin City and turn it over to a community group, which is yet to be formed, which would then own, operate and run it, at no cost to the group.

Oak Knoll is currently in default on mortgage payments and has been taken over by the Federal Housing Administration.

Mid-City also would develop — on an interim basis — the Tamalpais High School District's now vacant 30-acre property in the redevelopment project into a recreational area until the district decides what it wants to do with the land which it purchased from the agency for $60,000.

Between now and Sept. 7, when the redevelopment agency board meets to consider the development proposals, the plans will be reviewed by the agency staff and project area committee, a group of Marin City residents chosen to advise in redevelopment matters. The proposals also will be presented to the Marin County Planning Department for comments and recommendations.

Reports from the staff, area committee and planning department will be presented to the agency board Sept. 7.

Once the agency board selects the developer or developers it wants, the chosen proposals will have to be approved by the county planning commission. The next step would be contracts between the agency and the developers. Construction of the first units then would begin next spring and be completed by September 1973.

Development of remaining commercial areas in the redevelopment project will come later, after the housing has been completed and new residents of Marin City provide a large enough market to stimulate commercial growth.

Sonoma Jail Prisoners End Strike

A week-long hunger strike by 50 inmates at the Sonoma County Jail ended yesterday afternoon after the prisoners met with county jail officials.

A dinner of salmon patties, potato salad and fruit cocktail ended the strike which had started Monday.

The inmates had refused food to protest the lack of religious services, inadequate telephone privileges and the lack of access to the public defender.

Jail officials reported the strike ended at 1 p.m., but would not reveal the details of the negotiations.

Additional meetings between inmates and officials are scheduled Friday.

Marin Firm Bids Low For Roadwork

The turnout lane will be about 300 feet south of the intersection and a sidewalk will be constructed to provide access.

committee, carried electronic eavesdropping equipment and cameras.

Under the federal election reform law, disclosure must be made of major contributions and expenditures after April 7, the day the law took effect.

The GAO is empowered to refer its finding to the Justice Department for prosecution. The criminal penalty for each violation is a fine of up to $1,000 or one year in jail for any campaign committee officially involved.

Spokesmen for the Committee to Re-Elect the President have said the $114,000 in question was part of $10.2 million collected before April 7 and listed as "cash on hand" even though it reached the committee after the law's effective date.

Dwayne Andreas, a Minneapolis businessman and one of the biggest financial backers of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's unsuccessful bid for the Democratic presidential nomination, was identified as the source of the $25,000 check that wound up in Barker's account.

Dahlberg has said Andreas made the contribution on April 5 —two days before the law went into effect. He said he picked it up from a Florida hotel depository April 9, converted it into a cashier's check and gave it to Maurice H. Stans, Nixon's chief political fund-raiser, on April 11 in Washington.

The GAO acted shortly after Stans issued a statement denying that he had sought to block the report, although he acknowledged that he had met with GAO officials in Miami Beach last Tuesday, the day the report was originally scheduled to be issued.

The report was referred to the Justice Department by Acting Comptroller General Robert F. Keller and signed by Phillip S. Hughes, director of the Office of Federal Elections.

She also is survived by four sisters, Zita Ludeman of Petaluma, Hadyn Sartori of Merced, Loretta Cox and Letitia Sartori of San Francisco; two grandchildren and a great-granddaughter.

Agnew Rips McGovern On Amnesty

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) —Vice President Spiro T. Agnew told the national Veterans of Foreign Wars convention Friday that Sen. George S. McGovern's proposal of general amnesty for draft dogers would "tear the country apart."

The vice president told cheering VFW delegates President Nixon opposes any general, unconditional amnesty without penalty for those who evaded the draft during the Vietnam War.

Agnew was loudly applauded 16 times during his appearance. McGovern, who addressed the same convention Thursday, was appluaded at the start and end of his speech but there was silence in between.

A general amnesty, Agnew said, could undermine the nation's draft laws, which may be vital in the future defense of the United States.

He said he disagreed with McGovern's view "that the issuance of a general amnesty would bring the country together."

"It seems to me that this kind of amnesty would tear the courty apart," he said. "It would anger, and I believe rightly so, the millions of Americans who have served honorably in our armed forces and the tens of millions whose sons and husbands and other relatives have been or now are in uniform."

Shriver Visits The GOP Headquarters

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Startled workers in President Nixon's re-election campaign headquarters didn't think they could win over Friday evening's unexpected visitor, but they tried.

They offered him some campaign literature, but he wouldn't accept it. But he picked up a balloon with Nixon's picture on it and bounced it like a volleyball.

The surprise guest—Democratic vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver—told the GOP workers the balloon was "mighty official looking."

"Good luck in the election," Shriver told the Republicans. "Because you're going to need it."

Several minutes after Shriver left the GOP headquarters, his aides discovered he had left notes from a speech in the office and returned for them.

Republicans at first refused to surrender them, but when a policeman was summoned, the notes were handed over.

Two Ohio union leaders claimed they were snubbed by Shriver. Frank King, head of the Ohio AFL-CIO and who gained a sort of fame at the Democratic convention by repeatedly passing votes, and James Isfelice, president of District 54 of the International Association of Machinists, waited two hours in a downtown hotel for a meeting they said had been scheduled with Shriver. No meeting took place.

Isfelice said McGovern and Shriver "had a chance for a wedding and they blew it," apparently referring to possible union support of the ticket.

Shriver's social call on the Republicans came while campaigning Friday in Cleveland and nearby Painesville and Euclid.

Between stops, Shriver said he and presidential candidate George McGovern faced an uphill battle against President Nixon in November.

"If the election was tomorrow, we would lose," Shriver said. "But because this is the start of the campaign, we have a good chance, a fighting chance, and I think we will win in November."

At the Lake County Fair, Shriver said, "If George and I get into the White House, we won't be vetoing a bill that would aid education and create jobs," in reference to Nixon's recent veto of an education bill the President called inflationary.

San Rafael Man Critical After Bridge Collision

A San Rafael man was reported in critical condition today in Marin Genral Hospital following a two-car collision on the Golden Gate Bridge at 7:45 p.m. yesterday.

Edgar J. Thibodeau, 46, of 136 Peacock Drive, was admitted to the intensive care unit with possible head, chest and internal injuries.

Also injured in the accident were passengers in the second car, Doris Engle, 40, of 348 Via Hidalgo, Greenbrae, reported in fair condition with hip, leg and ankle injuries, and Anna Liesener, 60, of the same address, reported in satisfactory condition with multiple abrasions and contusions.

According to the California Highway Patrol, a car driven by Thibodeau traveling northbound on the Golden Gate Bridge swerved into southbound traffic and was struck by a car driven by Adolf Richard Alfred Engel of 284 Via Hidalgo, Greenbrae.

Mindszenty At Reunion In Brussels

BRUSSELS (UPI)—Cardinal Jozsef Mindszenty, 10 months out of exile, held a tearful and jubilant reunion with hundreds of Hungarian refugees today at the start of a weekend celebration for the 1,000th anniversary of St. Stephen.

Mindzenty, who ended 15 years of exile in the U.S. Embassy in Budapest at Pope Pauls VI's personal request 10 months ago, met briefly in the airport chapel with Hungarians now living in Western Europe. He joined in singing the Hungarian anthem.

"I would like to take the opportunity to express my gratitude and appreciation for all the help and support to the Hungarian people following two world wars," the cardinal said. A crowd of about 300, including some girls dressed in Hungarian costume, burst into applause when Mindszenty stepped off the plane on a flight from Vienna. It is only the third time Mindszenty has left the Pazmaneum in Vienna since he went there last October.

Water Warning

MOSCOW (UPI)—City officials today warned Moscow's 7.4 million residents to stop wasting water because consumption of it is up by 20 per cent in the hottest summer in a century.

Drug Rings May Be Resumed

GARDEN CITY, N.Y.(UPI)—A federal source says that New York's organized crime families are thinking about resuming operations in international drug trafficking partly as a "service to the country," Newsday reported today in a copyrighted article.

The article by reporter Tom Renner quoted the unidentified source as saying the proposal came up at a meeting of "New York Cosa Nostra leaders" on Staten Island Aug. 12.

Mob leaders have been pressured by young Turks in their organizations to re-enter the drug market they dropped out of during the 1960s due to strict enforcement of federal narcotics laws that resulted in the jailing of reputed organized crime leader Vito Genovese, the article said.

The Elderly And Creative Leisure

Should Begin Preparation In 3rd Grade

By MELVIN MADDOCKS
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

In industrial society, sociologist Max Kaplan once observed, the masses toiled so the elite could play. In postindustrial society, he predicted, the elite will toil so the masses can play. The day will come, he foresees, when a man will go to the bank and brrow $10,000 — and 5,000 hours. The uses he makes of those future hours may be defined by the goals evolved for "creative" retirement today.

Obviously, creative retirement must constitute more than the frenetic riding of hobby-horses or the compulsive extension of work habits no longer required. Before leisure can be "creative," the values of leisure must be introduced into a society that has previously operated under a work ethic. And the values of maturity must somehow be introduced into a society that virtually worships youth. Until a leisure ethic is developed, the dignity of the "nonactive" American will perilously depend on insincere Golden Years rhetoric.

"From the time they're infants, we prepare people for working," Fritz Crumb, director of the Boston Center for Older Americans, comments. "We don't prepare people for not working." Yet the proportions have almost been reversed. In 1900 one had the 60-hour work week. In the 1970s one has the 60-hour leisure week.

Even Winston Churchill admitted: "It's hard to find new interests at the end of one's life." Creative retirement depends upon creative preparation for retirement, which should begin, Crumb says seriously, around the third grade. But is anybody qualified to teach it?

THERE ARE books, periodicals, television programs for children and young people. The special interests of those we call "senior citizens" are largely ignored. Why do books have so little to say about old people? Andre Gide once wrote, "I believe it is because the old can no longer write them and because when one is young one does not bother with the old. An elderly man — he no longer interests anyone at all."

In the study, "The Coming of Age," Simone de Beauvoir goes so far as to suggest that the prevailing attitude toward the "nonactive" is: "They have neither the same needs nor the same feelings as other men."

Amid all these prejudices, these false beliefs, how can retirement be made creative?

It becomes an individual, an almost aristocratic, act to insist upon the values of leisure as well as activity, the values of tradition as well as novelty. And it is at this point that people like Florida Scott-Maxwell speak with the voice of the pioneer.

"We have reached," she writes for all the "nonactive," "the place beyond resignation." Then she declares the birthright of maturity: To engage in the "rich and searing process of gathering a center."

Mrs. Scott-Maxwell was born in Florida and educated, for the most part, privately. At 16 she went on the stage. At 20 she left the theater to become a short-story writer and playwright. She married a Scotsman and raised a family in her husband's country while continuing to write and to work for woman's suffrage.

At 50 she began another career, studying under Jung to become an analytical psychologist and practicing well into her 70s.

At 82 she sat down to examine out loud "creative" retirement. "A notebook," she decided, "might be the very thing for all of the old who wave away crossword puzzles, painting, petit point, and knitting." The result in her case is a remarkable journal: "The Measure of My Days."

Mrs. Scott-Maxwell has brilliantly distinguished the opportunity from the predicament of retirement. "Age," she writes, "is more than a disability. It is an intense and varied experience, almost beyond our capacity at times, but something to be carried high."

RETIRED, waiting for her bus on a street corner, this elderly woman seems to be pondering her future. Creative retirement depends on creative preparation for retirement from the person's earliest years, one authority believes.

SHE SEES retirement as a kind of ultimate confrontation with one's life,with one's humanity. The retired, she points out, "are not protected from life by engagements, or pleasures, or duties. We cannot get away from it." The one recourse, she concludes, is to "enjoy the simple and immediate."

She writes of her own retirement: "I thought it was a quiet time. My 70s were interesting, and fairly serene, but my 80s are passionate. I grow more intense as I age."

The plot, the scenery, the supporting cast of the "active" life-drama slowly disappear, and one gets down to essences: "I feel most real when alone, even most alive. . .The last years seemed a culmination and by concentrating on them one becomes more truly oneself."

Is this sort of retirement easy? "The ordea of being true to your own inner way," Mrs. Scott-Maxwell answers, "must stand high in the list of ordeals. . .It is not easy to be sure that being yourself is worth the trouble, but we do know it is our sacred duty."

Here is the gift life presents the "nonactive": "A degree of consciousness which lies outside activity, and which when young we are too busy to experience. . .It takes great courage to open our minds and hearts, yet it is required of us to our last breath."

Whatever one's specific interests — one hardly need be an intellectual like Mrs. Scott-Maxwell — her journal and other pioneering explorations like it show the way to a definition of living that stands in promising contrast to the dead ends of certain other 20th-Century patterns. Activity will, and should, go on. Helped by placement services like the Boston Civic Center and Clearing House, one volunteer in her 80s found work at the information desk of that most futuristic of institutions, the Museum of Science. Another (who happens to be blind) teaches arts and crafts to her contemporaries — and her juniors. Still other volunteers spearhead waste-cycling drives with the persistence, say their supervisors, of now — if not future — people.

THE "ACTIVITIES" are numberless. But leiure remains a separate art. As a life-style, "creative" retirement emphasizes the following values in a kind of ascending order:

—The value of doing nothing. Riva Poor, the protagonist of the four-day work week, insists upon the legitimacyof "goofing off." "We've made perimeters out of jobs and family roles," she argues. "Everybody says, 'Oh boy! Don't take that away! People will collapse.' Maybe they're wrong. Maybe we should leave a lot of nice empty white space at the center and see what happens. People may be better than we think."

Another exponent of doing nothing sums up, "I've learned the difference between being passive and being receptive."

—The value of play. We are becoming slowly aware that what gets self-importantly called "useful activity" can also be interpreted as the games-people-play. Rathar than making us cynical, this insight should enrich our concept of living. The sanction for play should raise the status of both children and the retired, rescuing them from the false categories of the "useless" or the "parasitic" and making them equals with those other game-players whose games happen to be their jobs.

—The value of humor. Here again children and the "creatively" retired form a natural alliance against the pretensions of the madding crowd between them. "I wish a notebook could laugh," Mrs. Scott-Maxwell writes. Detachment makes the retired into qualified critics on the follies of the very busy. And how the world needs that criticism.

"The nice thing about being older," one retired woman said, "is the view. It's like looking down from an airplane — sort of beautiful, sort of funny, watching all the ants."

—THE VALUE of the past. "Feeling at variance with the limes must be the essence of age," Mrs. Scott-Maxwell decided. But this independence can become not mere alienation but a source of restraint to a society where fads are runaway, where novelty and change are absurdly overrated as intrinsic good.

—The value of understanding. Jung wondered if the first half of life shouldn't be devoted to doing, the last half to self-awareness of exactly what one had done and why. Certainly ambition, for instance, becomes a more and more ridiculous quality as a person gets older while curiosity, on the other hand, becomes, if anything, more appropriate.

The first achievement of "creative" retirement then may be to invent an alternative life-style, for the retired, of course, but for others as well. In designing a value-system that gives a continuity to life (unlike the work ethic), today's "creatively" retired will cease to be a despised rear guard. In fact, they will have every chance to become the vanguard of tomorrow's world.

The bridegroom asked his father to be his best man. The ushers were Patrick C. Murphy of La Habra, the bridegroom's brother, and Charles H. Conrad of Corte Madera.

Five Opera Previews To Be Given

The Junior League of San Francisco, including the Marin membership, will sponsor five opera previews as a public service this fall.

The previews are given in cooperation with the San Francisco Opera Association.

The first will be Bellini's "Norma," on Sept. 14 at 11 a.m. at the Curran Theater. Dr. Jan Popper will be the speaker.

Other previews: "Der Ring der Nibelungen," Sept. 25, 11 a.m., Geary Theater; "Tosca," Oct. 12, 11 a.m., Miyako Hotel; "The Vist of the Old Lady," Oct. 18, noon, Fairmont Hotel ballroom; and "L'Africaine," 11 a.m. Nov. 2, Miyako Hotel.

Dr. Walter Schaefer, director of the Stuttgart State Opera, will present the second preview.

Women Economic Status 'Improved'

Efforts to improve the social and economic status of minority race workers have led to better jobs and higher earnings for many minority women, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Between 1960 and 1971 the proportion of all minority women workers employed in professional and technical jobs rose from 6 to 11 per cent, and the proportion in clerical jobs rose from 9 to 22 per cent.

Over the same 11-year period, the proportion in private household work decreased from 35 to 17 per cent. The median wage or salary income of women of minority races employed full time year around rose from $2,372 in 1960 to $4,674 in 1970.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Marijuana Is A Kind Of Grass, So You Can Be Allergic To It

DEAR RAP:

Is there such a thing as being allergic to marijuana? And is it true that it can cause skin trouble? Like acne?

I have hay fever, especially around lawn cuttings and certain flowers. My eyes water and turn red and I can't get my breath, but this usually simmers down to sneezing by late summer.

I started smoking pot recently. And all my hay fever symptoms are back. Whenever I'm around people who smell of it, my eyes pour water, unless I load up on hay fever pills and then I don't know whether it's the pot or the pills that make me sort of float.

Also I've noticed a lot of people who blow weed have bad acne. A friend of mine (who doesn't smoke) says marijuana is bad for the skin. I can't ask a doctor about this, so would you please find out for me? — SNEEZY

DEAR SNEEZY:

My doctor says marijuana is a kind of grass; many grasses initiate hay fever attacks; therefore it's quite possible you can be allergic to pot.

As for skin problems, H. L. Herschensohn, M.D., a well known medical writer, says, "Marijuana has a bad effect on the sebaceous glands so that pimples, water blisters, blackheads, inflamed nodules and infected cysts occur. . .It is also known to cause seborrhea, a greasy scale disease of the skin, and dandruff. When these symptoms occur together with swelling of the eyelids, marijuana is a most likely cause. In some cases, there is a swelling on top of the hands between the knuckles and the wrist, another telltale sign of pot use. . .A doctor can often tell just by the appearance of the skin whether or not his patient is abusing any of the mind-altering drugs."

Acne was a teenage problem long before pot became one, but doctors are beginning to note a correlation between heavy users and stubborn blemishes, Dr. Herschensohn adds in his newspaper column, "Medical Memos." — HELEN

RAP!

Here's my version of TELEPHONE CALLERS I CAN DO WITHOUT:

These people give me telephobia:

. . .The acquaintance who complains, "Where WERE you? I've been calling all day!" (As if you must answer to her for not waiting breathlessly by the phone.))

. . .The guy who says, "Hey, I didn't wake you up, did I?" (At 2 a.m. yet?)

. . .The joker ("This is your electric company. Is your refrigerator running? Well, lasso it!"), the "breather," the "whistle blower." (ouch, my eardrum!) Usually this type gets you out of the bathtub.

. . .Telephone saleswomen who pretend their're doing legit surveys, or tell you that you've won a big prize, like $5.00 down on a cemetery lot.

. . .Politcal campaigners who hang up fast when you say you're only 17.

. . .The dud who asks "What are you doing Sunday?" and you quick-think "I'll be out of town," and he says, "Too bad, I was going to bring Gil who wants to meet you." (Gil happens to be your unreachable dream.)

. . . .The gabber who runs on for an hour about HER life, then asks, "What have YOU been doing?" and before you've managed four words she says, "Well, I'll let you go now."

. . .The company buck-passers who let you explain the whole complaint over and over, all the way down the line till you get to Miss Soandso, who says, "Oh yes, Mr. T. is the one you should talk to, but he's on a month's vacation."

. . .And, your Dad who breaks into a conversation with Mr. Wonderful to say, "Knock it off — I need the phone for a business call!" — SUE

'Not So Skinnies' Must Choose Right Patterns

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

With the "layered" look for all types of dresses, what are the "not so skinnies" going to do?

MRS. M.E.H.

DEAR MRS. M.E.H.,

We "not so skinnies" will have to spend a little more time carefully choosing the right patterns without sacrificing the new look for fall. I recommend the jumper dress rather than the skirt with all the separates.

Jumpers are not only new for fall, they are much more slenderizing than skirts, which have a tendency to cut you off right in half. If you do make a skirt, add a vest of the same color. This will give you a one piece look.

With the jumpers, you can add the skinny sweaters or shirtwaist blouses. You might even add a sleeveless vest or tunic, buttoned or unbottoned if it seems to be flattering. Jumpers are definitely part of the ensemble look and are usually teamed with a jacket or coat Therefore, they could also double as a sleeveless dress for "after 5."

With careful consideration, almost every fashion can be modificed for almost every figure, but first, you must be honest with yourself and acknowledge what you have to work with figurewise.

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. James L. Orr, Baton Rouge, La., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"To solve the problem most home sewers find in leftover hem tapes, seam bindings, bias tapes, I place the leftover tapes back on the card and sew across the card on my sewing machine, using the longest stitch and leaving two inches of thread at each end. The cardboard is so soft, I haven't found it harms the needle. When I need tape, it's no trouble to rip the few stitches off the card and go again."

DEAR EUNICE,

I am sway-backed and need your help. Since I'm sewing my own clothes, I am more particular about the fitting than I was when I purchased them. Now I am very aware of the way the back of my dresses fit and hope you can give me a few tips.

MRS. L.P.

DEAR MRS. L.P.:

Most women tend to overfit the sway back area. This only causes extra attention to the shape of your body, and besides, it is impossible to shape a piece of fabric to conform.

Instead, choose a pattern that will disguise this figure fault (and you are certainly not alone). I would avoid a skimpy cut dress or skirt. A dress with a slightly raised waistline and a little soft gathers instad of darts could be one solution.

When making a skirt, if you cut a facing of the skirt fabric instead of the convention l waistband, it will fit better. You can curve the back of the waistline slightly and it will lay nice and smooth.

Whether it's a fitted skirt or a dress without gathers, I would always recommend you use a slightly heavier underlining or a separate lining besides the underlining. This will give a little extra body to this part of the garment and prevent it curving or sinking into the curve of your body. It will disguise your figure fault.

DEAR EUNICE,

I try to follow the newest fashions but simply can't see myself in those sleeves with the puffy caps. I agree they look cute on the younger gals, but not for more mature women. I love some of the patterns and wonder if I can't change these sleeves and substitute sleeves with the smooth cap.

MRS. V.L.

DEAR MRS. V.L.:

If the sleeve seems to be cut with a normal shoulder, there is no reason you can't substitute the sleeve pattern. You must also check the shape of the armhole.

This is a simple procedure. Take the bodice front and back from the same pattern that has the sleeve you want to use. Lay the bodice over the original bodice, checking the cut of the armhole and the width of the shoulder and underarm. In other words, the armhole must be cut to fit the sleeve you are using. When they are identical, you may proceed with cutting the new sleeve and setting it into the armhole.

FOR THE professional look in set-in sleeves, you will want to follow Eunice Farmer's illustrated instructions in her informative booklet "All About Sleeves." You may obtain your booklet by sending 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

MARIN NOW'S DEMANDS

Women March On Civic Center

A delegation from the Marin chapter of the National Organization for Women marched through the Marin County Civic Center yesterday and taped a list of seven demands for equal employment opportunities for women to the door of the board of supervisors chambers.

On the eve of Women's Equality Day, chapter spokeswomen urged the county to open jobsat all levels to women on an equal basis with men. They urged the county to employ more women and minority group persons in its better jobs.

The NOW members also asked that the county appoint a full-time affirmative action officer to implement the affirmative action plan suggested by the state Fair Employment Practices Commission, and the spokeswomen called for the county to immediately come up with goals and timetables for the hiring and promotion of women and minority persons for all county departments and for middle and topounty jobs.

Marin NOW has carried on a two-year campaign for equality by the county in hiring and promoting women to its better jobs, according to NOW chapter president Barbara Hosmer.

In 1970 the chapter surveyed county employment rolls and found that women held largely clerical positions. The women who did hold higher level positions were mainly in "traditional" women's departments, Public Social Service and health, she said.

On April 1, 1971, NOW brought its complaint against the county to the FEPC, which voted to undertake an affirmative action study of Marin's employment patterns and to request the county to embark on a plan to hire and upgrade women and minority persons.

The county board of supervisors accepted the FEPC report this year and voted to begin an action plan.

But, Ms. Hosmer said, the county has given the matter lip service rather than action. NOW members who spoke at the board of supervisors' workshop with the personnel commission last month said the county's intention to make its current personnel director also the affirmative action officer represented a conflict of interests and proof that the county intended to do very little in the way of affirmative action.

James H. Mason of the FEPC affirmative action office agreed that a fulltime officer should be hired who had special knowledge of employment problems of women and minorities.

The supervisors disagreed, stating they intend to appoint the current personnel director also as affirmative action officer, as recommended by the county personnel commission.

The NOW demands include recruitment and training for women and minority persons.

"We will continue to press these demands for as long as it takes," Mrs. Hosmer said. "Our aim is to make the county an equal opportunity employer in deed as well as word. We all pay the taxes that support it, and women and minority group persons have the ability and right to be trained and hired for its jobs at all levels."

She pointed out that Aug. 26 is the 52nd anniversary of women's suffrage in America and that it was "high time that women have job equality."

Post Sees Big Gap Caused By Initiative

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post yesterday said passage of the Watson property tax limitation initiative in November would cause a $1.3 billion revenue gap for state and local governments.

Under the initiative, Post said state revenues would increase by $1.85 billion but spending would go up $2.2 billion, leaving an annual gap of $372 million.

He said school spending by local governments would be reduced by $771 million under the initiative but it mandates no financing method to offset the reduction.

Post also said city and county revenues would drop by $90 million.

The Watson measure would impose a $7 per $100 assessed valuation limit on property taxes and provide for other drastic changes in state and local taxes.

Last fall Post forecast a $969 million loss in state revenue would result with passage of the measure. Several weeks ago he revised the figure downward to $400 million.

In his latest analysis of the initiative, Post further reduced the estimated state revenue gap to $372 million in revenue to be gained because Gov. Ronald Reagan vetoed a sales tax measure.

The vetoed legislation would have applied the new sales tax on gasoline solely on the cost of the gasoline and not on the excise tax portion of the cost.

Post also estimated at $73.2 million the cost of Prop. 15, the initiative to restrict the governor's veto power on state employes' pay raises. The estimate on the increased salary costs was based on 1972-73 figures assuming the measure had been in effect.

Under the measure, salary recommendations by the state Personnel Board, University of California Regents and State College Board of Trustees would go into the budget for legislative approval.

He also estimated:

—The cost at $12.6 million for Prop. 16, the initiative requiring that state highway patrol salaries be the same as those of top local police officers.

—The cost of $600,000 in the first year for Prop. 22, which, among other things, established a five-member board to deal with agricultural labor relations.

—Savings of $16,500 to $60,000 by abolishing the annual five-day legislative veto sessions as provided in Prop. 4 which would institute two-year legislative sessions.

—The cost of $45 million through 1976 for Prop. 20, the initiative designed to regulate development along California's coastline.

Young Survivors In Holocaust Get $2.29 Million

WOODLAND (UPI) — A $2.29 million settlement has been awarded to two youngsters who were permanently disfigured in a fire three years ago which claimed the lives of eight members of their family.

The settlement approved earlier this week will go to Sharon Lambert, 13, and her brother, Jesse, 12. It was believed to be the largest settlement of its kind in Yolo County.

The fire in the Lambert family's wooden-frame home near Knights Landing took the lives of the youngsters' parents, five brothers and sisters and a grandfather.

According to investigators, the fire broke out when the parents were painting the bathroom in the home.

Attorneys for the children based their damage suit case on unsafe conditions in the house, illegal installation and maintenance of an "open flame" water heater and insufficient labeling regarding the highly volatile nature of paint being used by the Lamberts.

Defendants in the suit were River Garden Farms, Par Gas, Van Gas and Fuller O'Brien Paint Co. River Garden Farms, owner of the home, will pay the bulk of the settlement.

Samurai Woman Sane Enough To Be Tried

Frances Gail Simpson, the 29-year-old woman accused of attacking a fellow employee in a Sausalito shop with a samurai sword, yesterday was declared legally sane enough to stand trial.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court made the finding after reviewing reports by two psychiatrists, both of whom said Miss Simpson, although psychotic, is sane enough to cooperate with an attorney and understands the charges against her.

Miss Simpson, who affects men's clothing along with a shaved head, is charged in connection with the stabbing of Norman Williams, 20, shop steward at Heath Ceramics where Miss Simpson was a glazer.

She reportedly went straight to Williams after arriving at work on Aug. 4 and stabbed him from behind. Williams was hospitalized with wounds in his arm and stomach.

Miss Simpson fled before horrified coworkers could stop her. She was arrested the next day near Cascade Reservoir in Mill Valley, where her car had been found.

Miss Simpson, charged with felony assault, was ordered to return to Municipal Court Monday for further proceedings in the case. She has been jailed since her arrest.

57 New Strep Cases Reported In Marin

Streptococcus infection was the most prevalent communicable disease in Marin last week with 57 cases reported.

Other communicable diseases reported by the Marin County Department of Health Services were gonorrhea, 20 cases; salmonella, two cases, and measles, mumps, syphilis, tuberculosis and shigella, one case each.

Guilty Plea In Bad Check Case

David Wade Cameron, 21, of Novato, pleaded guilty yesterday in Marin Superior Court to two charges of writing checks on another person's account. An idential third count was dismissed.

In addition to having the third count dismissed, a part of the plea bargain was that Cameron is to receive no more than 60 days in jail.

He is to be sentenced Oct. 2.

Simpson had been accused of writing checks totaling $300 on another person's account.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Four Ways Are Mentioned To Outwit An Allergy To Ragweed

There are four ways to outwit an allergy to ragweed: Run, hide, take medicine, or be desensitized.

"Escapees" usually go where there is no ragweed and the pollen count never exceeds 10. These hay fever havens are well-known and lists are available for those who wish to escape local pollen.

Northern woods and the mountains are favorite spots. Other prefer Miami or a long sea voyage. There is no ragweed in the Southwest, but other weeds are present that may bother the "hayfeverite."

You can hide from pollen by remaining in an air-conditioned room in which pollens are filtered out. Never go outdoors without a mask at the height of the season; otherwise, pollen will enter the nose.

MANY EXCELLENT remedies are available to control the symptoms. Among the most popular are antihistamines, such as Benadryl and Pyribenzamine, and ephedrine products, such as Privine, Neo-Synephrine, and Propadrine. Decadron Turbinaire, a prescription item that is sprayed into the nose, also is available.

Adrenal steroids (cortisone and prednisone) are effective, but their prolonged use leads to disagreeable side effects. As a result, many physicians administer steroids only during the two or three weeks when the pollen count is highest.

DESENSITIZATION is the most logical way to handle the problem, but it is not always the most practicable or effective. The procedure has the advantage of delaying the development of asthma and other complications of hay fever, or even protecting the victim against these disorders.

One of the most popular methods of desensitization consists of weekly injections of pollen extracts that increase the person's tolerance to the airborne offenders. The best time to start is three months before the beginning of the season. Other methods consist of periodic injections thruout the year. There also is a single injection technic.

HISTAMINE HEADACHE

L. A. G. writes: My doctor says I have Horton's dieseas. Could you tell me something about it?

REPLY

I assume he refers to the severe, migrainelike headaches that some individuals develop because they are sensitive to histamine. Pain is located on one side of the head and is associated with tearing of the eye and congestion of the nasal passageway on the involved side.

EXTRA DIVIDENDS

A reader writes: Can a woman who is in the menopause conceive?

REPLY

Yes, but it is unusual because at this time of life the ovaries are less active and fewer ova develop. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on the menopause.

IT TOOK HER A WHILE

Waking Up To Religion

By PATRICK CORMAN

A religious awakening doesn't always have to be an earth-shaking, mind-bending experience.

To Georgie Lee, a recent convert bible-quoting fundamental Christianity, commitment to religion came after a long period of trying and rejecting other religions.

"I've been looking for God for a long time," said the animated 25-year-old, modishly attired in wire-rim glasses and a granny dress.

GEORGIE LEE
"It's like boxes within boxes. . ."

Her conversion last year to an evangelical, Jesus-centered Christianity, she said, was an alternative to having no belief at all.

She described herself as an "ordinary messed-up person, not much different from other lost people."

"I was too old to be a hippie," she said, "and too young to be part of the establishment."

She grew up in San Francisco, the product of what she termed a conservative Chinese family, tried City College of San Francisco for a year, and gave it up for beauty school.

Until her conversion more than 14 months ago, she had daddled in psychedelic drugs and Eastern religions while maintaining a hairdresser's job in a Tiburon beauty shop and modeling clothes for her fashion designer brother.

After she "became a Christian," she said, she rejected modeling because it was a "self centered" activity.

She also gave up the house she shared in San Anselmo with several other young people and moved back to her parents' home in San Francisco.

She was converted by a friend who read to her a small yellow pamphlet entitled "Four Spiritual Laws." Disseminated by Campus Crusade for Christ, a California-based evangelical group geared to young people, the pamphlet views human behavior in biblical terms.

The crusade claims that 25 million of the little yellow pamphlets have been distributed.

"I was looking for something to hit the spot," she said, "and this was it."

Her next step was finding a church. After rejecting a Jesus commune in San Francisco, she settled on the Marin Evangelical Free Church of San Rafael. She joined after hearing Rev. Samuel Walberg, the church's pastor, preach at a Billy Graham rally.

She attends the church twice on Sunday and on Tuesday evenings.

So far, the high point of her evangelical career has been the six days she spent recently in Dallas participating in Explo '72, a kind of Woodstock for young Jesus people. The conference, Campus Crusade for Christ, was an outpouring of zeal by 80,000 young religious enthusiasts. "It was a time for sharing," she said.

Attendence at the conference — which cost her $250 — sharpened her evangelical skills. Now, she said, she has a sixth sense about whom to approach in the street to deliver impromptu testimony. Cynicism and hostility are met with a prayer.

She combines hair styling with soul saving, telling customers unhappy with their personal life to "have faith and things will work out."

"It's just so neat," she said last week in Walberg's study. "It's like boxes within boxes. Every time you open one, there's another waiting to be opened."

Church Elder Will Preach In Larkspur

Ruling Elder Daniel White will be the preacher tomorrow at the 10 a.m. service at Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Larkspur.

White has just completed his first year at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo and, in addition to serving Redwoods Church as a ruling elder, serves at Westminster United Presbyterian Church in Tiburon as that church's minister with youth.

He has been a member of Redwoods Church for 18 years, and comes to the pulpit with an extensive background in the life of the church.

White presently is serving on the Mission Strategy Council of the Synod of the Golden Gate, which is responsible for thinking through, planning and helping local churches implement the mission of the Church today.

Red And White Russians Still Vie In Jerusalem

By MICHAEL GROSS
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — The fight between the Whites and Reds of Russia is till going on in Jerusalem.

Both sides maintain churches in the holy city.

The Soviet Ecclesiastical Mission, with about 100 nuns and a few priests, has been based since 1948 in a compound and the Church of St. John the Baptist in a Jewish suburg. One of the nuns, the Soviets say, is 102 years old.

The White Russians — the Russian Orthodox Church in exile — comprise about 150 nuns and priests mostly based in a golden-domed church on the Biblical Mount of Olives.

Now the church split, dating back to the 1917 Russian Revolution, has become an issue in Israel's law courts.

Israel became involved when it captured old Jerusalem in the 1967 Middle East war.

"Don't make waves was the password," said Saul Colbi, director of Christian affairs for Israel's Ministry of Religion.

The White Russians demanded that Israel recognize their claims to holy places in Jewish Jerusalem. These, according to the head of the anti-Soviet Orthodox Church, Archimandrite Anthony Grabbe, "We were forced to turn over to the avowedly atheistic Soviet government mission in 1948."

According to Colbi, the story is different.

"The Whites were staunchly pro-Arab. When they foresaw Israel's imminent takeover of West Jerusalem in 1948, they fled to the Arab sector.

"When the official Soviet mission requested the properties, they were turned over and on Dec. 31, 1948, the first batch of priests arrived from Moscow," Colbi said.

The White Russians have pretitioned the government for return of the properties in West Jerusalem.

The government declined the request and shunted it into the courts, where it has remained for the past four years.

The disputed properties include seven churches, half a dozen tracts in Jerusalem and about 10 more pieces of land throughout the country. Together, they are worth a fortune.

THE CIRCUIT RIDER

It's difficult to resist summer bible school when the transportation is a horse-drawn carriage — like this one rumbling along in Decatur, Ill. — rather than a school bus. Rev. Leslie Wooten of Oak Grove Church of the Nazarene in Decatur bends over to reach one of several students running to catch up to the wagon as it makes its rounds. The wagon was donated by a nearby retired farmer.

Workshop For Laymen, Clergy Set

"Explorations in Faith Building," a series of three workshops for clergy and laymen, will be held on Sept. 9 and 23 and Oct. 14 at Lewis Marshall Lloyd Education Center in San Anselmo.

The workshops, led by Bill and Ann Eichorn, are designed to build "faith communities where trust and openness are realities." They will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. each day at the center at San Francisco Theological Seminary.

Enrollment is limited to 30 persons, and a fee will be charged. Advance registration and a deposit are required.

Persons desiring further information can contact San Francisco Theological Seminary.

The Scout Who Aided His Church

ALEXANDRIA, Md. — Boy Scout Bernard Buckley, 17, was eager to become an Eagle Scout.

To win an Eagle badge had long been his dream. First, however, he had to think of a project that would answer the requirements in obtaining enough merit badges to qualify.

Then, several months ago, he heard the church women's group discussing a project to collect food which Hope Lutheran Church would distribute.

That was it. He set a goal of collecting 1,000 can of food, which would keep, and each weekend he began calling on homes.

"When I thought I'd never make it, my girlfriend gave me encouragement," the youth said. Then his girl showed him a church bulletin, saying that Bernard was going to collect 2,000 cans.

But he surmounted that and finally reached the goal. He figures that the money represented by the 2,000 cans would be about $600.

It's Eagle Scout Buckely now, thank you. (Los Angeles Times Syndicate)

OF GOD AND MAN

The Ones Who Ignore Jesus

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

The notion is widely held that acts of religious devotion are more sincere and meaningful if they are entirely spontaneous. That's debatable.

Spontaneity of religious expression undoubtedly has some great advantages. It guards us against the hypocrisy of doing things, such as going to church, because we're expected to. It also forestalls the sterility of doing things, such as saying grace before meals, out of sheer habit.

But those who engage in acts of worship only when they feel "in the mood" are disregarding the example of Jesus, the teaching of the Bible and the experience of a long line of saints.

Jesus treasured spontaneous acts of devotion. But he knew that a man's mood may be affected by many things, such as illness, fatigue or adversity. And he also knew that it is precisely in such low xoments that men most need to turn ot God for comfort and guidance. So he set an example of disciplines regularity in worship.

From wtat he did, as well as what he taught, we know that Jesus believed in attending worship services every Sabbath. He also set aside time for private prayers and meditations every day.

The same viewpoint is reflected in the Bible, especially in the letters of St. Paul. Paul admonished members of early Christian communities to be "constant" — i.e., regular — in prayer. No one knew better than Paul how easy it is to become so distracted by other concerns — ot just frivolous pleasures but important duties — that one never feels "in the mood" to take time out for quiet communion with God. So he insisted that regular periods must be set aside — and kept inviolate — for prayer and meditation.

Many great saints, including St. Augustine, St. Francis and St. Theresa of Avila, recorded in their memoirs that they often went through spells of "dryness" when they felt absolutely devoid of any spontaneous devotion to God. But they learned from experience that perseverance in worship when you least feel like it is the highest form of devotion because it is an act of pure obedience, a deliberate subjection of your own will to God's will.

Another reason for regularity in prayer. Bible reading and church attendance is that you never can tell, in advance, when some word, sentence or incident will suddenly illuminate your mind and lift up your spirit. It can happen unexpectedly, unforeseeably, in the midst of the dullest sermons, or during private devotions which you had to drive yourself to make.

Spontaneity is a fine thing, and there is merit to the contention of Pentecostals, and young people in the Jesus movement, that there ought to be room for spontaneous acts of worship in all church services. But the testimony of Jesus and the saints is that spontaneous upwellings of love for God are most likely to occur in the context of lives ruled by a discipline of daily devotion.

Jesus Group Evening On Skates Slated

A "skate-a-rama" for young people in Marin County will feature games and "fun on wheels" Monday at Marin Skateland, 863 Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael.

The event, sponsored by the steering committee of the Jesus Music Festival, will begin at 7 p.m. and is open to the public.

Donations of 90 cents each are requested for the non-profit event.

The two-hour party will end with the sounds of "Emmanuel," a Jesus-people musical group from Marin. Rev. Kent Philpott, a Baptist minister and director of the United Ministries in Marin County, will speak briefly.

James David Brecheen, coordinator of the event, said this will be the third countywide activity sponsored by the Jesus Music Festival committee.

The most recent was held in the San Rafael High School auditorium on July 28 with Rick Carreno, a former Hell's Angel motorcycle club member who is now a Christian evangelist, and with the youth choir from First Baptist Church of Modesto.

Colorful Ceremony Opens Olympic Games In Munich

MUNICH (UPI) — To the sound of eight alpenhornblasers, the 20th Olympic games open today in an $86 million stadium under sunny skies and the stadium's spiderweb-like $124 million half roof.

Among the 435 athletes representing the United States will be six who carry the hopes of Marin County, Ca. Rick DeMont of Terra Linda, world record holder in the 1500 meter swim and the gold medal favorite in that event, leads the Marin contingent.

Two boxers from Hamilton Air Force Base, welterweight Jesse Valdez and bantamweight Ricardo Carreras, will fight for the U.S., and a pair of San Rafael High School instructors, Goetz Klopfer and Tom Dooley, will compete in the 20,000 meter walk.

Marin's other entry is bicyclist Emile Waldteufel of Mill Valley.

The Alpenhornblasers — players of century-old alpine wooden instruments which resemble trumpets — signal the entry of Dr. Gustav Heinemann, president of the federal republic of Germany at 2:57 p.m. (9:57 a.m. edt).

Heinemann enters a plush box seat, the floor covered by a cocoa-covered carpet, and greets Willi Daume, the president of the German organizing committee, and Avery Brundage, the 84-year-old Chicago millionaire who is opening his last olympic games as president of the International Olympic Committee.

Three minutes after the blast from the Alpenhorns, the first of 122 nations — all in their colorful native dress — begin marching into the 84,000-capacity stadium. The huge bowl is built on an old airport where Adolph Hitler once met Neville Chamberlain in an historic peace conference prior to World War II.

The athletes from Greece, where the Olympics were founded, lead the parade of 14,000 of the finest amateurs in the world and their coaches.

The United States team, led by flagbearer Olga Connolly of Culver City, will step to strains of "When the Saints Go Marching In." Mrs. Connolly, an outspoken critic of American Olympic officials was picked by her teammates to carry the flag.

The final group of athletes will be the host West Germans, according to tradition, an 18-year-old middle distance runner from Germany, Gunter Zahn, will light the Olympic torch highatop the bowl-shaped arena, already sold out for this event.

One of the German's medal candidates, beautiful track star Heidi Schueller, will take the Olympic vow for all athletes, judges and officials, then comes the tradtional Bavarian salute from 20 cannons each firing three rounds and the release of the 5,000 doves of peace.

The games are the first in Germany since 1936, when Hitler marred them by his attitude toward blacks. The star of those games, Jesse Owens, an American negro who won four gold medals, is among a group of former Olympic greats at the ceremonies.

Daume and Heinemann were determined to have an incident-free games. The difficult Rho-

Tobacco Chewing — Hamilton's Art

CHICAGO — It was disappointing not to find Steve Hamilton in the camp of the Cubs. They released the 6-foot-7, 36-year-old, left-hander just before the Giants came into Wrigley Field for their final season visit.

Hamilton always was good for a brainy discussion about baseball or a relaxed interview on lighter subjects, such as the art of chewing tobacco.

When Hamilton joined the Giant in the spring of 1971 after 10 years as a relief specialist in the American League, Chris Speier already had commanded considerable attention as the up-and-coming rookie shortstop sensation.

"That rookie is a natural," said Hamilton.

A NATURAL? Of course, Speier was a natural ball player. He swung a bat the way a ball player should. He used his glove the way a shortstop should. So what did Hamilton mean?

"I mean he's a natural tobacco chewer," said Hamilton. "He is one of the best looking young chewer I've seen outside of my native Kentucky. We have some dandies down home but this young man shows great potential. He still needs work on his finesse but mark my words Chris is going to be a great one."

Immediately Hamilton had an appreciative and admiring audience demanding more information about the art of chewing.

"I was in the eighth grade when I first tried it," said Hamilton. "I wanted to be a big man. Instead, I was a very sick kid. I didn't try it again until I was in college (Moorehead State). I found it relaxing while pitching.

"It's beautiful when a guy can really chew and be neat about it. Most ball players are messy.

"But a guy with finesse can go half an hour and never even spit. A real classy practitioner can even eat and drink while he's chewing."

When he was asked whether he might have difficulty chewing in Candlestick's wind, Hamilton said:

"IT MIGHT BE a problem for the end man on the bench. But the artificial turf in the National League will be a bigger problem. I like grass better because it has bugs and things that give you moving targets. Besides, I was brought up not to spit on the rug."

But don't get the wrong impression about Hamilton. He isn't some kind of chewing clown. He's an intellectual, gentleman chewer, with a master's degree in education. He even conducts his classes at Moorehead State in baseball's off season with a cud neatly tucket in the pocket of his left jaw. It delights him that none of his students realize that all the time he is lecturing he is chewing contentedly.

JUST AFTER the 1971 season ended, Hamilton asked for his release from the Giants because he set his mind on becoming a college baseball coach. The job he had in mind fell through. When Larry Jansen, former pitching coach of the Giants now with the Cubs, learned that he had the Cubs sign Hamilton.

Now, Hamilton has another college coaching job in mind and he'll undoubtedly get this one. He's his own best reference but Ron Bryant would be happy to write a glowing recommendation of Hamilton. Hamilton showed Bryant the effective wrist action the young southpaw now uses on his curve.

Rookies Face Big Names In Pro Match Play Tourney

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI)— The $150,000 United States professional match play championship opens today with a flock of eager rookies and struggling veterans challenging golf's biggest names in head-to-head competition.

Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, and Arnold Palmer headed a field of 16, half of them chosen during two gruelling days of competition in the accompanying L&M Open golf tournament.

Besides the tour's big three, George Archer, Miller Barber, Jerry Heard, Frank Beard and defending champion DeWitt Weaver qualified automatically for the two-day event.

Joining them for the opening morning round over the Country Club of North Carolina course were a collection of unheralded veterans and streaking newcomers led by young Bob Barbarossa.

Barbarossa posted the hottest 36-hole score in the L&M Open, winding up Friday with a two-under-par 70 for a 136 total.

He had some stiff competition, though, from Deane Beman, Lanny Wadkins, Babe Hiskey, Leonard Thompson, Dave Stockton, Don Bies and Paul Moran. Additionally, Napa's Ron Cerrudo carded a 147.

Battling in an odd-man-out playoffs, Bies and Moran turned back Jerry McGee, who claimed the second round lead in the L&M Open by a one-stroke margin.

Barbarossa may have had the hot hand, but Wadkins, a brash Winston-Salem, N.C., rookie, seemed to have the confidence to take the $40,000 first prize.

Wadkins was tentatively scheduled to face Barber in the opening round, with Nicklaus against Beman, Palmer against Bies, Heard against Thompson, Trevino against Weaver, Beard against Moran, Archer against Hiskey and Stockton against Barbarossa.

A pink-cheeked 24-year-old from Pompano Beach, Fla., Barbarossa clinched his spot in the field with a steady round of five birdies and three bogeys over the 6,973-yard course.

Only a stroke back was Beman, a former Washington insurance agent in his fifth year on the tour, who carded a one-under 70 for 137 through 36 holes.

Davis Gives 'Present' To Athletics

OAKLAND (UPI) —Oakland pitcher Vida Blue gets the Cy Young Award and 1971/American League Most Valuable Player award today from league president Joe Cronin in ceremonies at the Oakland Coliseum.

Blue and his teammates also got a "present" Friday night from former Athletic Tommy Davis, now with the Baltimore Orioles.

Davis, cut adrift by the A's in spring training, stepped in as a pinch-hitter and scored pinch-runner Mark Belanger on a single in the ninth to tie the score at 3-3.

Don Buford tripled home the winning run to give the Orioles a 5-3 win and move Baltimore into a first place tie in the American League West with the rained-out Detroit Tigers.

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver went against the percentages in using Davis as a pinch-hitter because Davis bats right-handed and he was facing Jim Hunter, who hurls right-handed.

"I wasn't surprised," Davis commented. "What's the difference?"

It was Davis who introduced Blue to Los Angeles attorney Robert Gurst, a key figure in Blue's long holdout with the Athletics this season.

"Tommy's just doing his job like I'm trying to do my job," Blue said in reference to Davis' key hit.

The defeat dropped Oakland a full game behind AL West leading Chicago.

Sharon Walsh In Doubles Victory

HAVERFORD, Penn. — Sharon Walsh of San Rafael and England's Virginia Wade won their semi-final doubles match yesterday at the Pennsylvania Lawn tennis championships.

Miss Walsh and Miss Wade downed Kazuko Sawamatsu and Linda Rupert, 6-3, 6-1 to reach tomorrow's finals, in which they will face the South African team of Pat Pretorius and Brenda Kirk.

Hot Henderson Leads Giants To 11-2 Rout

CHICAGO (UPI) — The hottest hitter in the National League just keeps getting hotter. Ken Henderson, batting .451 in August, hit a pair of home runs, a pair of singles and drove in five runs yesterday to power the San Francisco Giants to an 11-2 rout of the Chiago Cubs.

Henderson, who was batting only .190 on July 31, slammed a three-run homer in the third inning, a bases empty homer in the fifth and a run-scoring single in the sixth. The outburst raised his average for the season to .260.

Jim Willoughby, a rookie, went all the way to pick up his third victory in four decisions, allowing seven hits, walking none and striking out three.

The Giants jumped to an early 5-0 lead, getting two runs in the second on singles by Dave Rader and Tito Fuentes and a double by Dave Kingman, and three more in third when singles by Bobby Bonds and Chris Speier preceded Henderson's first homer.

Chicago scored in the fourth when centerfielder Garry Maddox of the Giants dropped Billy Williams' fly ball for a three-base error and Joe Pepitone followed with a single, and again in the ninth when Pepitone doubled and Ron Santo singled him home.

Reports that pitcher Juan Marichal had cleared waivers and would be traded to the American League were put down emphatically by Giants' owner Horace Stoneham. "We're putting everybody on waivers at one time or another," Stoneham said. "But there's no one or two specific names." He would not elaborate.

Dipsea Run Is Slated

Is Mike Boitano washed up at the age of 10?

This and other equally perplexing questions will be answered tomorrow morning, when the 62nd renewal of the annual Dipsea footrace will be held.

The first of a surging mob of an estimated 1,400 runners will spill out of Litton Square in downtown Mill Valley at 10 o'clock, bound for the mountains and the sea.

Six and eight-tenths miles and several hundred calluses later, remnants of the horde will arrive at the Post Office in Stinson Beach via the mocking Dipsea trail, gentle to the eyes and cruel to the feet.

A goodly portion of the field will have handicaps of up to 15 minutes based on age, a ply implemented by the sponsoring Mill Valley Junior Chamber of Commerce aimed at creating and exciting finish. It may also produce a repeat winner, over the protests of history.

Last year, nine-year-old Mike Boitano of San Francisco utilized a full 15-minute handicap to win the race by just over a minute over 60-year-old Norman Bright of Seattle, Wash.

Boitano will be back this year, and with a 13-minute handicap, must be regarded as a strong contender again. Presumably, a year's growth and training have cut more than two minutes from his time, which was 58:53 scratch.

Historical archives frown on Boitano. The Dipsea has had only three repeat winners in its 67-year history, and only one since 1913. The only back-to-back winner in the race was John G. Hassar of Oakland High School, who won the first two races in 1905-06.

The other double winners were Oliver Millard (1910-13) and Jack Kirk (1951-67).

Also under assault will be the course record of 46:08, set last year by Ron Elijah of Novato, a scratch runner who finished fourth.

In the field again this year will be Harry Cordellos, 35, of San Francisco, who is blind. Cordellos has a 15-minute handicap and will have the aid of a pacer, but will run free except on downhill stretches, when he holds on to the pacer.

Race director John Drew estimates a throng of about 400-500 entrants the morning of the race. They will be processed in the Mill Valley City Council chamber on Corte Madera Avenue, a block from Litton Square. Entry fee is $3, with $1.50 for an Amateur Athletic Union card if the runner doesn't have one.

Volunteers from the Jaycees and the two communities will help administer the race. The San Francisco Ski Patrol will provide first aid, the Marin Amateur Radio Club will set up a communications network, and the United Ambulance Service of Mill Valley and the Mill Valley Air Force Station will provide ambulances.

First U.S. Olympic Win Was Practically Ignored

Boston Man Had To Pay Own Way

By BARBARA CRAIG
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

The United States' first Olympic winner was James B. Connolly, who, in his later years, became a well-known writer of sea stories.

He won the hop, step, and a jump competition in the first modern Olympics held in Athens back in 1896.

But no cheering throngs or big brass bands greeted the athlete when he returned home in triumph to Boston. He was practically ignored. In those days, Olympic gold-medal winners were not the celebrities they are now.

In fact, Connolly, a sophomore at Harvard University, almost didn't make it to the Olympics. His dean refused him permission to leave classes so he could compete in Athens. Young Connolly finally had to quit school.

In addition, he had to pay his own way to Greece. He represented "the little Suffolk Athletic Club" in his hometown of South Boston, and the organization didn't have a penny in its treasury.

Connolly later wrote: "Only one American college (Princeton) and one athletic club besides my own, the Boston Athletic Association, were represented on that first Olympic team.

"Bob Garrett in the discus, and shot put, the broad and high jumps; Herb Jamieson in the 400 meter; Frank Lane in the 100 meter; and Al Tyler in the pole vault were the Princeton entries. The Boston club entered the great Tom Burke in the 100 and 400 meters; Arthur Blake in the 800 meters; Tom Curtis in the hurdles; Ellery Clarke in the high, broad, and hop, step, and jump; and Bill Hoyt in the pole vault."

The first American Olympic squad left New York on March 20 aboard a German steamer and reached Athens 17 days later.

Wrote Connolly: "It was nine o'clock at night when we reached our hotel in Athens. Tom Burke and I roomed together. About four o'clock we came wide awake together. There were soldiers parading and a powerful band whaling away.

"It was too late to bother with any more sleep, so we had breakfast, remarking what a lucky thing it was we had 12 days to get in shape after that long 17-day trip. Then two members of some committee came in and handed up the programs for the games. Right then and there we discovered we were supposed to compete in the Olympics that very day.

"We soon discovered that the athletic officials back home who had given out the data for the opening of the games had made a mistake of 12 days, the difference between the Greek calendar and ours."

When Connolly arrived at the stadium a few hours later he discovered one more problem. He learned his competitors were all doing a hop, hop, and a jump, and not the hop, step, and jump he expected to use. The hop, hop, and jump, it should be noted, is ancient Olympic form.

Connolly recalled:

"Some said 100,000 people filled the stadium. The hills above and just outside the walls were packed with men, women, and children. It was the day of days, the first day of the first Olympiad after 1,500 years. This very stadium had been erected on the banks of the Illyssus, on the site of that very stadium wherein the games had last been held 15 centuries agone.

"I was the last to jump. I gripped my hands for the last time — I had the right feeling now — and started for the takeoff. And a curious thing happened to me. I had intended to eo a hop, step, and a jump, but what I said to myself as I waited there was: 'Me, too, for the two hops and a jump.'

"As I landed in the pit a tremendous cheer went up. There had been no great cheering before that from the seats.

"By and by, I took my second try. Another roar went up. An Englishman named Perry was leveling off the pit after each jump. After my second try, I said to him: 'They ought to tell how far each man jumps. Then a fellow won't be breaking his back when there's no need to it.'

"To that he said: 'As far as the measurements go, there's nobody within a yard of you.' "

Connolly won the double hop and a jump with an effort of 45 feet, which was three feet, three inches ahead of his closest rival.

"A band of 200 pieces was grouped at the foot of a lofty flagstaff in the center of the arena," he went on. "Before I woke up to what the band was playing, I saw a group of San Francisco bluejackets from the good ship Liberty, which was in Greece at the time. They were standing at attention and saluting.

"I came wide awake then. That big band was booming out the opening notes of 'The Star Spangled Banner' and two Greek sailors were slowly hoisting the American flag to the top of that high staff. The thousands and thousands of spectators sat or stood in hushed attention.

"It was a moment in a young fellow's life. I had won an Olympic victory for my country, and atop of that I was the first Olympic victor in 1,500 years, since my competition was the first event scheduled. South Boston, I thought happily, would be pleased to get word of that."

Court Order Stops Hull From Promoting Winnipeg

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

CHICAGO — A federal judge, acting on a suit charging that hockey superstar Bobby Hull was influential among children and other hockey players, issued an order Friday to prevent the long-time Chicago Black Hawks' star from promoting his new team, the Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association.

U.S. District Court Judge James B. Parsons issued a 10-day restraining order prohibiting Hull from using his name to promote any team other than the Black Hawks. The order also said Hull could not report to the Jets' training camp, play for any team other than the Black Hawks or represent himself as "anything other than a Chicago Black Hawks hockey player."

Following Parsons' order Friday, Hull said the order wouldn't change anything: "I plan to play for the WHA, he said. "I didn't have plans to do any of those things."

Anderson's Ulcer Is Soothed By Victory

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Being manager of the Cincinnati Redlegs gave George "Sparky" Anderson what his previous jobs as a shoe salesman and a used-car dealer couldn't: an ulcer.

The doctor prescribed rest but Sparky cured his ills —at least temporarily—by watching his Don Gullett stop Philadelphia with three hits as Cincinnati pounded out a 6-1 victory while tagging Ken Reynolds with his 12th straight loss.

Gullett also climaxed a five-run fourth inning uprising with a bases-loaded single off Reynolds, who tied a major league record for consecutive losses.

In other National League action, Atlanta nipped New York, 2-1, Los Angeles won 4-3 in the nightcap after Pittsburgh scored a 3-2, 12 inning victory, Montreal stopped Houston, 4-3, Cincinnati downed Philadelphia, 6-1, St. Louis topped San Diego 7-4 before losing 8-7 and San Francisco clubbed Chicago, 11-2.

In the Americ League, New York beat Kansas City 4-1 before losing 5-1, Baltimore defeated Oakland, 5-3, Boston halted Texas, 4-0, and Cleveland eked past California 2-1 in 11 innings. Chicago at Milwaukee and Detroit at Minnesota were rained out.

Astros' Manager Walker Is Fired; Durocher Hired

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston Astros general manager Spec Richardson today fired manager Harry Walker and replaced him with baseball veteran Leo Durocher.

Richardson said he made his decision to fire) Walker late Friday night. He then called Durocher in Chicago and asked him to manage his team and Durocher accepted.

Durocher was fired as manager of the Chicago Cubs in July.

Mrs. Robinette In Bowling Meet Win

"I only wanted to get my money's worth." And Novato bowler Natsuko (Koko) Robinette, 42, did just that in winning the state 500 Club Tournament in San Jose concluding last Sunday after successive weekends of competition starting May 20.

With her reported $5 entry fee in mind, the Marinite notched an 873 series that included her 88-pin handicap in the tourney held on successive Saturdays and Sundays in conjunction with the Women's State Tournament.

The Novatan topped her 161 average by rolling games of 179, 176, 213, and 217 in her winning series. Following this effort, Mrs. Robinette commented: "I felt pretty good, which enabled me to shoot fairly well." Indeed.

KUDOS ARE ALSO extended to four San Rafael Bowlers who performed admirably in the L and L Castle Lanes league activities at San Francisco last week.

The four Marinites are: the McPhersons, brothers Rich and Mike, and Marilyn Epidendio and Bea Hoffmann.

Rich, 20, and Mike, 17, taking part in the Boys Eliminations tourney play, rank third and seventh, respectively. Rich, with a high game of 255, has 9,407 pins, and Mike, with a 244 top mark, has 9,208 pins.

Mrs. Epidendio and Mrs. Hoffmann, competing in the 1972 Ladies West Coast Match Game Eliminations finals, are 10th and 11th, in that order, after 16 games.

Mrs. Epidendio sports a 7-9 record, 3,286 pins and a 182 average, and Mrs. Hoffmann holds a 6-10 mark with 3,187 pins and a 180 average. While Mrs. Epidendio remains in 10th against tough Bay Area competition, Mrs. Hoffmann has climbed three pegs in the standings from 14th. Nice going, ladies.

MARIN COUNTY Bowlers are getting ready to swing into the Winter Season and as a prelude, a Workshop will be held at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. This is for the assistance and information of the more than 100 league secretaries, or any interested bowler.

AN IMPORTANT coming event for the Women's Association is the Open Meeting of Sept. 9 at 1 p.m. at the Rafters in Corte Madera.

New officers, including president, will be installed and delegates for the national convention in Las Vegas and state convention in Bakersfield for 1973 will be elected.

PRO FOOTBALL

Landry, Lions Top Redskins

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Greg Landry made the "Over the Hill Gang" look a bit over the hill Friday night before a national television audience.

Coach George Allen's geriatric Washington Redskins had allowed only 13 points in 12 quarters while winning their first three exhibitions game but Landry piloted Detroit to a 20-point second quarter and the Lions downed the Redskins 23-10 for their third victory in four games.

Landry, playing only the first half, completed seven of 11 passes for 107 yards.

In the only other exhibition game Friday night, Miami downed Atlanta 24-10.

Bob Griese played more than he was expected to at quarterback because Earl Morrall wasn't too impressive in his stint. Griese hit Paul Warfield with a 16-yard scoring pass and Jim Kiick scored on runs of two and 12 yards.

There will be one afternoon game and four night games on Saturday. In a national telecast, the New York Jets will invade Irving, Tex. to meet the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys Saturday night. In other night games, Minnesota is at Cleveland, Baltimore meets Pittsburgh at Tampa and San Diego is at New Orleans. Oakland meets Buffalo at Berkeley in an afternoon contest.

REVAMPED BILLS VS. RAIDERS IN BERKELEY

OAKLAND (UPI) —The Buffalo Bills, a revamped squad bad enough to get the first draft choice two of the last four years, today visited the Oakland Raiders, winners of their last eight exhibition games at the University of California stadium in Berkeley.

This year, the Bills, under new coach Lou Saban, are proving tough to handle. They won two of their three exhibition contests this season.

In the three games the Bills have doubled their victory total in last season's regular 14-game schedule.

Ralston's Broncos Meet Injury-Riddled 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Coach John Ralston, who took nearby Stanford University to a pair of dazzling Rose Bowl victories, makes his Bay Area debut, as a pro mentor Sunday when his Denver Broncos clash with an injury-riddled San Francisco 49er squad.

Ralston had a brutal initiation into the play-for-pay wars when his Denver team was steamrollered by Washington 41-0. But Denver's offense and defense both showed a little more stuff in a second game loss to St. Louis by only a 17-13 margin.

The Forty Niners have downed Cleveland 20-13 with John Brodie at the helm and lost to New York 17-10 and San Diego 17-16 with Steve Spurrier the signal-caller. Sunday is Brodie's turn.

The key to the contest figures to be how a rookie-filled San Francisco defensive backfield can stand up against the bombs of veteran Charlie Johnson, whom Ralston has tibbed to start for the Broncos.

No Charges In Escapers' Case

No charge will be pressed in Marin against two men who escaped from a Department of Corrections conservation camp and were captured in Bel-Marin Keys after a high speed chase Tuesday.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Joshua W. Thomas said Martin Ervin Murrill, 28, and Charles John Lares, 24, will be turned over to state prison authorities.

They will not be charged with car theft in Marin, he said, because police could not identify them as having been the persons in a stolen car found near their hidding places.

They had escaped earlier from the Sierra Conservation Camp in Jamestown, Fresno County.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

Declarer Can Run Long Suit If He Has No Discard Woes

When you can run a long suit as declarer at a no-trump contract, the chances are always fairly good that a defender will be embarrassed by the need of finding safe discards. If you will have no discarding problems of your own, run the suit and see what happens to the enemy. Odd things have a way of happening in hands that look perfectly straightforward.

TRICK NEEDED

West opened the five of spades, and South won with the queen. Declarer saw that he could win two spades, two diamonds and four clubs. One other trick was needed.

South thought of making a heart play of some kind, but saw no harm in running the four club tricks first. This turned out to be a very good idea.

NO SAFE DISCARDS

When the third club was led, West was in trouble. He didn't dare discard a diamond, for then declarer could duck one diamond and later take three diamond tricks in dummy. West likewise couldn't discard the queen of hearts, for South would lead a heart to set up three tricks in that suit.

For lack of anything better, West had to discard a spade. Declarer promptly took his fourth club trick, and West had to discard another spade for the same reasons.

THREAT GONE

These discards gave South no tricks, but they removed the threat of the long spade suit. South could afford to set up his hearts, giving West two tricks in the process. West could get only one spade trick, and South made his contract with an overtrick.

ANSWER: Bid one club.

The only question is whether to bid one heart or one club. Avoid bidding a weak four-card major suit when you have a reasonable alternative.

Press Is Better Because Of Bush

When Dr. Chilton R. Bush died tragically of cancer at the age of 76 earlier this week, we were all cheated.

Cancer is supposed to develop slowly enough in the aged that it never catches up with them. They usually live on to succumb to some more natural debility of advancing years.

CHICK BUSH'S personal fame in no way equalled his wide influence on human events in California and nationally.

As head of Stanford University's department of communication and journlistic studies for 27 years prior to his retirement from that post in 1961, Chick Bush probably influenced more improvement in California newspapers than any other single human being.

More than a generation ago, he organized what become the annual Stanford conference for California editors, bringing them together to exchange information and meet with nationally known journalistic innovators. Most who attended the conferences went away with new ideas and inspiration for producing better newspapers.

About two decades ago, the annual conference tradition was well enough established that Doctor Bush could turn it over to the California Newspaper Publishers Association with the knowledge that it would endure. It has. And it still is the best of its kind in all the nation.

When Chick Bush retired as head of journalism at Stanford in 1961, the I-J editorially acknowledged that California newspapers were far better for his having served so long and effecitvely.

THOSE OF US who knew him personally thought Chick Bush would take a well deserved rest.

Instead, he became a consultant on news research to the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

At Stanford, he had been a pioneer in the science of measuring readership and the impact of news on the reading audience. He had originated and first put into practice many now-common techniques for attitude measurement. He was the founder of the Stanford Institute for Public Opinion Research.

As ANPA research consultant, he kept abreast of news research throughout the nation and published periodic bulletins reporting new developments. These bulletins were disseminated nation-wide by ANPA to communications media and were subsequently compiled into a series of important reference books.

The influence of all this on the gathering and presentation of news throughout the nation is immeasurable.

In the decade after his retirement at 65, Doctor Bush influenced communications media performance improvements even more widely than he did during his earlier years.

CHICK BUSH ALWAYS was mindful that our form of self-government succeeds or fails according to how well informed or misinformed is our electorate.

With all their faults, today's communications media do a better-than-ever job of informing the electorate. Chick Bush was an humble man; it probably never occured to him that he contributed as much or more to improving the public information flow that any other American of his time.

As a classroom teacher, Chick Bush was not regarded by students as the most exciting lecturer of the faculty. But most graduates who emerged from his journalism school proved well prepared to face the challenges of the profession. The list of his former students who succeeded eminently well in professional journalistic endeavors is endless. By feeding well-prepared beginners into the news-handling profession, he was in another way doing his best to see that the electorate was better informed.

HIS PIONEER communications research was aimed at improving the flow of meaningful information to the citizenry. Unfortunately, much effort expended on university campuses today in the name of communications research is plain boondoggling.

If Chick Bush's contributions to the discipline are to be remembered nowhere else, the deserve to be recognized in journalism and communications departments on college campuses acorss the land.

We still need improvement in the methodology of keeping the citizenry informed.

We aren't likely to enjoy much improvement as the result of the rantings of contemporary non-constructive critics of the press.

What we really need is some people of quiet dedication to follow in Chick Bush's footsteps.

More Olympic Winners

In our editorial on Marin's six-member Olympic Games contingent, we overlooked mentioning a present and a former resident of Marin who captured Olympic gold medals.

Archie F. Williams of Fairfax, science and mathematics teacher at Sir Francis Drake High School, won a gold medal in the 400-meter run in the 1936 Olympics in Berlin. That was some time before he came to Marin.

Eleanor Garatti was a San Rafael resident when she was a member of the gold medal-winning women's 400-meter relay swim team in the 1928 Olympics in Amsterdam. She is now Eleanor Garatti Saville and resides in San Francisco.

No doubt these two will be watching, with even more interest than most of us, the performance of Marin's athletes in the Munich Olympics.

Even back in 1928, Marinites were in the thick of things!

Deceptive Packaging: The Eternal Feminine

According to California Farm Bureau Newsletter, and I quote, "A survey of women attending a meeting to protest "deceptive packaging" revealed this: 15 per cent tinted their hair, 38 per cent wore wigs, 80 per cent wore rouge, 98 per cent wore lipstick, 25 per cent wore eyeshadow, 22 per cent wore false eyelashes, 93 per cent used nail polish, and 100 per cent favored the resolution condemning any kind of false packaging."

I found this article quite interesting in view of the current complaints of "deceptive packaging."

Proofreading Errors Look Bumblewitted

Word may, by now, may have filtered up to the management level of the I-J that a great many of your loyal readers are beginning to refer to the paper as the Illiterate Journal, as a consequence of the sloppy proofreading you so prominently display.

For example, in your editorial of Aug. 5, there is a gross spelling error.

In a good editorial, such as you consistently write, possibly you should read the proof yourself, lest you give the impression that your paper is staffed with bumblewits.

Joint Use Of HAFB 'Great Step Backward'

The proposal to convert Hamilton Air Force Base into a civilian commercial airport is probably the greatest step backward Marin County has ever considered. Have the citizens of Marin County such short memories that they have forgotten the poor homeowners of Millbrae on the peninsula? All of their protest meetings, all of their complaints against noise, noxious gases and TV interferences were wasted. The airlines had long ago had the permission.

Marin County residents, now is the time to emphatically block the move 100 per cent or forever hold your peace. Don't complain later about decreased property and land values — you will have sanctioned it by your failure to write your city and county officials.

Russia Again Curbs Jewish Emigration

The Jewish Community Relations Council, which represents more than 50 organizations and congregations in San Francisco, Marin and Peninsula, has become very concerned about the latest development in the continuing harassment of Soviet Jews who are trying to emigrate from that country. A new system of heavy exit fees ranging from $5,000 to $25,000 for educated Jews has apparently been instituted.

This concept — that anyone desiring to exercise his basic human right of movement must first pay a retroactive fee to the state — amounts to a new form of slavery. The Soviet explanation was that the fees were necessary to repay the government for the costs of state-financed education . . .

We hope this latest ploy of the Soviet Union will be repugnant enough to you that you will editorialize on it . . .

Far-Out Protest May Trigger Repression Of Our Freedom

MIAMI BEACH — The picketers chant outside the Fontainebleau Hotel. Long-haired, most of the men stripped to the waist, they have a variety of red flags. Part of the picketers sitting down in the entrances to the hotel, headquarters for the Republican convention, prevent many of the guests from entering to attend the $500-a-plate gala dinner.

"Keep out the rich," the picketers chant," — You, Richard Nixon," "Workers and students, unite." They are burning an American flag. In the early dusk the television cameras zero in and the powerful television lights give the whole scene the eerie look of a Hollywood production.

A black shiny limousine manages to get through the picket lines. It is immediately surrounded by the demonstrators who pound on the windows of the air-conditioned car. Then a solid line of helmeted, brown-uniformed Florida highway patrolmen move in. They sweep back the demonstrators and the clogged traffic on Collins Avenue begins to move.

The gala honoring Mrs. Richard Nixon and her daughter, Tricia, goes on without interruption. They are flanked at the head table by Gov. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller. While some of the guest were shaken by the ordeal of forcing their way through the screaming picketers, the diners who have paid their $500 for the re-election of the President are confident of their own righteousness. Implied in their self-confidence is the conviction that they are the wave of the future or, at any rate, the immediate future.

IN A PRO FORMA convention in which news is scarce or nonexistent the chanting picketers are making their own contribution to the re-election of President Nixon. As seen on the television screens across the country they provide the contrast with all that is tidy, secure, proper, promising for a future, with the Nixon image embodying the good and the true.

There can be little doubt that to the average American the alientation of these far-out protesters — the hippies, zippies, yippies — is repelling. Concentrating on the Republican Convention, having abstained when the Democrats were here, they are certainly no help to the McGovern-Shriver ticket. If the Committee to Re-elect the President is not paying them $50 a head per demonstration, as one cynic put it, they are being cheated.

Small in numbers, they are nevertheless a phenomenon to be reckoned with. They may be naive enough, self-indoctrinated enough to believe their impact is antiwar, antirich, antiestablishment. But, conceivably, the effect could be just the opposite.

AN ABIDING FEAR of Henry A. Kissinger, the President's adviser on national security affairs, is a right-wing revolution triggered by extremists on the left. Revolution may be too strong a word and Kissinger's fears may be conditioned by the fact that as a youngster he escaped with his family from Nazis in 1938 as Hitler consolidated his savage grip on the Third Reich with the liquidation of six million Jews.

A repression by force not only of the extremists but of all forms of dissent may be nearer the mark. This is where the Nixon administration, with the big majorities that to most Republicans here seem an inevitable result of the November election, will have to exercise a restraint that has so far not been evident. Why, the right-wingers demand, should things like the demonstration outside the Fontainebleau be allowed to go on? Why shouldn't these people be locked up, put away somewhere?

That is the kind of pressure that will mount if the Nixon triumph is as great as now anticipated. It can find expression in the Department of Justice, in the courts, in the power of the police.

To contain these pressures will take not only restraint but the kind of leadership that President Nixon has thus far rarely shown. The 200th anniversary of America's freedoms is only four years away and that anniversary should be a celebration of what those freedoms mean.

Above all, the freedom of speech and worship guaranteed in the First Amendment to the Constitution is the core of American liberty. And polls have shown how little the average citizen understands and appreciates what that amendment means. Understanding can come only from leadership at the top.

Israel, Fearing Peace, Ignores Sadat's Signals For Settlement

Israel has grown and prospered throughout 24 years of intermittent war with its Arab neighbors, but would it be able to come as sturdily through a protracted period of peace?

The government in Tel Aviv is obviously reluctant to try the experiment. Peace could be had, right now, on terms highly favorable to Israel, more favorable than anything possible since the founding of the state of Iarael in 1948. President Sadat of Egypt has been frantically signaling his desire for a settlement. But so far Prime Minister Golda Meir reminds one of Nelson at the battle of Copenhagen. He put his telescope to his blind eye.

THE QUESTION disturbing western diplomats is how long Mr. Sadat can survive in his present condition without a settlement with Israel.

He has broken with Russia, to a degree which continues to amaze the West. Russian reconnaissance planes have left the Mediterranean. There is no more aerial surveillance of the U.S. Sixth fleet. The Russians literally are leaving Egypt. Most have left already. It is not even certain that Russian naval units will continue to use Egyptian ports. In Washington, it sounds too good to be true. Yet each succeeding report confirms an almost complete Russian withdrawal.

This is fine for Mr. Sadat, for the immediate future. The Russians had been too long in Egypt. Their presence had become unwelcome. Mr. Sadat threw them out. But he threw them out because they were interested in endless continued tension in the Middle East, not in any settlement between Egypt and Israel. Mr. Sadat had to throw them out as a first step to a settlement which they did not want, and persistently prevented.

But now the Russians are going and will soon be gone. That clears the way, so far as Mrs. Sadat is concerned, for a settlement. But if Israel refuses to walk halfway down the road toward him, he continues to be unable to get peace for his country.

Sooner or later he either gets a settlement with Israel, or will be overthrown. Perhaps the Russians come back at that stage.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT is satisfied that right now would be the ideal moment for Israel to open talks pointed at long-term settlement. It would happily start pushing Tel Aviv toward such a settlement, were it free to do so. It isn't. The White House has forbidden any pressure of even the gentlest sort on Prime Minister Meir, at least until after election day. And no other western government has any leverage in Israel comparable to Washington's.

So the prospect is for no serious approach toward peace by Israel through this year. And can Mr. Sadat last that long without a prospect of peace? It seems doubtful.

In other words, the state of controlled tension which Moscow preferred seems also to be preferred in Tel Aviv for the obvious reason that Israel thrives best when under presumed and continuing threat.

Perhaps the Russians are getting smart. They may hurt Iurael far more by walking out of the Middle East than they did by coming in.

Republicans Find Way To Spend Embarrassment Of Riches

MIAMI BEACH — The money keeps rolling in for Nixon. Conservative estimates indicate that by October the Republicans will have $2 billion to re-elect the President.

The concern here in Miami was that since it won't cost more than $50 million for the 1972 campaign, the Republicans will have a surplus of $1.950 billion.

This problem was given serious discussion at the convention. I overheard a group of Republican financial people discussing it in the Boom Boom Room at the Fontainebleau on the last night.

"WE'VE GOT to spend the money," one Republican executive said. "How do we do it?"

"Why don't we bug the offices of every Democratic Party club in the country?"

"That would only take care of $2 million," another Republican said. "We've got to come up with something dramatic to make the people who donated money believe their gesture was worthwhile."

"I think we should invest the money in tax shelters. There's no sense giving it to the government who will throw it away on wasteful welfare giveaway programs."

"WHY DON'T WE buy our own television network so we can tell it like it really is?" a Republican suggested.

"That's not a bad idea. We could make Spiro Agnew news director."

"Dammit," said one of the men, "we're not thinking big. Surely there is something we can do that will catch the imagination of the American people"

"How about buying Alaska? Then we wouldn't have to worry about it going in the Democratic column."

"You're on the right track."

"We could make a bid for ITT. We've got a close association with them anyway."

"No, I think we should buy the telephone company instead. Then we could make sure the Democrats don't get any phone service for the next four years."

"What about bailing out Lockheed? Surely they could use the money and it would help us win California."

"I don't think we should use Republican money to bail out Lockheed. That's the government's job."

"HOW ABOUT building Richard Nixon football stadiums all over the country? That would please the President."

"We could buy him a pro football team for his birthday," someone suggested.

"These are all good ideas but they don't seem right," the leader of the group said. "You have to remember this is not our money. It belongs to millionaires and bankers and corporation executives. They earned this money through their own sweat, and they're going to be watching what we do with it."

"Why tell how much money we took in?" a man said. "Why not just declare $50 million. Nobody will be the wiser."

"That would be illegal. Besides, someone will find out about it and try to make it a political issue."

A MAN JUMPED up. "Wait a minute! Wait a minute! I think I've got it. Why don't we announce that for the week before the election, the Republican Party will pay for the bombing of Vietnam. It won't cost the taxpayer a cent."

"That's it," everybody said at once. "We'll give the country a free week of bombing. It's a taxpayer's dream!"

On this day in history:

In 1883, the volcano of Krakatoa in the Netherlands East Indies began erupting. Before it subsided the following day, two-thirds of the island had been laid waste and 36,000 persons were dead.

In 1920, women were given the right to vote as the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution went into effect.

In 1964, President Lyndon Johnson and Sen. Hubert Humphrey were selected to head the Democratic ticket.

Jazz And Classical Mix: Don Ellis Band In Marin

The sight of an 18-year-old classical cellist lugging her amplified cello into Marin Veterans Memorial Auditorium, amid two dozen jazz musicians would boggle the mind of most any self-respecting jazz aficionado.

Classical cellists just aren't found in big-time jazz bands, let alone female classical cellists only recently out of high school.

Mind boggling or not, Patsy Kudzia will be playing her amplified cello in two performances tomorrow of the Don Ellis 21-Piece Quadraphonic Space Music Band at the Marin auditorium.

A trumpeter, composer and arranger of avante-garde jazz, Ellis has recently added an innovative feature to his 21-man band: a classical string quartet. And the quartet includes Miss Kudzia, an effervescent brunette who lives in Los Angeles when not on tour with the Ellis extravaganza.

Miss Kudzia will be joined on stage by two violinists and a viola player. Using the string quartet as the springboard for an assortment of wild imporivisations, the Ellis band is known for its unique time signatures and unusual rhythms.

Miss Kudzia joined the group in April after she was recommended by her instructor, cellist Gabor Rejto.

Since then she has been touring the country in a bus with the Ellis band.

Miss Kudzia was trained in classical music and performed with the Oregon Symphony, and never considered jazz music until Don Ellis came along.

"I never even listened to jazz before I got the job," she said. "In fact, I never knew anyone who ever bothered with jazz.

"Sure, I was afraid when I first saw the music. Don's rhythms are so much different from anything I'd ever seen. It takes a while to get used to."

After four months on tour and in the recording studio, Miss Kudzia has made the musical transition, but she's still stunned by the band's sound each night.

"With a jazz band, every time I play, it's an awakening experience, a discovery. Your mind has to be in another place when you approach jazz than when you approach classical music. You have to learn to flow with the music."

Ellis recently scored the films "The French Connection" and "Kansas City Bomber". The film credits plus several albums on Columbia have helped pack college auditoriums and jazz clubs wherever the band has appeared on cross-country tours.

The band will perform at the auditorium at 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. tomorrow — complete with string quartet.

A cellist since she was 11, Miss Kudzia says she has no definite plans on the horizon. For the present, she'll just play her amplified cello while the rest of the band "blows their brains out."

WITH ELLIS BAND — Cellist Patsy Kudzia will join the 21-piece Don Ellis Band tomorrow for two performances at Marin Veterans Auditorium. She is a member of the classical string quartet which accompanies Ellis's avante-garde jazz band.

More Buses Slated For Lucas Valley

Expansion of commuter bus service to Lucas Valley and express bus service between Terra Linda and San Francisco will start Monday, Golden Gate Bridge District officials reported yesterday.

The new route 40 serving Lucas Valley commuters weekdays will leave Mount McKinley and Idylberry roads in the morning at 6:30, 6:45, 7:05 and 7:25 o'clock.

It will depart from First and Fremont streets in San Francisco in the afternoon at 4:45, 5:00, 5:15 and 5:30 o'clock, and will follow the financial district route.

Route 36 express runs from Terra Linda at 6:28 a.m. and 6:53 a.m. will bypass San Rafael. Evenings, express service will be on the runs leaving from First and Fremont at 4:50 and 5:20 o'clock.

The new service, previously authorized by district directors, was announced at the board's regular meeting.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

SAND — Bought 2,500 tons of sand for sandblasting from Lone Star Industries Inc. of San Francisco for $20,000.

SEDAN — Bought an air-conditioned sedan from Courtesy Ford of Napa for $3,999.

DESIGN — Approved an $18,000 contract with Sverdrup and Parcel for design plans and specifications for bus facilities in Novato and Santa Rosa.

SMART — Renewed for fiscal 1972-73 the district's annual contract with attorney Richard Smart of San Francisco for $30,000. He was hired last year to handle the district's applications for federal grants. The district has won $25 million in grants since he was hired.

SAUSALITO — Extended for four months the district's lease with Donlan Argues for its Marinship parking lot at a cost of $1,200 a month.

Colombia Airliner Hijacked To Cuba

BOGOTA (UPI) — Three armed men seized a Colombian airliner with 27 other persons aboard Friday and forced it to fly to Cuba.

The Colombian civil aeronautics agency said the TAO domestic airlines Viscount propjet landed at Camaguey, Cuba. The airline said the Colombian government has asked the Swiss embassy in Havana to make arrangements for the return of the plane, its six crew members and the 21 passengers.

Carmaker Announces Price Rise Holdout

DETROIT (UPI)—American Motors Corp. has decided to hold out for a full $157 price increase on its 1973 model cars, despite government-induced backpeddaling by General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co.

The decision, announced Friday by AMC President William V. Luneburg, marked a partial reversal of its previous position on 1973 increases.

The company had said earlier that it would forego a requested $79 increase to cover labor and material costs, but would not bend to pressure from the Nixon administration's Cost of Living Council that it rescind its $78 increase request to go towards the cost of government required safety and pollution control equipment.

Luneburg said AMC reconsidered its initial position and concluded that it was "fully entitled" to the full increase.

In addition, he said, "We cannot reduce the amount of the increase to cover safety and emission costs."

Chrysler Corp. is the only other auto company to stand by its initial request for a $110 increase on 1973 models. GM and Ford reduced their original requests by $31 and $33 respectively and both are now seeking $59 hikes.

The Price Commission Thursday ordered the car companies to keep their 1973 model prices at 1972 model levels until the conclusion of hearings on the price hike requests which begin Sept. 12 and probably will last until sometime in early October. All the companies will have begun selling their new models by that time.

Luneburg said AMC will abide by the Price Commission's directive "but we will continue to press for consideration of our request which we feel has been well documented."

AMC is the smallest of the "Big Four" automakers.

Morena Sworn In As School Boss

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Steven P. Morena, 51, of Larkspur, was sworn in yesterday as superintendent of the San Francisco School District to replace Thomas Shaheen who stepped down under pressure and with $56,000 severance pay.

Shaheen, who had two years of his four-year contract remaining, quit with a blast at the Board of Eeucation that it had "blown a chance for educational greatness."

Morena, appointed on a 6-1 vote, was assistant chancellor of the San Francisco Community College District and former president of Oakland's Laney College.

A native of San Francisco, he graduated from San Francisco State College and received his master's and doctoral degrees from Stanford University.

He was appointed to a two-year contract at the same $42,000 a year salary that was paid to Shaheen.

Shaheen's resignation came at a boisterous meeting at which several speakers denounced the board of education.

Shaheen said the board had substituted a "retrogressive position which will make the mediocre schools of San Francisco even poorer."

Petaluma Open Space Study Due

The Petaluma City Council will consider a proposed interim open space element at its meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The plan proposes that hills around Petaluma be kept as open space as well as land designated as flood plains along the Petaluma River and its tributaries.

The council also will review a proposed project schedule for the planning department.

G.M. Recalls Weak-Axled Limousines

DETROIT (upi)—Cadillac has recalled its entire 1972 model production line of ambulances, hearses and luxury limousines and sedans—a total of nearly 4,000 vehicles—to replace weak rear axles.

Cadillac, a division of General Motors Corp., said Friday rear axle shafts on the vehicles were improperly tempered and could break, causing the rear weels to fall off.

A company spokesman said there have been seven reported axle shaft failures, one of them involving a hearse, and six involving ambulances. There have been no injuries, the spokesman said.

Cadillac manufacturers chassis for builders of ambulances and hearses.

The limousines are part of Cadillac's Series 75 line of nine-passenger cars, the longest if not the most luxurious models built by GM.

Cadillac said it would arrange for replacement of the axle shafts on all of the vehicles involved without charge to the owners.

Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, light air pollution.

Defiant Magee In Walkout

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Ruchell Magee walked out of the courtroom yesterday, but without the fuss accompanying previous frequent departures.

Magee, during pre-trial proceeding in the charges of murder and conspiracy against him, asked Superior Judge Morton Colvin if he could leave.

Colvin said no, but Magee rose and started to leave anyway.

"You will not be permitted to return until you give me an assurance that you will not further disrupt the court," the judge warned Magee.

The convict left the courtroom and entered a nearby holding cell where he could hear court activity through a loudspeaker.

Magee faces trial in connection with the Aug. 7, 1970, shootout at the Marin County Civic Center.

His next appearance is scheduled for Sept. 5 when Colvin plans to hear the question of whether Magee is competent to act as his own attorney as he wishes to.

Innocent Plea To Drunken Driving

A Richmond man has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a felony charge of drunken driving that resulted in an accident July 27 on Highway 101 in which he and four other persons were injured.

A preliminary hearing for Loycell Peacock, 34, was scheduled for Sept. 7.

According to the California Highway Patrol, Peacock's car crossed to the side of the highway near Marin City and hit a car driven by a Daly City man.

Four Films Due Fair Showing

Four films from the National Gallery of Art in Washington D.C., will be included in the entertainment program of the Marin County Fair, Thursday through Sept. 4.

The films and their schedules are:

"Art in the Western World," a description of the National Gallery and the works in its collection, Thursday; "The American Vision," tracing the development of American painting from pre-Revolutionary days to the 20th Century, Friday; "Time Enough to See the World," an analysis of paintings from the Renaissance to the 20th Century, Sept. 2; and "The National Gallery of Art," a tour of the major paintings in the gallery collection, Sept. 4.

Each film will be shown at 5 p.m. in the Veterans Memorial Building at the civic center, site of the fair.

'Pack Rat' Suspect To Napa

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court has committed David Richard Massagli, 33, accused San Anselmo "Pack rat" burglar, to Napa State Hospital.

The judge suspended criminal proceedings in Massagli's case after reviewing reports from two psychiatrists who said they did not think Massagli is presently sane within the meaning of the law.

Massagli, who has pleaded innocent to charges of burglary and resisitng arrest, was arrested June 19 while hiding in the kitchen of a San Anselmo home.

A subsequent search of his home at 23 Brookside Drive in San Anselmo turned up enough loot to fill a dozen trucks.

Police believe he is responsible for about 50 burglaries within 10 blocks of his home during the past three years.

Arab Leaders To Meet Over Israel

CAIRO (UPI)—Arab Foreign Ministers will meet next month to discuss methods of getting Israel out of the occupied territories and strengthening the Arab League, the Al Ahram newspaper said today.

The ministers will meet Sept. 9. Arab League Secretary-General Mahmoud Riad has already suggested this meeting draw up a plan dealing with the continuing Israeli occupation of Arab lands. The plan would then be submitted to a full summit meeting of Arab Kings and heads of state for action.

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

It is amazing to me that anyone still can watch those late shows such as NBC's "Tonight" and the Dick Cavett program on ABC. The sameness, night after night, turned me off long ago. CBS sensibly gave up in this area by cancelling Merv Griffin and turning the time over to old movies. Which makes it easy to turn off the set at the conclusion of the 11 p.m. news.

If you remember how Carol Burnett, the best protean comedienne on television, began her video career, you have been around quite a while and have a remarkable memory. In the very early 1950s, she was sort of a stooge on a program that starred ventriloquist Paul Winchell. Followed quickly by a quick failure in a series entitled "Stanley," in which she was vis-a-vis comic Buddy Hackett.

Comedian Lily Tomlin has been signed as a guest star on three variety shows in the fall. She will appear Oct. 30 on "The Bill Cosby Show" on CBS, Carol Burnett's CBS hour on Nov. 6 and ABC's "The Julie Andrews Show" Dec. 13.

Lynn Klugman, a television associate director, is the niece of star Jack Klugman of "The Odd Couple" series.

Jonathan Winters Prefers The Quiet Life

By VERNON SCOTT

Jonathan Winters, whose brand new "Wacky World of Jonathan Winters" goes into first-run syndication this fall, lives in a most unwacky personal world.

Winters lives as quietly and privately as possible in Hollywood, choosing to remain at home with his wife, Eileen, and daughter, Lucinda, 16.

His son, Jay, has been graduated from college and is out on his own.

Home and hearth are reminiscent of his childhood homes in Dayton and Springfield, Ohio. The house is large, abounding in rooms all tastefully and conservatively furnished. The grounds include a swimming pool and great expanses of lawn. .

The most striking element of the Winters' home is a dazzling display of paintings, somehow suggesting Salvadore Dali.

The canvases are a riot of arresting colors, bright blues, reds, yellows and greens done in acrilic. Many are humorous. Some are compositons of intricate design. Surrealistic.

Next to painting Winters finds fishing the most relaxing avocation of all.

In 1969 he won a game fish tournament off the coast of Florida. He has fished for the big ones in Hawaii, Panama and Mexico. Jonathan has wet lines in the Rocky Mountains for trout and in northern California for bigger fish.

His favorite charity is the American Indian. He contributes time and money generously to a variety of tribes across the country with as little publicity as possible.

A complex man of many moods, Winters dislikes traveling around the country. Invariably he is approached by total strangers who ask: "Are you Jonathan Winters?"

Grudingly Winters admits his guilt:

Because he has created so many characters in his years on television and in night club appearances, the intruder frequently askes Winters to "do Maude Frickert" or one of the others.

An intensively shy and introverted man, Winters simply signs an autograph and begs off miming his characters.

In the comfortable surrounds of his home Winters is more at ease.

Fascinating as many a museum room is Jonathan's den. He is a compulsive collector. Every corner of the large room is filled with mementoes and objects d'art he has picked up in his travels around the world.

He has, for instance, one of the rarest collections of lead soldiers in the Western world. They stand in array between bookshelves.

Indian relics of all kinds are set proudly on view.

This is where Winters spends a great deal of time, surrounded by inanimate objects, almost all of which have some personal meaning for him.

And it is in the den, too, one is likely to mistake the real Maude Frickert, a large and elderly matron of a dog which appears to be a golden spaniel, for a lumpy throw-rug.

Winters tapes his show several times a week at ABC studios working without a script most of the time. His humor is actually based on characters he has known at one time in his life and for maximum impact he improvises whenever possible.

Although he plays nightclubs, Winters avoids them most of the time. Drunks in the crowd annoy and anger him. As is the case with most comedians, Winters seldom makes an attempt to be humorous when he's not working.

He does, however, possess a sardonic wit and a keen eye and ear for mimicry. Heaven protect the man who sinks a barb in Jonathan Winters when he is in a mood to respond.

On the other hand, and unexpectedly, Winters may jump into one of his characters and fracture a group of close friends with a few minutes of ad lib monologue. Just as quickly the mood subsides and he is once again the shy man from Ohio.

Eileen and Jonathan have been married 23 years and spend more time together than most Hollywood couples.

Jonathan's long-range plans include a home in the mountains where he can fish, paint and be with his wife.

The deeper into the wilderness, the better.

On The Stereo Scene

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Big Broadway musicals inevitably are converted into movie spectaculars but only rarely is the trend reversed and a film transplanted to the Broadway stage.

Remember "Some Like It Hot?" It starred Marilyn Monroe, Tony Curtis and Jack Lemmon in a crazy comedy that had the male heroes wearing women's clothes during much of the action. Now it is a Broadway hit, "Sugar."

Elaine Joyce has the lead role as "Sugar" with Robert Morse and Tony Roberts in the parts portrayed by Curtis and Lemmon. The story is about the same as the movie but the stage version has an excellent score by Jule Styne and Bob Merrill.

As far as the original Broadway cast album (United Artists UAS-9905), Cyril Ritchard seems to be the sentimental favorite. Ritchard, cast as Osgood Fielding, Jr., has only two vocals — "November Song" and "Beautiful Through and Through" — but he handles them so nicely and with such little effort that the listener might wish for more.

Most of the songs are lively, from the opening "Penniless Blues" to the fast-tempoed closer, "When You Meet a Man in Chicago" by Sheila Smith, the Society Syncopaters and Vocal Ensemble.

"Sugar" is enjoying a nice run on Broadway and probably will be around for some time because the music is strictly show tunes, written for each situation.

PAUL ROBESON was a black militant at a time when it was not only unfashionable but dangerous to be one. As the nation went through critical periods, Robeson became a most controversial man but that has now been forgotten. The first recordings made by Robeson in the late 1920s are now available on an LP, "Songs of My People" (RCA IM3292.)

. . . . for the Twentieth Century Natural Shoulder Man

A Gathering Of The Old-Time Comics

Marin County's fair program will pay a deserved tribute to the early comics who were, says a buff of old films, the kings of the motion picture industry, and who remain as funny today as they were when their movies were first released.

Movies of today are more than 60 years old in style and format, and if you don't believe it, view "The Birth of a Nation," made by D. W. Griffith back in 1914.

Richard Marshall, chief engineer at Radio Station KTIM and an "old movie buff," claims that by 1914 "every one of the cinematic devices currently in vogue had been put into use."

"We already had a full language of the screen more than 60 years ago," he asserts, and his experience with old-time movies, his enthusiasm and his understanding of the film medium make him most convincing.

UPON LEARNING that old and classic comedies of Charlie Chaplin, W. C. Fields, Laurel and Hardy and Buster Keaton will be played during the 1972 Marin County Fair, from Thursday through Monday, Sept. 4, Marshall began to enthuse about this form of the arts.

"Comedy was the foundation of the film industry," he says, "and the first known film with a plot —going back to 1896 and made by a Frenchman named Lumiere — was a comedy.

"It was called "Watering the Gardener,' and it showed a man watering his lawn when along came a boy who stepped on the garden hose and shut off the flow of water.

"WHEN THE man looked into the end of the hose to find out why the water didn't gush out, the boy stepped off the hose and the man was drenched," Marshall still laughs as he tells the story.

"This exact plot has been used hundreds, perhaps thousands, of times since then," he adds.

The schedule of the old-time comedies, which will be shown from 60 to 80 minutes beginning at 11 a.m. daily during the fair in the Marin Veterans' Memorial Building auditorium, includes "The Barbership," "The Pharmacist" and "Pool Sharks" with W. C. Fields on Thursday, and Fields' "The Fatal Glass of Beer," "The Dentist" and "The Golf Specialist" on Friday.

ON SATURDAY, Chaplin will be featured in "Behind the Screen," "Easy Street," "The Rink" and "The Cure," while on Sunday it will be Laurel and Hardy in "Below Zero," "Leave 'em Laughing" and "The Music Box."

On Monday Keaton will be starring in "My Wife's Relations," "Cops" and "Balloonatics."

"Chaplin and Stan Laurel came to this country together in an English music hall act called 'Fred Karno's Mummingbirds' in 1912," Marshall says. "Chaplin was hired for films, but Laurel returned to England and it wasn't until he came back here in 1917, during World War I, that he started his own film career."

"HE WASN'T teamed with Oliver Hardy until the mid-1920s, and their first film was called 'Putting Pants on Phillip,' " Marshall reports.

"The Laurel and Hardy style of comedy was called 'two minds without a single thought,' " Marshall chuckles, "and I love it."

Currently Marshall is involved in the presentation of silent films with organ accompaniment in the Avenue Theater in San Francisco, founded by two friends, Edward M. Stout III and Vernon Gregory.

BUT HIS MAIN concern is the preservation of old films, and he has made public requests for anyone who knows anything about the location of "People involved in working with their hands are happy people, and the products they produce provide happiness for the buyer. The whole industry has good vibes," believes Jack Haehl, who works often and creatively with his own hands and teaches his skills to others.

Marin Feels The Crafts Explosion

County Fair Is One Place Where Impact Will Be Felt

More craftsmen are making better things that are in greater demand by more people.

That sums up today's world of crafts and is particularly applicable to Marin County, according to Jack Haehl, accomplished craftsman, high school teacher, design consultant, and crafts coordinator for the 1972 Marin County Fair.

"THE CRAFTS that will be on display during the five days of the fair — starting Thursday and continuing through Sept. 4, Labor Day — will be illustrative of what is happening in the creative arts," Haehl promises, something that is innovative and specific trends as the soaring increase of interest in ceramics during the past decade, and such more general patterns "as the new freedom that artists enjoy to do what they want to do because purchasers are more willing to use or wear something that is innovative and different."

Haehl teaches painting, sculpture and crafts at Terra Linda High School, and also conducts classes in drawing and painting at San Quentin Prison two nights a week.

HE IS ALSO a design consultant for the Victor Equipment Co., makers of welding equipment.

"The crafts which have been selected for the Fair by our judges, and which will be presented in more than 40 booths on the fairgrounds at the Civic Center, cover stained glass, leather work, blown glass, wood sculpture, weaving, patchwork, embroidery, cast jewelry, and many, many more activities," Haehl says.

"But I think the most popular craft right now is ceramics," Haehl notes, "and that's quite a change from, say, 10 years ago, when small handicraft like belts and rings were so popular."

"IT'S BECAUSE there is more money available for craftsmen now," Haehl explains that trend. "Ceramics requires a wheel or an electric kiln, and the artists can afford to buy this equipment now instead of making do with the small handicraft kits like we did in the 1950s and early 1960s."

Haehl also notes that many craftsmen are into sculpture, using welding and similar industrial equipment, because companies are producing smaller tool units that the artisans can afford.

"Many craftsmen are abandoning the traditional material like stone and wood," Haehl grins, "although there are still some of us old fogies around."

HAEHL HIMSELF works in wood, and he was the designer of the eight-foot mahogany-on-mahogany cross that decorates the sanctuary of the new First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael.

When the handsome old stone edifice that had served the congregation so many years was razed, services were transferred temporarily to the social hall pending completion of a new church building. Haehl's impressive cross was part of a redecorating program to fit the social hall for its new role.

"People nowadays would rather have a piece of original art or craft instead of a factory-made piece," Haehl asserts, "and this means more freedom and a greater market for the craftsman."

HAEHL ALSO points to the development of handicraft and art instruction in the schools as a reason for the "crafts explosion."

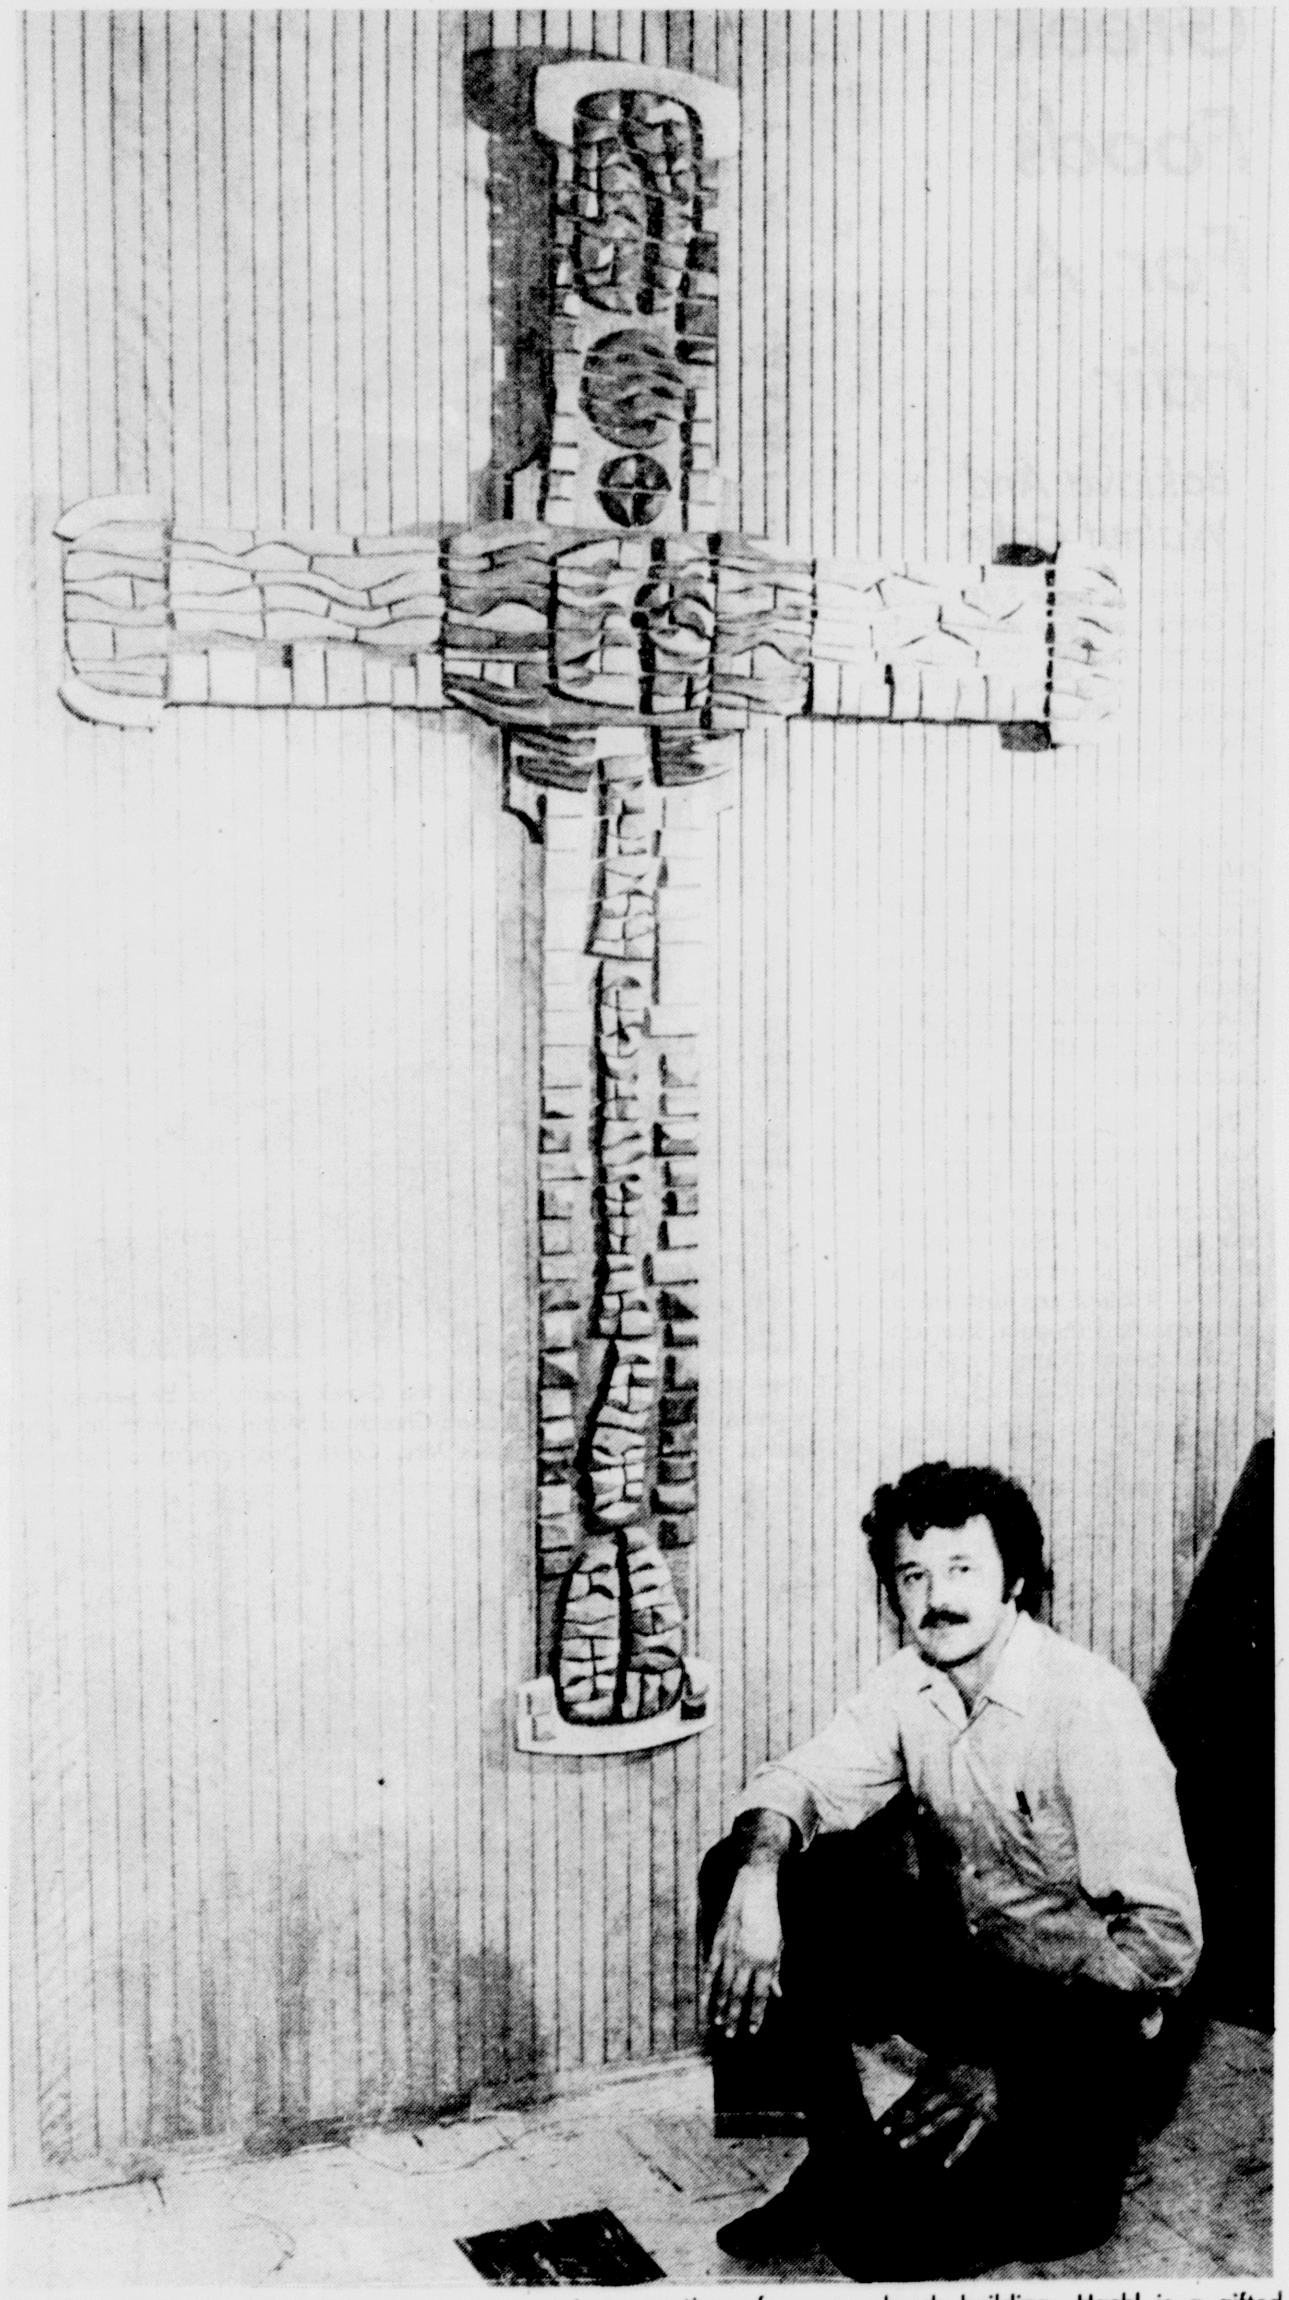
"Most high schools in Marin are teaching art at the college level," he says. "Now there are more mature craftsmen at an earlier age.

"As an example, Dan Losee at Terra Linda High is in the second year with his course in Creative Plastics and Woods, and the products which his students are turning out are wonderful."

But Hael also notes that the craftsmen who were working with their hands 10 years ago are still around and are still producing items which the public finds attractive.

"PEOPLE ARE incorporating crafts in their lives now, and this is of great help to the artist," Haehl says with satisfaction. "I am tremendously pleased with the variety and the quality of the crafts we will display at the Fair because I believe the artists who are represented will offer a comprehensive picture of what people are interested in today."

"People involved in working with their hands are happy people," Haehl believes, "and the products they produce provide happiness for the buyer. The whole industry has good vibes."



JACK HAEHL inspects the eight-foot-high cross that he crafted from mahogany for the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael to help transform its social hall into a place of worship pending the construction of a new church building. Haehl is a gifted designer, artisan and teacher, and will be in charge of the crafts department at the 1972 Marin County Fair. (Independent-Journal photos)

Greek Foods For A Fair

Baklava And Walnut Cake

The last of some 8,000 pieces of Greek pastry is about ready to go into the oven this weekend as members of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin prepare for the opening of the 1972 Marin County Fair on Thursday.

The church is sponsoring a refreshment booth at the fair, and members of the Philoptochos Society, the ladies auxiliary of the church, will staff the booth during the five days, from Thursday through Sept. 4, Labor Day, at the Civic Center fairgrounds.

BUT THE LADIES have more responsibilities than just serving in the booth. They have organized into groups and have produced the Greek pastries which will be served from the booth — 8,000 pieces of baklava, koulouria, karithopeta, kourambethes, melomakarona and other Greek delicacies.

Baklava is the honey and nut squares that are familiar to anyone who has ever eaten in a Greek restaurant, and the other pastries are just as delicious. Koulouria is a braided cookie with an orange taste; karithopeta is a walnut cake, while kourambethes is a butter cookie covered with powdered sugar, and melomakarona is a cookie covered with chopped walnuts, cinnamon and sugar.

Under the direction of Mrs. Milton Sideris of Terra Linda, as general chairman, and co-chairmen Mrs. James Kambur, Terra Linda, and Mrs. Dom Selmi, San Rafael, the members of the Philoptochos Society have met for the past two or three weeks to do the tremendous amount of baking necessary to meet the requirements of hungry fairgoers.

A GROUP OF six or eight women met in Terra Linda and in two days prepared more than 1,000 pieces of baklava. The other pastries were baked individually in homes of the members.

By the time the "pastry stockpiling" will be completed, there will be about 1,500 pieces of Koulouria, prepared by one group baking 500 and another group producing 1,000; there will also be some 1,500 kourambethes, the same number of melamakarona, and about 1,200 pieces of the karithopeta.

There will be other Greek pastries served at the booth, too. And the ladies expect the entire production to be gone by the end of the fair.

Fr. James Adams, the spiritual leader of the Marin Greek Orthodox Church and one of the guiding hands in the sponsor-

THE HONEY-RICH baklava is the Greek pastry to be served by the women of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin with which the general public is most familiar. Here Mrs. Costa Dracopoulos of San Rafael removes a sheet of these delicacies from the oven. Some 1,500 pieces of baklava are being baked for hungry fair-goers.

MRS. JAMES ADAMS of Novato offers teen-ager Irene Perivolaris, left, also of Novato, a sample from a plate of kourambethes, the powdered sugar butter cookie certain to be a favorite with nibblers at the 1972 Marin County Fair when it opens next Thursday. Mrs. Adams is the wife of Fr. James Adams, the pastor of the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin County.

THE RECIPES

KARITHOPETA
(Walnut Cake)

1 cup sugar
½ tsp. cloves
1½ tsp. baking powder
1 cup salad oil
½ tsp. cinnamon
1 cup chopped walnuts
2 cups Bisquick
⅛ tsp. salt
½ tsp. soda
1 cup milk
4 eggs, unbeaten

Place all ingredients in one bowl and blend well together. Pour batter in ungreased pan. Bake 45 minutes or until cake loosens on sides of pan in 350 degree oven.

Syrup

Boil until slightly thick for about 20 minutes 1½ cups water, 1 cup sugar and a tablespoon lemon juice. Allow to cool and pour over warm cake slowly. Allow cake to set for at least five hours.

KOURAMBETHES
(Powdered Sugar Butter Cookies)

1 lb. sweet butter (room temperature)
½ cup powdered sugar
2 egg yolks

Beat together until light in color — about 30 minutes — then add one level teaspoon baking powder.
Sift flour and add flour a cup at a time to a soft consistency (so you can form a round ball). Form cookies in any shape you like. Bake 25 minutes in 350 degree oven until light brown.

While still hot sift powdered sugar over entire cookie. Let cool completely and recover cookies with powdered sugar.

KOULOURIA
(Cookie)

1 cup butter
2 cups sugar
6 eggs
8 -9 cups flour
1 cup warm milk
4 Tb. baking powder

In a large bowl beat eggs thoroughly. Add sugar. Warm the milk. In a very large glass place warm milk with baking powder. Stir well. Add in egg and sugar mixture. Add flour slowly, while mixing dough well by hand. Make dough into a braid shape. If desired you may make several other shapes. Place cookies in greased cookie sheets.

In a small bowl combine 1 egg and 1 tsp. orange extract. Beat well. Brush on top of each cookie before placing them in oven. Bake at 355 degrees for about 15 to 25 minutes or until brown on top. Makes about two dozen cookies.

MELAMAKARONA

1½ cups oil
1½ cups sugar
½ glass orange juice
6 eggs
dash of cinnamon
8 -9 cups flour
1 Tb. baking powder
1½ tsp. soda
½ tsp. vanilla

Mix oil, and sugar in a large bowl. Then beat in eggs, cinnamon and vanilla. Mix baking soda, baking powder, and orange juice in a glass. Beat that in. Add flour in while mixing dough by hand. Bake at 325 degree 20 to 25 minutes.

Syrup

1 cup sugar
4 Tb. honey
1 cup water

Mix together in a pot. Cook over high heat until it boils. Let it boil for 5 minutes. Put Melomakarona in syrup for 1 minute. Let cook, then dip in chopped walnuts, cinnamon and sugar.

BAKLAVA

3 lbs. walnuts, chopped coarse
3 lbs. almonds, chopped coarse
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. nutmeg and all-spice
3 Tbs. sugar
1 lb. filo (strudel dough)
1 lb. butter

Mix nuts, sugar and spice in bowl. Butter a large pan — place seven layers of filo buttering each one separately. Put half of nut mixture on top. Place two more layers of filo — each buttered. Put in rest of nut mixture. Finish with rest of filo — buttering each as before. Butter top filo well. Bake at 325 degrees for about one hour.

Syrup

3 cups sugar
4 cups water
1 slice lemon

Boil for 15 minutes. Let cool. Place over warm Baklava. Cut in diamond shapes.

A Taste Treat For Fairgoers

ship of the booth, described the dedication of the women.

"IF WE NEED more pastries than we have planned, the ladies have said they will go home after the fair closes at 10 p.m. each night and make more of the cookies, the baklava and the walnut cake," Father Adams said.

The booth at the fair, which the church is sponsoring for the second consecutive year, and the Greek Festival at the Civic Center, which is also an activity of the church, support the Church's building fund.

At present, Father Adams noted, the church is using facilities made available by the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, but the Congregation's plan is to build a building of their own on property the church owns in Ignacio.

THEY HOPE TO begin construction at the end of 1973, Father Adams said, and the efforts of the Philoptochos (a Greek word meaning "Friend of the Poor") Society are vital in meeting this goal.

So forget the calories and try the baklava, or the karithopeta, or the melomakarona, or any of the other delicacies which will be served beginning Thursday in the Greek Orthodox Church booth at the Marin County Fair.

WITH AN ARRAY of appealing Greek pastries already on the table, Mrs. James Spallas, left, of Novato and Mrs. George Catel, also of Novato, take time from their baking to make sure a batch of baklava is exactly to their liking. The two women were participating in the mammoth task of preparing some 8,000 pieces of pastry for sale at the Philoptochos Society booth during the five-day run of the 1972 Marin County Fair, opening Thursday at the Marin civic Center fairgrounds.

Pure Sunshine, Lots Of Water

COVER PHOTO

GENEVIEVE BROWN walks through the backyard garden of her home on San Rafael's Grove Street where, despite its modest dimensions, she and her husband, Tom, produce a bounty of vegetables, fruits and flowers. They are organic gardeners. The ribbons in the photo were not grown in the garden. But they were the result of its harvests. Mrs. Brown hopes to add to her ribbon collection in the horticulture and floriculture sections of the 1972 Marin County Fair, opening Thursday.

There may be people who will win more ribbons than Mrs. Genevieve Brown from the fruits, vegetables and flowers they enter in the 1972 Marin County Fair, but no one will get more enjoyment from the competition.

Mrs. Brown, who has lived in San Rafael jll of her life, has a moderate-sized backyard on Grove Street. Last year she won five first prize ribbons, four seconds and four thirds, a total of 13 ribbons out of 16 entries, from the growing things in that plot.

This year she expects to enter in some 16 to 20 of the floriculture and horticulture classes, and to add to the total of more than 100 ribbons she has won in Marin County fairs over the past 20 eyars.

THE 1972 MARIN County Fair will begin Thursday and will continue through Labor Day on the Civic Center fairgrounds.

In addition to the floriculture and horticulture competition, there will be a juried art show, film competition, free outdoor entertainment, performances daily in the Auditorium Theater, and a host of commercial booths, refreshments and attractions for the youngsters, including a puppet show, circus, kiddie train and boat rides.

But Mrs. Brown and her husband Tom are mainly interested in the fruits, vegetables and flowers.

"WE USE PURE sunshine and lots of water to grow our plants," she said. "We Italians — my maiden name was Maggiore — love our gardens, and it takes a lot of hard work to get something nice out of the ground. We grow our fruits, vegetables and flowers in a natural organic way and we have been doing so for years, before it became so popular.

"The Labor Day weekend dates for this year's fair will be better for some plants, but not so good for others," Mrs. Brown observed. But she is confident she will have a good representation from her garden at the fair.

Last year Mrs. Brown took first ribbons for her Meyer lemon, her summer squash, her string beans, her fuchsias and her dwarf French marigolds. Her second places came for her white squash, Swiss chard, carnations and canna, and she received third place ribbons fgr lemon cucumbers, red and white potatoes and her lettuce.

THIS YEAR SHE is not sure exactly what she will enter, but based on past performance, with winning entries almost every year for the past two decades, Mrs. Brown will have more ribbons to add to her pile of prizes.

"We use a compost pile and give plenty of attention to our plants," she said. "I believe that potato peels, carrot peels and such things came out of the ground and should go back in to help other plants grow.

"I am also a firm believer in watering by hand and in soaking the ground. Sometimes it takes us two or three hours to water our plants."

"IF YOU WANT a nice place, you must work at it," she said firmly.

Besides gardening, Mrs. Brown spends her time as a baby-sitter with her five grandchildren, and she is as proud of the children she has raised as she is of her prize-winning plants.

The Browns have three boys and a girl, and they are a fourth generation Marin family, since their parents lived here, and now their children and grandchildren are Marinites.

Mrs. Brown and her husband were 4-H leaders when their children were youngsters, and that is how they became so enthusiastic about the floriculture and horticulture competitions in the fair.

"IT IS NOT only the ribbons that mean something," Genevieve Brown said, "it's knowing that plants which we have raised are as good or better than those of other people.

"And we don't just grow our plants for show, either," she smiled. "We eat what we grow, and I do a lot of canning, too."

Old Films At The New Fair

old films to contact him at KTIM.

"The negatives of the old-time movies were not as stable as is the current film stock, and we are in danger of losing many of the finest examples of old motion pictures because they were not stored properly, or not cared for, and are just disintegrating," Marshall mourns.

"We have organized the Lyric Photoplay Society to work toward the preservation of old films, and we are looking for any help we can get," he adds.

MARSHALL, A native of Texas who was a boy soprano, served in both World War II and the Korean War, and sang in musical comedy as a youngster. He sang the lead in the Western road company of "Oklahoma!" before entering the field of electronics and the engineering end of broadcasting. He has been with KTIM for three years.

He began his interest in old movies by getting involved in pipeorgans, which were used as musical background for the silent films,

"With 'The Birth of a Nation' in 1914, films passed out of the stage of being a curiosity and started to become a great social force," Marshall resumes his history of the cinema. "Why they even had 'dirty movies' back in the 1890s, and I have seen a documentary on venereal disease and prostitution made in 1915 that is as explicit as anything made today."

"THE ONLY difference is the nudity shown today," he adds.

"I love to watch Chaplin, Fields and the other old-time comedians," Marshall says, "because they are so professional.

"AND THEY are all so funny that you ignore the technical weaknesses, compared to the films of today, and just glory in their presentations," Marshall says. "I hope there are packed houses for these showings at the fair, because I think the public will really enjoy this kind of entertainment."

Richard Marshall, for certain, will be a part of the audiences, chuckling at antics he has seen many times, but still finds hilarious.

THE COMICS who reigned when the comedy was the staple of the movie industry will be featured in a Marin County Fair film festival of old classics. Starring in the line-up of all-time greats will be such immortals as Charlie Chaplin, left; W. C. Fields, above; Buster Keaton, below; and Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in the photograph at the bottom of the page. Showings will begin at 11 a.m. on each of the five fair days in the Marin Veterans' Memorial Building.

Their Music Comes From Dixie

"The thing about Dixieland jazz is that it is happy music. The audience enjoys it, and the musicians enjoy it.

"It's smiling music."

Thus do the six Marin men of diverse professions, but sharing a common enthusiasm for the traditional jazz that came out of New Orleans, describe their favorite music.

They make up the regular membership of the Olema Owls, a group that has been playing together since 1959 and spreading the message that to hear Dixieland is to enjoy, enjoy!

THROUGH THE years they've played at private and club parties, at military bases, at weddings, at political rallies, at picnics, in schools, at pizza parlors, before Little League baseball games, at community celebrations.

In the coming week they are scheduled for four appearances — Thursday and Sunday nights, twice on Monday —at the Marin County Fair on the new Civic Center fairgrounds off Highway 101 north of San Rafael.

It will mark a first county fair appearance for a band that has played at just every other kind of place.

consists of Tom Leps of Greenbrae, trumpet; Jeremy Jones of Terra Linda, clarinet and tenor sax; Ken Combs of Terra Linda, trombone; Rod Roberts of Ross, piano; Bruce Duncan of Fairfax, tuba; and Elmer Albritton of Kentfield, drums.

"Sometimes," they say, "we will ask a banjoist to sit in with us as well."

Duncan is with Adam-Hill Co. of South San Francisco. Jones is director of foundation programs for the University of the Pacific; Combs is a United States District Court reporter or stenographer after working for years as a reporter in the court of Marin Superior Judge Thomas Keating; Leps is a cabinet-maker, furniture refinisher and water ski manufacturer; Roberts is a consulting mechanical engineer with the firm of Montgomery and Roberts, El Cerrito; and Albritton is a patent attorney with the law firm of Flehr, Rohbach, Test, Albritton and Herbert in San Francisco.

COMBS, DUNCAN, Jones, Roberts and Leps have been with the Owls, full or part-time, since their beginning 13 years ago.

Combs, who shares with Leps the leadership responsibilities, recalls that it all began one day when tuba player Duncan "came up to me, and asked if I would like to help him get a Dixieland group together. He had heard I liked the music, and he knew some other musicians who also dug it."

The group was formed, and because some of the earliest rehearsals were held in the old Druids' Hall in Olema, the name "Olema" was chosen for the band. The "Owls" was added for alliteration. And the name has stuck.

LEPS, UNTIL then an irregular with the Owls, became a regular in 1967. And Albritton became the last to join in 1969.

The Owls rehearse once a week, usually on a Wednesday night, at a member's home. They will average three or four engagements a month.

"And sometimes," says Ken Combs, "one of the fellows will simply get the urge for some music and will call the rest of us up. And we'll get together at some steakhouse or pizza palace for a jam session just for our own enjoyment."

"THE OTHER night we played for an hour at a gasoline service station justfor the heck of it," laughs Tom Leps.

All read music, and all began their interest in music in their school years.

Among the Owls, Jones has the most extensive musical background, having played professionally all over the world and having led his own groups.

But the others have had experience beyond their school bands as well. Leps, for example, played first trumpet in the U.S. Coast Guard Band. Combs was with the Hamilton Air Force Base Band.

THE OWLS stress that their repertoire is by no means limited to Dixieland. They will play dance music, sweet or swing. And they will play rock — "Watermelon Man," "Aquarius," etc.

"We play the kind of music the audience wants," says Leps.

But there is no question but that Dixieland is their favorite, and it will be featured on their Marin County Fair programs. "It fits the spirit of a fair," says Combs.

COMBS TELLS how the Owls came to land the spot on the Marin County Fairprogram. "I just happened to be walking past the county fair offices at the Civic Center, and on an impulse decided to go in and ask if there was a spot on the 1972 fair program for some good Dixieland music."

WHEN THE OWLS HOOT

The Olema Owls and their Dixieland jazz music will be heard four times from the outdoor stage of the fairgrounds at the Marin Civic Center during the five-day Marin County Fair.

The first appearance will be Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The Owls will also be heard Sunday, Sept. 3, at 7:30, and twice on Monday, Sept. 4, at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Fair Manager Marcelle McCoy asked him to bring in a tape of the Owls performing, then listened to it "and snapped us up."

The Owls have no big ambitions for a busier engagement schedule or for recordings. "We are satisfied doing just what we are doing now," Combs says. "We don't care to play any oftener. But the one thing we are interested in is playing better and better. And we think our music is improving steadily."

THE OWLS come equipped with "first class instruments" which easily exceed $5,000 in their total value. Included are amplifiers used only when playing in a very large hall or gymnasium, or for the piano during outdoor performances.

If no piano is available at the concert site, the Owls use instead as pianist Rod Roberts' instrument an electric organ belonging to Tom Leps.

The Owls wear natty red vests as a regular part of their performance attire. White shirts and white pants complete their costumes. Sometimes derby hats are worn as well in the spirit of the Dixieland music.

THE DIXIELAND repertoire includes such traditional tunes as "When the Saints Come Marching Home," "St. James' Infirmary," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Frankie and Johnny" and "Tin Roof Blues."

But it also includes such pieces as "Midnight in Moscow" and "Hello Dolly," played in the Dixieland style.

What is it that distinguishes Dixieland from other jazz?

"The tailgate or slide trombone and the wah-wah or muted trumpet," Combs and Leps agree.

WHILE ALL three up-front instruments —the trumpet, the trombone and the clarinet (or sax) — are basic to the music, the trumpet, as the lead instrument, is the key horn, they also agree.

In the Bay Area, they say, Turk Murphy and his band, based in Murphy's Earthquake McGoon's club in San Francisco, have served to keep interest in Dixieland alive and high.

The Owls frequently journey to San Francisco and McGoon's to hear Murphy or traveling Dixieland units perform there.

"But my personal favorite for Dixieland trumpet is Al Hirt," says Leps. "He's a wonder."

INTEREST generally in Dixieland was in a decline, the Owls admit, "until about three years ago. Then interest began to revive, and it is very much on the upgrade now."

They credit the success of banjo bands — "even at the ballpark" — as being a major factor in that reversal, at least in the San Francisco area.

"Most of us grew up with Dixieland music," says Combs of the Owls. "We like and play all kinds of music. But it is the Dixieland that we enjoy most. And which most audiences seem to like the best."

ADDS LEPS: "While we are not at all adverse to making a little money, we prefer to play the kind of jobswhere the band will have fun right along with the audience. The playing itself is so rewarding that the pay comes as a sort of added bonus."

So rewarding, in fact, that rarely does an Owl regular fail to put in an appearance for a program.

His fellow Owls tell of Jerry Jones showing up with a temperature of better than 100 degrees, a sick man, and playing through the evening, "feeling better and better as the night went on. It's pretty good therapy."

AND AS AN indication of the freewheeling approach of the Owls toward their music, they point out that they played Dixieland for a re-election rally for Gov. Ronald Reagan in 1970, and a few days later performed at a similar function for Reagan's Republican Party primary election challenger, Norton Simon.

Politicians, it seems, can recognize a good sound when they hear it. So can Marin County Fair Manager Marcelle McCoy. And consequently, fairgoers during the coming days are going to be in for a treat — Dixieland music in the style of old New Orleans, played by six Marin men who pursue their own separate professions most of the week, but who are joined as one in their dedication to and practice of traditional jazz.

THE INVISIBLE MEN OF THE FAR EAST

A TASTE OF FREEDOM: Memoirs of a Formosan Independence Leader, by Peng Ming-min; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 270 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

The "invisible men" of the Far East are the Formosans. In the past century they have been ignored, exploited, suppressed and snubbed by the Manchus, the Japanese, the Nationalist refugees, and at a distance by the Chinese Communists and the U.S.

Eighty-five per cent of the island's people of 14 million are native Formosans whose identity is buried under the fiction that Formosa is the Republic of China. Subjugated by Chiang Kai-shek's refugee army they have very little part in the shaping of their government or their future.

When the unseen speak, their words come as a shock. In this sense "A Taste of Freedom" is a shocking book. It is like hearing the little boy who pointed out that the emperor wasn't wearing any clothes. Unpleasant reality is intruded upon comfortable illusion.

Peng Ming-min, an international lawyer, educated in Japan, Canada and France, speaks for the Formosan Independence Movement through this memoir. He gives voice to the voiceless against great odds.

Formosa has no powerful friends in the international community. The Chinese Nationalists have suppressed the Formosans. The People's Republic of China considers Formosa an offshore province. The Japanese want trade with Mainland China and won't jeopardize that goal for Formosa, and Formosan independence as yet has no place in the United States' changing China policy which still needs the illusion of "two Chinas."

Formosan people are descendents of Southern Chinese frontiersmen who fled Fukien and Kwangtung provinces for the jungles of Formosa, in order to improve their impoverished lot. Well into the 19th Century Formosa was a disease-ridden pirates' den. The fading Manchu dynasty forbade immigration to Formosa until 1875, but could not halt the illegal flow of immigrants. The Japanese reign, beginning in 1895, was no gentler but was more efficient. Public health was vastly improved because bugs and bacteria do not distinguish between conqueror and conquered.

The Nationalists, driven from the Chinese Mainland in 1949, fled to Formosa, bringing corruption, monolithic government and the secret police with them. The rulers of Formosa have changed three times since 1895, but the condition of the native population as a second class citizenry has remained constant.

In "A Taste of Freedom," Peng, recently escaped from Taiwan and now teaching at the University of Michigan, makes visible the plight of the Formosan people.

Visibility won't bring much immediate help to the Formosans but it will help readers to understand a little known but very touchy facet of Far Eastern affairs with which our newly emerging China policy must cope.

Region Of Rainfall And Enormous Forests

THE HIDDEN NORTHWEST by Robert Cantwell; Lippincott, 285 pages, $8.50. Reviewed by John Yates.

The author has not written this book on a whim. The work is obviously a labor of love based upon his intuitive feeling for the area and most impressive research (10 pages of bibliography, 24 pages of notes and references), and hundreds of camping trips spanning many years. The result is a very readable and vital history of the Pacific Northwest.

Robert Cantwell has disseminated a vast amount of information into rare narrative form. The style is very much his own but akin to that of the almost legendary maritime chronicler, Samuel Eliot Morison.

Part One is history and describes the area as it appeared to early explorers, trappers and settlers. Rain and the great Columbia River and its tributaries are to the Northwest what the sun fertile soil are to California. Rain produced the enormous forests and the wealth and variety of its lumber — for instance the unique cedar which splits naturally into long straight boards. The cedar sheltered the Indian, and the great salmon from the rivers fed him.

Rain kept the Spaniards away, who, making landfall on the Manila run at the 48th parallel, always moved south in the face of poor visibility and low lying clouds. Drake touched the coast of the Olympic Peninsula after a long and arduous voyage, but he decided to take his chances with the Spaniards rather than face that wet climate. Thus the rain scared off explorers until a very recent era — the Spaniard Juan Perez in 1774 followed by the English adventurers John Meares and Capt. George Vancouver.

The author relates stories of the Hudson Bay Co. (its charter, like that of the East India Co., gave it all power of government, even to declare war, but not against a Christian government) and the early fur trading industry, the adventures of Lewis and Clark, and the daring and the horror of the Astoria expedition. The latter was made famous in Washington Irving's book "Astoria" with the vivid descriptions of the voyage of the Tonquin under Captain Thorne and the destruction of the vessel by Indians.

The strange Treaty of Joint Occupancy is discussed; the joint rule of Great Britain and the United States of Oregon Territory was an innovation in international dealings. Who really ruled the country — who would collect taxes and issue regulations?

Part Two brings us up to date from the settling of the territory when the first towns were built in the middle of a stand of lumber, owned by the lumber companies and named after the leading stockholder. There was a look of impermanence — rather like theatrical set of a typical midwestern town with a backdrop of a waste land of logged hills. The enormous fish canning and lumber industries of the modern States of Oregon and Washington are honestly assessed; the conclusions must be positive for they are the economic backbone of the region.

Park Two is also a look at the Northwest a century after Theodore Winthrop's death (the author of the adventure novel about the territory — "The Canoe and the Saddle". Cantwell retraces Winthrop's steps and finds the area still a place of enormous promise and still a naturalist's paradise in spite of the encroachment of modern life.

Robert Cantwell, a native of the Northwest and a descendant of the first American settler on Puget Sound, has used the region as a setting for two novels and as the subject of several magazine articles. He is a former literary editor of both Time and Newsweek and, since 1961, has been a senior editor of Sports Illustrated.

Ritual Murders In Marin County

THE PEDLOCK INHERITANCE by Stephen Longstreet; David McKay, 408 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

With a storyline about ritual murders on a Sausalito houseboat, veteran author Stephen Longstreet couldn't really miss.

There's a Black soldier, much decorated in Vietnam, who's AWOL from the Army, accused of the murders. A Marin County D.A. who's determined to finish off the case in a hurry to hush any scandal and perhaps improve his own political image. And the hero, Rufus Pedlock, the reluctant defense attorney, who has quite a few problems of his own.

What is the Pedlock inheritance?

". . . We have no law of primogeniture. . . but I've taken up ancestor worship, Rufus," says his father, the judge, in one of his many, long drawn-out speeches. "Why not pride in one's genes?"

The judge is about to be appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court and he lectures throughout the book on the problems of the courts, the responsibilities of the law and lawyers, and the general direction the country is taking. Social programs, minority dissenion, ethics. . . all fall within the relm of his ramblings.

". . . and used you as a dartboard for my painful thoughts," says the judge in one of his letters to his brother. Some times the reader is left to feel the pinholes, too.

However, Stephen Longstreet has great fun using San Francisco and Marin settings and half heartedly disguising the names and places.

There's a twist ending and yet no real solution to the emotional problems Rufus faces.

The book is diverting escape reading.

Patricia Highsmith Probes The Psyche

A DOG'S RANSOM by Patricia Highsmith; Knopf, 275 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Patricia Highsmith's psychological depth is such that her characters are rarely pleasant. In "A Dog's Ransom" she presents us with a chilling company of creeps that outdoes her previous casts in sheer noisomeness and despicability.

The scene is New York City and it all begins with the kidnapping — or rather a dognapping — of the pampered pet of a stuffy, well-to-do, middle-aged couple. Ransom is demanded, and paid, but the dog is not returned. Ransom is demanded again.

To most cops, it is a minor, routine crime. But one conscientious young patrolman, an outsider on the force, better educated that his fellow police, is attracted to the case. His involvement is to prove his undoing.

The theme that runs through the horrors that follow is the utter, selfishness of man. It is the ingredient that, exposed in the owners of the kidnapped dog, in the young patrolman's Mod girl friend, in others who become involved, shows them to be not greatly better — only different — from the twisted psychotic who started it all by stealing the dog.

The officer, deserted by those he had befriended, desperately lonesome, is left to face alone the consequences of his involvement, not the least of these being the enmity and callous brutality of his fellow police resentful of his being different.

It seems finally that the young cop is New York's only decent person. And then Miss Highsmith hits you with her hardest punch — a new doubt. Is even he the sane, humane person you had come to accept him as?

The picture "A Dog's Ransom" paints of urban American society is a depressing, terrifying one. Which is exactly what Miss Highsmith intended. She demonstrates once again why her reputation as a writer has scorec far above the usual confines of the mystery-suspense genre.

"For too many years, social scientists have paid scant attention to the broad problem of official secrecy. . . That vacuum ought to be filled. The academicians should form a partnership with journalists in providing the American citizenry with a reasoned and thoughtful critique of the excesses of clandestine bureaucracy." — R. Harris Smith in the preface to his "OSS."

Uncle Sam's World War II Spies

By DON KEOWN

We are supposed to learn, we are told, from history, But how do we learn when an arrogant, timid or tradition-bound bureaucracy withholds indefinitely from public scrutiny as secret or confidential the documents that constitute that history?

The question, of course, was at the heart of the flap over the Pentagon Papers, with Daniel Ellsberg, the New York Times and Sen. Mike Gravel teaming up to thwart a pointless and needless withholding of a historical record from the people.

R. Harris Smith encountered it, too, when he decided to write the history of the Office of Strategic Services, the World War II predecessor of today's controversial Central Intelligence Agency. The archives holding papers dealing with SOS activities of the 1940s would not be available to him, he was told.

So Smith, briefly a CIA agent himself, set out to write the story anyway, relying upon published materials, and more particularly upon the recollections of several hundred of the men and women who served with the OSS.

The result is "OSS: The Secret History of America's First Central Intelligence Agency," published by the University of California Press where Smith is now a lecturer in political science.

Despite the refusal of access to official papers, Smith has put together an amazingly detailed history of one of the most colorful war-time agencies ever assembled under the American or any other flag. His story makes all the more puzzling the refusal of the government, after this lapse of time, to open up the official archives, for plainly the OSS, despite intense factionalism, some bungling, some farfetched scheming and some failures, nevertheless enjoyed an amazing degree of success and served its country well.

The OSS reflected to a large extent the personality of Gen. William (Wild Bill) Donovan, the World War I hero and millionaire lawyer chosen by President Franklin D. Roosevelt to be its head. Donovan brought to the post a freewheeling approach, a weakness for administration and a strength for innovation, a willingness to run risks, and a tolerance for diverse political and social philosophies.

This last was to contribute mightily to the factionalism that sometimes threatened to split the agency between leftists, often the most effective field agents, and conservatives, to whom were entrusted major administrative responsibilities. Caught in between, of course, was a large group of men and women unaffected by their personal politics, bent only upon doing their jobs.

OSS: The Secret History of American First Central Intelligence Agency, by R. Harris Smith; University of California Press, 458 pages, $10.95.

Still, to a surprising degree, all three groups succeeded usually in burying their differences and working togethar to attain brilliant results. It was only later that the leftist-oriented OSS agents, who often had endured the greatest peril, were subjected to a disgraceful political persecution in which their former teammates sometimes joined.

The names found in the Smith book reflect the diversity of personnel in the OSS — Allen Dulles, William Bundy, Herbert Marcuse, Clark MacGregor, Arthur Goldberg, Ralph Bunche, David Bruce, John Birch, Ralph de Toledano, Arthur Schlesinger, Elmo Roper, Kermit Roosevelt, Henry Ringling North, Sterling Hayden, Serge Obolensky, Stewart Alsop, John Gardner, H. Stuart Hughes, August Heckscher and, yes, Julia Childs of TV cooking fame.

Even Msgr. Givanni Battista Montini, to become Pope Paul VI, played a key role with one OSS-inspired American espionage network.

Are there any lessons for us from Harris' history? A great many, one must conclude. But the chapter detailing our World War II and immediate post-war involvement in Vietnam would alone suffice to justify the writing of the book and its serious study.

Many will be surprised to learn that our early involvement there was generally on the side of Ho Chi Minh and his revolutionaries. OSS agents on the scene defied the antagonism of their French, British and Chinese allies to encourage and supply Ho and his revolutionary movement, against the Japanese and into the uncertain months that followed the surrender of Nipon,

The agent in charge in Hanoi recommended continued American support for Ho and his Viet Minh in his final report. But the decision, made in Washington, was to be a political, not an idealistic one: The United States would "respect French sovereignty in Indochina."

It is an eye-opener, however, to learn that the Americans on the scene and most involved, the OSS agents, generally favored the Ho movement and saw its leader as more nationalistic than communistic. Had their advice prevailed, how different the course of history might have been!

Similar insights can be gleaned from chapters dealing with Thailand, North Africa, the Mediterranean, France, the Balkans, China, and occupied Germany. In all these areas, the OSS agents not only matched wits with the enemy, but found themselves often at odds with their British and Russian allies, and faced with choices between rival underground claimants to their support (in Africa and France, the Gaullists or the Giraudists, in Yugoslavia, the Partisans or the Chetniks, in China, the nationalists or the communists). And then there were always the OSS's own internal struggles, usually subordinated to common goals, but sometimes erupting nastily.

The wider contribution "OSS" makes to contemporary understanding of international and national affairs is a better comprehension of the roots of today's Central Intelligence Agency, descendant of the OSS and termed by Smith "the most misunderstood bureaucracy of the American government."

True, today's CIA has changed greatly from the more idealistic, more individualistic, anti-imperialistic OSS. But, argues Smith, the influence of the OSS lingers in the CIA, although it diminishes year by year. Thus, as federal agencies dealing with international affairs go, the CIA remains relatively freethinking and liberal.

Progressives, in denouncing the CIA as a reactionary, militaristic, troublemaking body, have not always been accurate or fair. For instance, opposition to the Vietnam policy has existed within the CIA consistently and rather outspokenly.

More and more, however, the conservative viewpoint has come to prevail in executive positions. Thus the policy of counterinsurgency, and our adventures on behalf of repressive, status quo regimes.

More and more? Smith admits, the conservative, even reactionary, character of the schizophrenic CIA has come to dominance. And liberals, given little support by progressives outside the agency, have been thrown on the defensive.

"The CIA has not yet become the reactionary monster the New Left has created as its straw man," Smith writes. "But unless the Agency leadership makes a determined effort to renew the OSS passion for democratic dissent in yet another generation of American intelligence officers, the reality of CIA may soon coincide with its sinister image in the intellectual community"

Smith overlooks one very important question — whether there is any place in a democracy for a super-secret agency devoted to clandestine political manipulation and activism abroad during a time of peace, no matter how enlightened its motives. Nevertheless, Smith has written an important book that is not quick or easy reading, so crammed is it with names, agencies (and to an annoying and confusing degree, the initials thereof), factions, philosophies, ploys, plots and intrigues. But it is well worth the reading effort. And it does, indeed, shed light, not only upon the events of the 1940s, but upon our predicaments of today. It is unfortunate the federal bureacracy did not see fit to cooperate with a writer who has given the U.S. intelligence apparatus a fairer, more understanding treatment than it is accustomed to receiving from its analysts.

AMERICANS AND WORDS

"Words to the contemporary American," writes Alan Pryce-Jones in the London Times Literary Supplement, "are not supple, elusive things which conceal or divulge precise shades of meaning, they are not concepts to be loved and chosen, but, on the contrary, something like fill to a builder. They cover holes of thought; they offer a flat surface."

A SPECIAL interest book of considerable importance to its limited audience is "Weapons & Fighting Arts of the Indonesian Archipelago" by Donn F. Draeger, an expert in Asian martial arts and a co-author of the six-volume "Practical Karate" series.

Charles E. Tuttle Co., which published the karate series, is also the publisher of this new book which is profusely illustrated with black and white photographs and drawings, and which offers a very learned and technical discussion of Indonesian combative techniques from the bare-fisted (and bare-footed) to the use of spears, knives and the dreaded kris.

The price is $12.50.

NAVAL HISTORY buffs will be delighted with "The Battle of Trafalgar" by Paul Davies, published by Ballantine Books as a $1.95 paperback. Davies not only re-creates the decisive battle of October, 1805, but also sets the stage with the flavor and the figures of the era, and includes maps, prints, paintings and photographs as illustrations. Finally there is the kind of ship-by-ship record — captains, firepower, casualties, etc. — that serious students of this kind of thing find invaluable.

SWIMMING champion Don Schollander's "Deep Water" has been reprinted by Ballantine Books as a $1.25 paperback.

THE STORY of H. A. W. Tabor, Colorado's first bonanza king, is told in George F. Willison's "They Dug the Gold," now available as a $1.50 paperback in a Ballantine Comstock Edition.

Sleuths & Suspense

KISSING COVENS by Colin Watson; Putnam's, 189 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Mary Leydecker.

Colin Watson's latest book has a catchy title and an even more attractive dustjacket.

From there on, it gets more difficult to be complimentary.

If sex orgies involving extremely unattractive middleaged nuts are your thing, you'll love this book. Otherwise, a rather clever little plot, involving English "witches," gets into a pretty sticky wicket.

The scene is the small town of Flaxborough, where rumbles about localities forming a witches' cloven (a word much favored in crossword puzzles) bring the English press flocking.

There are also some television types in town, making a commercial for a detergent and who speak a jargon understandable only to themselves.

The plot gets pulled together somewhat when the fatally gored body of Bert Persimmon, missing local grocery store manager, is found in the river where the commercial filming is going on. The mystery is solved in the end, of course, but not before a couple meetings of the witches — who turn out to be much more interested in public sex than magic.

Watson has a reputation for humor and burlesque — but groans of "ugh" seem more likely than chuckles to greet this book.

AT LEFT, students at Christ's College in Christchurch, New Zealand, file into one of its Victorian buildings for their classes. In close promimity to the college are another famous school, the University of Canterbury with equally historic buildings, and the Canterbury Museum, world famous for its collection of historic artifacts from the Maori culture. Christchurch has been described as "more English than England itself." It is a city of parks, cathedral, beaches, gardens, horseracing courses, fine restaurants and even a River Avon. And it is the touring center from whence depart parties bound for some of New Zealand's most spectacular natural scenery and most picturesque towns. With the seasons reversed from those of North America, the prime tourist's months for New Zealand lie ahead.

A Very English City Outside England

Some cities can be described as "exotic," others as "exciting," and still others as "unique."

Christchurch, New Zealand's second largest city, is really none of these. And yet it is lovely and quaint, warm and friendly . . .and thoroughly charming.

Christchurch is frequently described as "the most English city outside of England," and this is true with its quiet, green countryside, the picturesque River Avon, winding through the center of the city between sloping, grassy banks fringed with English willows, and its Gothic cathedral, whose tall spire dominates almost every vantage point.

CHRISTCHURCH is also known as the "garden city" with its wide, straight avenues that in the suburbs are lined by the carefully tended gardens of neat homes — gardens unrivaled for beauty and tidiness anywhere in New Zealand and perhaps, in their profusion, anywhere in the world.

There are more than 1,000 acres of public reserves and parks within the city boundaries, including Hagley Park and its botanic gardens' 62 acres of neat flower beds, lovely trees from all parts of the world, native plants sweeping down to the Avon, and only a few minutes' walk from the center of the city.

Christchurch too is a university town. The historic buildings of the University of Canterbury have an old world charm with their impressive quadrangles and cloisters. The atomic scientist Lord Rutherford carried out his earliest experiments as a student here.

ACROSS THE road from the university is Canterbury Museum, where the emphasis is on the culture of the Maoris, New Zealand's earliest settlers who preceded the white man by hundreds of years.

Next door to the museum is Christ's College, its Victorian buildings grouped around a spacious quadrangle reminiscent of an English public school.

Not only is Christchurch interesting in its own right, but it's also the hub of all activity on the South Island. The city is the permanent American base for "Operation Deep Freeze," the UnitedStates' Antarctic expedition, and has become a home away from home for many American servicemen.

Christchurch International Airport, five miles from the city, is the only airport in the world which has a special departure and arrival counter for Antarctic travel.

LOCATED SEVEN miles inland, midway down the east coast of the South Island, Christchurch is the jumping off point for numerous tours and side trips of the scenic south whether you go by rail, bus, air or car. To the north, you skirt the Pacific coastline to the province of Marlborough at the top of the South Island; to the west, the highway penetrates the Southern Alps through five-mile-long Otira tunnel to the rugged and beautiful west coast; and south are the fertile Canterbury Plains, the province of Otago and the South Island's second largest city, Dunedin, which offers a little bit o' Scotland.

Some 100 miles west of Christchurch is the country's main alpine resort, the Hermitage Lodge at the foot of 12,349-foot Mount Cook, New Zealand's highest peak. There are regular flights to Mount Cook from Christchurch, including Sunday excursions when passengers lunch at the Hermitage and return to the city in the afternoon.

Immediately south of the city, the hills of Banks Peninsula rise to 3,000 feet and enclose deep-water harbors, including Lyttleton, busiest port in the South Island and the third busiest in New Zealand (after Auckland and Wellington). Lyttelton, connected to Christchurch by a mile-long tunnel, is the South Island terminal for the Union Steam Ship Co.'s inter-island auto-passenger steamer-express service, which operates an overnight service to Wellington six nights a week.

OPPORTUNITIES for recreation and leisure abound in Christchurch. Certainly you'll want to spend a few hours exploring the Botanic Gardens which are open daily from 8 a.m. until approximately 7 p.m. The gardens are famed for the many fine trees and the collection of plants from many parts of the world.

Also on the grounds are a fully equipped children's playground and a tea room.

Another popular pastime is canoeing on the Avon, a relaxing way to see the gardens and 500-acre Hagley Park. Canoes can be hired at the old boathouse near Christchurch Hospital.

OTHER POINTS of interest: Bowker Fountain, which plays varied and colored water patterns nightly; Christchurch Cathedral, from whose tower you can enjoy a panoramic view of the city; Millbrook Reserve for display of azaleas and rhododendrons; the Museum, which houses the collection of the provincial geologist Julius Von Haast, and a totem pole presented to the city by the state of Oregon in recognition of the city's hospitality to "Operation Deep Freeze."

The city also boasts three beautiful race courses — spacious Addington Raceway, home of a number of trotting clubs, Elizabeth Park and Riccarton Racecourse, home of flat and steeplechase racing.

There are a number of excellent beaches, all within seven miles of the city: New Brighton, North Beach, South Brighton, Summer and Waimairi. All offer good swimming.

THERE ALSO are numerous beaches at Lyttleton Harbor: Corsair Bay, a short walk from Lyttelton; Governor's Bay, at the head of Lyttelton Harbor with a tearoom and a delightful view of the harbor; Charteris Bay, five miles by launch from Lyttelton; and Diamond Harbor, a mile and a half by launch from Lyttelton.

For a pleasant picnic spot, try Ashley Gorge, 40 miles from Christchurch.

Also worth a visit is Akaroa, 51 miles south of Christchurch via Tai Tapu and Little River, one of the most picturesque towns in New Zealand. Akaroa Harbor was once a famous whaling base, and it was here that the British flag was first hoisted over the South Island. There's good accommodations in the town, which can be reached by car or rail.

For a memorable experience you might want to take the one-day tour of Waimakariri Gorge and a thrilling jet boat ride, which includes a back-country barbecue. Details on this and other activities may be obtained from the Government Tourist Office or the Canterbury Public Relations Office in Christchurch.

CHRISTCHURCH offers a wide range of accommodation including the Clarendon in the downtown shopping area overlooking the Avon; the United Service, also downtown; the White Heron Lodge and Russley — both adjacent to the airport; and Shirley Lodge, in a garden setting three miles from the city.

Christchurch also has some excellent restaurants of international standard. Some of the more popular are Flamingo, Malando, Berens and the Continental Room of the White Heron Lodge.

One of the most unusual restaurants in New Zealand is the Sign of the Takahe, a castle-like structure along the Summit Road in the Cashmere Hills, which commands a sweeping view of the city, the Canterbury Plains and the snow-capped Southern Alps. The richly ornamented ceiling, colorful murals and fine carvings in wood and stone make this one of the showplaces in Christchurch. It's open daily for morning and afternoon tea.

Boston: Gateway To New England

By RALPH HUBLEY

Located at the top of the busiest air traffic corridor in the United States, Boston, traditional gateway to New England, is rapidly becoming one of the chief aerial ports of the world with more than a million international arrivals and departures a year.

Airlines that have become disenchanted by tieups and delays at New York's JFK International Airport continue to schedule more overseas flights into and through Logan Airport, spread out just across the harbor from Boston.

In fact, many first-time visitors feel as if they are landing in the harbor waters as their plane begins to settle on the landfill extension of what was once called Noddle's Island. One of the chief features of the eighth busiest airport in the world, served by 27 airlines, is that it is so close to the city — two miles from downtown Boston.

THERE ARE FOUR ways to get to the city from the airport:

By taxi, which can cost nearly $4 to some hotels. A cab dispatcher in red jacket and cap is standing on the sidewalk outside the terminal doors to signal a taxi for you. It is proper to take the first cab in the waiting line rather than to get into one that has just discharged passengers.

By subway, if you don't have much luggage. The fare is 25 cents plus 20 cents for the connection bus that arrives at the terminal every 10 to 20 minutes.

By limousine, which stops at major hotels on 15 or 30 minute schedules, according to the time of day. The limousine costs only $1.50 and comes in two sizes — small buses and 10-passenger cars.

By rented car, if you're planning to take trips outside Boston. An automobile in Boston is a handicap since many streets are narrow and parking is limited.

THE 15-MINUTE trip can take 45 minutes if the tunnels jam up. This can happen during rush hours — 7:30 a.m.to 9 a.m. and 4:40 p.m. to 6 p.m. So scheduling arrivals from 9 a.m.

to 4 p.m. or after 6 p.m. will save time.

A longer route over the Mystic River Bridge sometimes is quicker during rush hours. But the bridge, too, can get tied up in heavy traffic.

Free rides between terminals with your luggage is provided from noon to 9 p.m. Look for a red-and-white vehicle with a "courtesy bus" sign. It runs every 15 minutes.

A sidewalk information booth has been set up as an experiment at North Terminal for overseas arrivals. If successful, other booths will be set up at other terminals.

INSIDE THE international terminal is the MASSPORT information booth, open from noon to 7 p.m. Nearby is Traveler's Aid.

There now is parking at Logan for approximately 8,000 automobiles. The five-level parking garage, recently completed, offers covered walkways into the terminals.

Frequent bus service is offered to New Hampshire and Rhode Island from the airport.

If the visitor doesn't arrive by plane, it is usually by automobile. The great era of passenger trains and ships is past, although there are notable attempts to revive it. The experimental TurboTrain continues to rock along at one-third its designed operating speed for most of the way from New York, but with nothing like the old glamour and excitement. The two Boston stops are at Back Bay and South Station.

HIGHWAYS, ON the other hand, sweep right into the center of the city from three directions.

Again the rush hours should be avoided by the visiting motorist. And remember that the combination red-and-yellow traffic light is the signal for pedestrians to walk. All vehicles should stop. Don't even gun your motor! More visitors are confused by this red and yellow walk light than by any other single factor, since there are also green walk signs at some intersections.

It's hard to imagine what old Bill Blackstone would say about modern Boston with its many new buildings still rising above the skyline. For he moved out when other settlers decided to join him on his isolated Shawmut Peninsula where he sought solitude about 10 years after the Pilgrims settled Plymouth. His land is now called the Boston Common. It was the first public park in the colonies and still offers a pleasant relief from the nearby state government activities, shopping hub-bub, and financial whirl.

ADJOINING THE Common is the Public Garden, beautifully landscaped with a pond in the middle where swan boats move gracefully over the still water. The other major green area is in the Back Bay section and is called the Fenway. Here city folk do a bit of gardening.

Boston is a city for walking. Besides enjoying the parks, I like to stroll along tree-lined Commonwealth Avenue or along the Charles River Basin. But it is also fun to look at the variety of shops running the length of Newbury and Boylston Streets, or to gaze at Bulfinch-erected townhouses on Beacon Hill.

A must for all visitors is the Freedom Trail, which begins at the Boston Common and leads to important historical landmarks. For an overall view of the city and suburbs, the Skywalk atop the Prudential Center is the place to go. If the top of the "Pru" is in the clouds, the 26th floor of the John Hancock Life Insurance Co. Building offers a free observation platform.

FROM THESE vantage points you can easily pick out MIT across the Charles in Cambridge, the gold dome of the state capitol atop Beacon Hill, Bunker Hill in Charlestown, the airport, the new government-center complex, the rising new John Hancock skyscraper, the Christian Science Center, Fenway Park (baseball), as well as the many other Boston landmarks.

Also not to be missed by the visitor are two world-famous museums — the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum. Both are in Back Bay's Fenway area. The noted Fogg Art Museum is located at Harvard University across the Charles River in Cambridge.

Many other museums and exhibits scattered around the city provide enjoyment for the whole family. They include such a variety as the Children's Museum, Science Museum, London Wax Museum, Antique Auto Museum (Brookline), the New England Aquarium, the Planetarium and the Mapparium.

Most of Boston's major attractions can be seen in two or three days — with the help of sight seeing bus tours.

VOICE OF THUNDER

I have stood upon a mountain
when lightning zagged the sky
and a sudden shot of thunder
broke with crash above my head.
I have seen a giant cedar fall
struck by the fire of heaven,
and wondered whether owlets died
hiding in their hollow home,
wondered if the chipmunks sleeping,
ever scurried out to search again?

Awakened from too-solid sleep
at burst of barrier above my roof,
alerted to awareness by a jet,
I have heard the bombs of Vietnam,
and the thundering silence of the dead!

ALTHOUGH MAN has come up with some ingenious and effective air conditioning systems, he has yet to outdo Nature. For fans, ducts, conduits, etc., Nature substitutes plants — and particularly trees. At left, a low-growing screen of magnolia trees not only serves as a temperature control for the occupants of this house, holding off the hottest rays of the sun, but also provides an attractive landscape grouping and serve a privacy purpose. Marinites are fortunate in that a wide variety of shade trees will thrive under our conditions. The magnolias alone come in a diversity of sizes and forms. Some of the newer members of the family such as the St. Mary's, the San Marino, the Majestic Beauty and the Samuel Sommer, all offspring of the ever-popular Southern Magnolia, are worth your special attention. Each has its own distingushing characteristic. Outside the magnolias, there are such favorites as the white birch, the alder, the evergreen pear and the evergreen elm (although in our climate, both of the latter will shed their foliage, regaining it, however, well before the return of warm weather). The elm is a naturally spreading tree that develops with special rapidity. Research, notes the California Assn. of Nurserymen, has shown that the combination of a shade tree above, a moist lawn below, can reduce the air temperature in-between as much as 20 degrees on a hot day. To say nothing of the air cleansing job and noise buffering chore the same tree will perform. Now that's real air conditioning!

A New Green Carpet For Your Yard

There's no better time than autumn for starting a new lawn, and this is particularly true in Marin County where the seed or younggrass can benefit mightily from the hoped-for fall rains interspersed with warm, sunny growing days.

Weather you are beginning with seed or sod, the first step toward a successful new lawn is a properly cultivated soilbed.

PLOWED OR rotary tilled soil should be free from competing vegetation (rake for the compost pile any old sod chunks that surface). Cultivation should extend at least two or three inches deep, with fertilizer mixed in during the operation (use rates recommended on the bag, usually about 10 pounds to each thousand square feet).

Level the surface, and if there is doubt about loose soil pockets water the lawn to settle the ground. Rake level, crumbling the surface again for good acceptance of seed. Soil left slightly lumpy rather than pulverized provides cracks into which seed can settle; and it better resists slaking, encouraging in-soak rather than run-off.

Sow seed of good quality. A few cents saved on seed is no bargain if it means headaches later; even a minor percentage of weeds or other unwanted components, can cause problems.

VERY FEW seed mixtures today are weedy, but some contain small amounts of agricultural seed, and inexpensive blends may be deliberately compounded with short-lived or coarser grasses. The label indicates if a mixture is 100 per cent of superior grasses such as blue grass, fine fescue, bentgrass and perennial ryegrass.

Of course there are always some dormant weed seeds in the soil, which become activated by cultivation. Autumn lawn seeding has the advantage of soon dooming the most prevalent weeds, those needing warm weather.

Any cool-weather weeds can be cleaned up later with a weed killer or by hand if, indeed, they are not squeezed out by the grass.

THE SOILBED preparation should be just as careful for sodding as for seeding.

Sod laid to hard, uncultivated soil has little chance of striking root and lasting any length of time.

Rocks In The Garden Can Be A Personal, Individual Thing

Many Californians inherit natural rock gardens, created by bulldozers as they cut into hillsides to accommodate houses.

Others who garden in totally flat spaces gather and haul in rocks from faraway places to create on their premises what gardeners have long coveted as a workshop to ply their trade — the rock garden.

WHETHER THE rock garden is natural, or otherwise, there are plenty of plants to use to achieve the desired effect. Primarily, the choices are dwarfish shrubs and popular perennials, but bulbs and even annual flowers play a role in rock gardening.

A rock garden is a personal thing, and as such, recommendations must be considered and plants chosen to suit the personality of the gardener. Yet, it would be inconceivable not to find succulents in a rock garden — no matter who the owner is.

Sedum, a varied clan of spreading succulents, some with lovely flowers, are desirable and worth shopping for. Echeveria, usually identified by a basal rosette from which foot-high flower spikes grow, is another choice succulent for rock garden use.

MANY PERENNIALS, especially those of a trailing or spreading nature, are reliable standbys in rock gardens. English lavender, with its aromatic spikes of lavender-blue, and Prostrate Rosemary, an aromatic herb to enjoy in the kitchen and the garden are two headliners to consider. Also; Ground Morning Glory, a trailing type; Italian Bellflower, Verbena, Pinks (Dianthus), Alyssum and herbs such as Catnip and Catmint.

In the springtime, bulb varieties provide color and interest.

In September, or as they are available locally, set out Narcissus varieties, Grapè Hyacinths and Freesias. Iris, especially the Dwarf Bearded Irises, and the native western species which grow naturally in rocky places, are unmatched in their proper setting.

SMALL SHRUBS also have their place.

In shaded rockeries, Azaleas are a delightful choice. There are many outstanding varieties in the versatile Juniper family to use in sunny locations.

If You Want To Build Your Own Greenhouse

Should your greenhouse be plastic or glass?

Will you build it yourself or have it done by contract?

Can you heat it from the house furnace or need a separate heater?

Will construction be the lean-to or free-standing type?

These and other questions are answered in "The Home Greenhouse," a correspondence course of six lessons offered by Pennsylvania State University. It deals with builjing sites and types of construction, heating and ventilation, building materials and sash greenhouses.

To get the course write to Box 5000, University Park, Pa., 16802, and ask for "Greenhouse." Include your check for $2.65 payable to Pennsylvania State University.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔A late-August, early-September planting priority is winter sweetpeas, so you can enjoy their bloom and fragrance at Christmas time.

✔As we move deeper into the late summer, watering becomes more and more important. Fuchsias, begonias, azaleas, camellias and rhododendrons in particular must have their moisture content maintained.

✔Crabgrass controls can be applied now. It's a year-around job.

✔Camellias can be fed in early September for the last time of the year.

✔Begin preparing your planting areas for winter-blooming annuals. Work manure or other organic materials into the soil to improve it.

THE GARDEN PAGES

A Perennial Problem With Falling Leaves

Even in Marin County where the seasonal change of climate is less severe by far than most places, falling leaves are still as certain as the arrival of September.

How you handle them depends a lot on you, your property, and the equipment you have available.

By far, the most popular method, short of hand raking, is to put an inexpensive blade attachment on your rotary power mower. The mower then acts as a leaf shredder with centrifugal force of the mower blades whisking the leaves into your catcher, or if you prefer, dropping the shreds back to the ground as a winter cover.

THERE ARE also power sweepers which use a rotating brush (much like street sweepers) to sweep whole leaves back into a catcher as the sweeper proceeds across the lawn. These are neat and efficient and particularly adaptable to medium sized lawns with few tight spots.

Since the leaves are left whole, it is well to choose a model with a large catcher to cut down on the number of times the catcher must be emptied.

Next on the list is the lawn vacuum . . . that's right, vacuum. This is usually a push-type unit with a wide nozzle on the front. The vacuum works much like your house vacuum. The nozzle sucks in every leaf it passes over with the blower forcing the leaves into very large catcher bags. The force of the blower tends to compress the leaves in the bag so it has to be emptied less often.

AN ADVANTAGE of the vacuum is its ability to suck leaves from under shrubs and tight corners. Certain models even have hose attachments to clean garages and workshops.

Just the opposite from the vacuum is the blower. These units are capable of creating winds of almost hurricane force to blow leaves across the lawn at each pass. Equipped with throttle controls to vary the wind velocity, the blower can pile leaves as neatly as you can with a hand rake.

If you're a gardener, you might team up one of the units above with a shredder that grinds and pulverizes leaves, sticks, stalks, trimmings, vines.

Mix in some manure and/or rock phosphate and you're making your own plant fertilizer.

THESE UNITS roll between garden rows or next to plant borders and flower beds to put your compost where its needed.

Use of any of the units listed here tends to create a good deal of dust since leaves are best handled when they are dry. The dust tends to rob the unit's engine of power and can even clog the blower housing air intake and carburetor to the point of engine failure. It's best to choose a leaf unit with a highly efficient air cleaner or filter.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

With Ingenuity, The Living Room Becomes Your Guest Room Too

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

No, you won't very often hear today's hostess say "join us in the guest room."

Chances are you've slept in someone's living room, perhaps even your own living room. You know the problem — how to make it as interesting as possible, yet provide sufficiently for that over-night sleeper.

IN THIS SMALLER first home, a young couple has furnished the living room to also serve as their guest room with a Simmons Hide-A-Bed as the key piece. But nothing is dead, and all these furnishings will be useful a few years from now when the couple move up into a larger second home. Inset shows the wall before the facelifing treatment was applied.

THE BEFORE and after shown at right is unusual in that one crazy, mixed-up wall has been given a new face, and the result is pleasant and architectural with almost the feeling of Santa Fe or Taos, N.M., in the heart of a city.

The window wall now has a new skin of stucco. It was sprayed on after the residents, a young couple, built a frame about eight inches away from the existing wall. The old baseboard heater no longer functioned and an ugly pipe filled one corner.

There was also an air conditioner that did work, so a dummy panel was designed for easy removal during warm summer months.

THE WOOD floors were a saving grace and merely required refinishing. So the decision was made to select a low-key area rug, one with carved design, rather than busy pattern or colorations. Best of all it was a size that would move well to a second, larger home when the day arrived for such expansion.

The bride had a collection of miniature paintings in mix-match frames, so as interim decorating she tacked them to the newly painted wall in a horizontal arrangement. Later acquisitions could be used at higher levels.

The major piece of upholstery had to be a sleep-type sofa, since there really wasn't any other space for a bed. So the young marrieds chose a handsome, soft-edge style by Simmons in an awning-striped fabric that features browns and blacks.

PLANTS WERE a big part of these youngsters lives, yet their walk-up offered no terrace or area for a garden. So the new window wells, the floor near the windows and a few ceiling-hung baskets hold a nice variety of soft greenery.

A larger tree-size plant is used near the hall door, but occassionally is rotated to the window for necessary daylight. Bed pillows are stored in the old trunk that is used as a coffee table and electric blankets and bright-patterned bed linens make this a comfortable switchover from living room to guest room.

August Is The Time To Think Of Air Conditioning — For '73

BY DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

Right now in August, when the weather can be its hottest and muggiest, when you think you can't take another sleepless night: that's when converts to home air conditioning are made.

If you are at that stage, don't rush out and buy the first thing you see. Take time first to bone up on the hows and whats of air conditioning: How big an air conditioner do I need? What's the best type for my home? How can I be sure my electric wiring will supply enough current?

A NEW BOOKLET of valuable tips on room air-conditioning by Emerson gives concise, understandable answers to these and many other questions.

Basic to your decision, says Leo Hahn, vice president and general manager of Emerson's Quiet Kool division, is the size area which is to be cooled, what time of day the cooling is most needed, the type of window in which the unit will be installed, and the voltage and amperage of the circuit which will provide power.

Additionally, you must decide what options are important to your individual situation.

For example, Hahn noted, one might elect to purchase a high-efficiency unit that carries a slightly higher price tag but provides long-range savings on electric bills. Some units have features that move the air more efficiently. And there are numerous design options.

THE BOOKLET, discussing what to look for in an air conditioner, notes room coolers are sized in terms of BUT (British Thermal Unit-the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit), volts and amperes. The BTU figure indicates the cooling capacity, voltage describes the circuit rating needed, and amperage tells you how much current will be required.

Where temperatures do not usually exceed 95 degrees, as is the case in Marin, an air conditioner rated at 6,000 BTU per hour, for example, will cool a room with 100 to 180 square feet of floor space. Where temperatures exceed 95 degrees, but do not go over 100, one rated about 7,500 BTU per hour is required to cool the same area.

Voltage refers to the electrical pressure of the circuit to which the conditioner will be connected. Typically, a house or apartment building will have a circuit of 230 volts that separates into two 115-volt branches.

An air conditioner of a stated voltage can be used only in a

SYLVESTER'S HIDEAWAY

IT WOULD BE hard to estimate the total number of cats in these United States. Let us just say there are a lot. And they are a haughty, independent creature, expecting to be catered to and pampered. Steve Ellingson's Cat Cabin is a step in that direction. There are both side and front entrances, a quiet bedroom for sleeping and even a balcony from which to watch the human world go by. It's an easy project with the help of Ellingson's full-size pattern. For it, send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Cat Cabin Pattern 442. Ellingson also has doghouse patterns — No. 299, for large pooches, No. 136 for small, at $1 and 50 cents respectively, and a cat or dog bed pattern, No. 170, for 50 cents.

Handyman's Pages

The Eskimo Kayak Built Of Plywood

For a lightweight, easily propelled watercraft, the Eskimo's kayak has proven difficult to improve upon.

David Jordan and Edwin Monk, however, have made certain adjustments to make the dependable work boat of the Eskimo suited to our recreation purposes.

One big revision: Whereas the Eskimo builds his kayak of whale bone and walrus hide, Jordan and Monk call for the far more readily available plywood.

So they call their craft the "plyak."

The plan is part of a fleet of plywood boats designed for the American Fir Plywood Assn. of Tacoma, Wash. The plyak is 11 feet three inches long, has a 30-inch beam and weighs approximately 40 pounds.

The estimate is that it can be built in 40 man hours of labor at a cost of about $100.

When launched, it makes an excellent one-man boat with possibly one child to "crew."

The directions include step-by-step illustrations, as well as diagrams and construction notes, plus instructions on how to choose plywood for marine use, so that you can't go wrong.

For the pattern, send 25 cents to American Plywood Assn., 1119 A St., Tacoma, Wash., 98401. Ask for Plyak Plan 95.

THIS PLYAK built by a home handyman differs from the Eskimo's trusty kayak not so much in design as it does in materials. The whale bone and walrus skin of the Eskimo have been replaced with the more easily available exterior grade fir plywood. The pattern cost 25 cents.

Be Ready For Heat When August '73 Rolls Around

circuit that supplies that voltage.

AMPERAGE REFERS to current that the unit will consume. A house may be wired for 60 to 100 amps, divided into branch circuits, usually of 15 amps each. A 7.5 amp air conditioner may be plugged into a 15-amp branch circuit if other equipment on the line draws no more than 7.5 amps. Otherwise the conditioner may require a separate branch circuit.

Concerning the size conditioner to buy, the booklet notes there are several methods for determining the proper size, taking into consideration such factors as size of the room, heat from the sun, effects of exposures, proximity to roof, and the time of day that cooling is most needed. A bedroom would have one requirement, a living room another.

Dealers have charts you may use as a guideline. To use them you must know the measurements of the room, and determine whether conditions will be extra hot-such as the top floor of a house with an uninsulated roof, or one where windows face south or west, or if there are large room openings, or where there are many summer days over 95 degrees.

For a room where cooling is needed primarily at night, the Emerson chart has a column marked bedroom. Other situations call for normal cooling capacity.

FOR BEST RESULTS, the booklet recommends, select a conditioner having cooling capacity rating as close as possible to the estimated load, determined by consulting the chart. If your requirement is between two BTU designations - for example, if the chart says you need 13,000 BTU and units of 12,000 and 14,000 are the only ones available - it is advisible to choose the unit with the smaller cooling capacity.

An oversized unit, operating intermittently, is less desirable than a slightly undersized unit that would operate almost continuously.

You get better dehumidification with a smaller unit that is running most of the time than with a big unit that's loafing half the time.

ANOTHER TIP worth considering: Your home layout may lend itself to an alternate arrangement - a pair of smaller units strategically located in the areas where maximum cooling is desired - rather than one large model. This often is a practical solution to a long, narrow room or an L-shaped living room and dinette combination, or a floor plan that requires the cooled air to run around corners.

Although, ideally, central air conditioning gives the finest whole-house cooling, there often is a way to achieve a reasonable substitute by using a large window unit, the warm air distribution equipment already in your house and some ingenuity.

The booklet outlines the method:

"A 24,000-or 28,000-BTU model will take care of most homes. When used with your warm-air heating ducts and furnace fan, you can improvise."

AND, IF YOU decide whole-house air conditioning is really for you, as more and more people do these days, the time to do something about it is now.

Ask your dealer to survey your home now, when it is warm, but let him do the installation next winter in his slow season. Come next summer you'll be ready.
